HOLLYWOOD OBSERVATIONS

Dr. Leo The Lion has discovered a new cure for allergy. We have always been allergic to war pictures in any form whatsoever. We're cured. Dr. Leo gave us one hour and fifty-eight minutes of "Battleground" and we're completely normal again. (P.S.: To exhibitors whose patrons suffered from the same ailment, we prescribe this treatment but suggest you make sure everyone within possible drawing range be told about it . . . and in no uncertain tones.) Professional ethics—(which we've acquired since becoming involved in the operation of the Variety Clubs-Will Rogers Hospital)—prompts us to add that Prof. Dore Schary assisted in the successful treatment along with some terrific cast performances.

Standard greeting from a great many indie producers goes something like this: "Hy're Chick, nice seeing you again. Say, do you know how that exhibitor financing outfit is going to function . . .?"

We don't know whether that NEFC idea will prove as successful and as helpful to independent production as many of its sponsors and subscribers contend, but we do know it has given independent production a shot in the arm even before they know how, why, when or where the company will operate.

Certainly we, along with a lot of other people, would like to see the NEFC functioning with as little delay as possible. There are plenty of good picture properties out here and an over-abundance of talent to convert those properties into good motion pictures.

From our Jock MacGregor in London came the following cable the morning after the London Variety Club Tent teed off its first activity:

"Variety show an enormous success . . . star spangled bill enthralled packed house . . . a great send-off for London Tent. . . ."

Bob O'Donnell flew over for this inaugural event and after a quickie tour of the continent, returns to London on Oct. 20th for the official induction of the new Tent.

We were all set to make this trip along with Bob but they double-crossed me over there and switched the dates and that left me hanging out on a limb out here in Hollywood where they have as many London fogs (or smogs) as they do in London itself.

STR and this writer extend sincere greetings to the new British Variety Club Tent and wish them great success in their very worthy charitable activity.

Speaking of the Clubs reminds us that come October, 23rd to the 27th, the Mid-Year Conference opens in New York with the entire group making a personal inspection trip to the Hospital at Saranac Lake, followed by a cocktail party and buffet supper at Fred Schwartz's Timberdoodle Lodge at Lake Placid. The party then returns to New York's Hotel Astor where two days of business sessions get under way climaxed by the Induction Banquet of the New York Variety Club Tent.

The three newest tents will be represented for the first time when Milwaukee, Denver and London representatives answer to the roll call.

The New York host tent has set up a most impressive program of entertainment for the visiting Barkers.

There hasn't been too much time for picture-viewing on this year's trip but we did take the day off to attend the "Task Force" party aboard the USS Valley Forge and under not too favorable conditions saw the picture aboard ship. The accuracy of the technical phases amazed not only us but most of the officers of the monster aircraft carrier itself.

There must be a special ability to adhere to technical detail and still retain good story telling and for this, if for no other reason, Warners deserve great credit. In addition to which they have as fine a picture as you'd want to see and play.

Our own secret agents, with the aid of the Hollywood grapevine, tell us that Eddie Golden's picture now shooting is one of the tops of the year. Eddie, being so darn modest (?) won't talk, but it took him only twenty-five minutes to convince us that the grapevine was hitting on all cylinders.

Then there is "The Cariboo Trail," number three on Nat Holt's hit parade, and if the inside rumors are reasonably accurate, it will make three in a row for Nat. It really couldn't happen to a nicer guy nor one with the ability to view all pictures, in planning or in production, through the box-office window with which Nat is so very familiar and which, in this writer's opinion, qualifies him to know a lot more about what the public wants than those who haven't found out there are people and places outside of the high walls of . . . you guessed it . . . Hollywood.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

Exhibition

The July box-office didn't wilt with the heat this year if the federal admission tax report covering that month means anything. Tax collections for the month of August, which reflect July business, were $34,326,269 compared to $28,661,712 for June and $32,121,295 for July last year.

The optimism which usually accompanies good business also seemed to be reflected in other aspects of exhibition. A report from the nation indicates that clearance and run difficulties are leveling off into an orderly reform movement with emphasis being laid by exhibitors more on cutting down clearance than on seeking the other exhibitor's run.

And in the same optimistic mood, exhibitors were waiting to see what the results would be of the first theatre television showings of the world series. Indications are that more exhibitors than the two at present—Si Fabian and Sam Pinanski—would be using large-screen video for this purpose, provided they could get the equipment. The Times and the Roslyn in Baltimore had to give up the idea because they couldn't get equipment and the same may affect the plans of the Imperial in Toronto. Meanwhile Fabian fixed a $1.20 admission, tax included, for each game, along with a double feature, and Pinanski fixed admissions, tax included, at $1.25 and $1.80 for each game plus a double feature—which means about six hours of show in both houses, but people who sit in bleachers of ball parks should have posteriors fit to withstand such a siege of recreation.

In upstate Pennsylvania the polio scare was so bad this week that one house's business dropped to $9, but elsewhere polio seemed to be less of a threat than it has been.

In Minneapolis President Harry B. French, with humor intentional or unintentional, said the Paramount-affiliated Minnesota Amusement Company would apply the "theatre-by-theatre" formula in selling the houses, it must dispose of under the consent decree. He's ready to sell the Lyric at Madison, S. D., now. In Phoenix the Naces, father and son, are leaving the Paramount-Nace Theatres on Oct. 1 as a consent decree split-up there will give nine houses and two drive-ins to Paramount and leave the Harry L. Nace Theatres with about 20 houses, plus a financial interest in the two drive-ins Paramount takes over.

Distribution

Print increases ranging from 15 to 35 per cent on four forthcoming features— "Oh, You Beautiful Doll," "Fighting Men of the Plains," "Everybody Does It," and "The Prince of Foxes"—were announced by 20th Century-Fox this week.

Meanwhile Columbia was pointing out that "Jolson Sings Again" would not be included in the pictures offered in "Columbia's Playdate and Billing Drive in Honor of Division Managers," and Vog Films was having censor trouble over its foreign import, "White Legs," which the New York censors banned in its entirety after the Customs officials passed it with a brief cut. In New Orleans the booking of "Lost Boundaries" at the Saenger was apparently being upheld until the house could judge how audiences in Dallas took the picture, and from Hollywood came word Filmakers, Inc., had signed a distribution deal with RKO for three, with the first to be "Nice Girl."

Litigation

Federal Judge John Knight of Buffalo this week ruled against the Dipson theatre group in its anti-trust suit against seven majors and the Buffalo and Bison theatres for damages which with court costs and lawyers' fees would have reached close to $6,000,000 had they been granted. Judge Knight found that Dipson had not proved conspiracy, nor had it established damages. The seven majors—Warner Bros., 20th-Fox, RKO, Loew's (MGM), Universal, United Artists, Paramount—apparently were happy folks. The Motion Picture Association thought so much of the victory, which is still subject to appeal, that its "information department" advised the trade press of a conference at which Lawyer Ed Raftery explained the nature of the case.

In Charlotte, H. B. Meiselman announced he would appeal Federal Judge Wilson A. Warlick's refusal to grant him a preliminary injunction against Warner Bros., RKO, Paramount, United Artists, Universal, 20th Century-Fox, Columbia and the Wilby-Kincey circuit. Judge Warlick found "that none of the defendants has agreed, contracted, combined or conspired with any of the other defendants." In Chicago the South Bend Auto-Drive-In suit for better clearance got under way and in Hollywood Universal was the winner in the suit brought against it by Marston Pictures over the distibution of "Casbah."

General

The U. S. Commerce Department this week became a good public relations counsel for the motion picture industry when it showed that motion pictures were still your best buy. Department figures show that while the cost of groceries went up 46.6, of clothes, 28.4 and of rents, 11.4, the cost of movies went up only 10.5—a fact which exhibitors might hammer home.

Meanwhile the Federal Communications Commission began its hearings on color television and the proposed assignment of 42 channels in the ultra-high band. Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the Theatre Owners of America are pressing for theatre video channels.

In Philadelphia the International-Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes won a 10-cent-an-hour increase in back pay with future rises up to 17½ cents for cashiers, doormen, ushers, etc. In New York Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild will take a strike vote next week on the home office contract question.

From Hollywood Cinecolor announced that after Nov. 1 all its release prints would be on non-inflammable stock, which would run the cost to the user up .0023 a foot.

Dead: Frank Rogers, 74, president of Florida State Theatres, of a heart attack. He had been ill for three years.

Cut Rate?

Columbus, Ohio, theatres are included in the citywide fire inspection program aimed at reduction in fire insurance rates, it was revealed this week. Completion of the inspection procedure early next year and enactment of a new building code will end a year-long drive by city officials. Chief Building Inspector John Stith said the new code, allowing inspection of all types of buildings, will be ready for city council action by Oct. 31.

U. S. Court Rules Against Dipson

Federal Judge John Knight of Buffalo Tuesday dismissed the anti-trust suit filed by the Dipson theatre interests against seven major distributors, the Buffalo and Bison Theatre Companies and Buffalo Theatres General Manager Vincent McFaul in a decision which may become highly important in such actions.

Judge Knight ruled that the plaintiffs—Dipson's Century Theatres, Inc., and Dipson Theatres, Inc.—had failed to show that the defendants had violated the anti-trust act and that they had failed to prove a monetary loss which entitled them to damages.

Dipson had sued for $1,626,531, which when trebled and added to court and counsel costs, would have neared $6,000,000.

The suit involved a claimed loss to Dipson on the grounds that he could not get product because of alleged conspiracy among the exhibitor and distributor defendants, the latter of whom were Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Warner Bros., Loew's (MGM), Universal and United Artists. Suit against Columbia, originally named, was dismissed earlier by Judge Knight who remarked that Columbia had sold Dipson in one area and that evidence showed Dipson had not bought Columbia pictures in another. Theatres involved were Dipson's Century and Gaiety in Buffalo, the Riviera in North Tonawanda and two houses in Lackawanna.

Dipson attorneys late this week could not say whether an appeal would be taken.

'A'-Bomb Country Shown In Current Telenews?

Telenews hopped into the arena this week with a reel that contains scenes of what might be the Russian center of atomic production in Soviet Armenia as well as scenes showing the furious search for minerals and mining which the Russians are conducting in their mountain ranges. The scenes, made from material which the reel editors said had been gathered quietly for some time, gains timeliness with the recent news stories about Russia and the atom bomb.

Move to Trim Waste

After a special meeting of MGM top executives, producers and Studio Chiefs Louis B. Mayer and Dore Schary, overhauling of the entire studio operation was ordered in an effort to trim waste.

The move was said to be intended to offset the anticipated effect of British devaluation and to enable the studio to make quality pictures at costs which would permit a profit from the domestic market.

Unite for Theatre Video Is Fabian Plea at Tesma Meet

A call to the motion picture industry to unite in its request that the Federal Communications Commission grant frequencies for theatre video use was made this week before the joint convention of the Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers' Association and the Theatre Equipment Dealers Association in Chicago by Fabian Theatres President Si Fabian.

Sees Color

Fabian was one of two exhibitor representatives to speak at the meeting in the Stevens Hotel at Chicago. The other was Theatre Owners of America Executive Director Gael Sullivan who predicted that "color television will not only come, (but) it will come with a commercial and public approval impact that has never before been equalled by any other technological development in the 20th century."

In his address which pleaded for a united theatre front, Fabian declared that he thought there should be improvements made in theatre television equipment and also touched upon color.

"I am convinced that better quality pictures are needed for the future and that they will come as they did in motion picture film. I am absolutely convinced that theatre television in color must be developed. . . I do not know how long it will take to bring in color theatre television but I feel that the engineering laboratories of RCA and similar institutions should devote at least as much time to produce color theatre television equipment as they do for color television broadcasting equipment. Indeed, the economic factor as well as the physical conversion difficulties for broadcasters should render theatre television a more feasible market for color television than broadcasting. . . The experience of exhibitors with color motion picture film underscores their desire for early color theatre television."

Don't Wait

Fabian added that despite his emphasis on color, exhibitors could not afford to wait for it but should get into theatre video now.

The joint convention appeared to be the largest Tesma and Teda have held to date. Tesma elected the following officers:

President Oscar Neu; Vice-President W. A. Gedris; Secretary-Treasurer Roy Boomer. Directors are: L. W. Davee, H. B. Engel, L. E. Bones, W. D. Matthews, V. J. Nolan, J. F. O'Brien, H. H. Strong, E. J. Vallen, E. Wagner, F. J. Wenzel, C. S. Ahscraft.

Teda elected Ray G. Colvin as executive director, a post which replaces that of the president, with Tom Shearer as board chairman, which replaces the vice-presidency. The executive committee consists of F. A. Van Husan, Joe Hornstein, W. E. Carrell, John P. Filbert, Ray Busler, Jack L. Ricke, H. J. Ringold, J. Eldon Peek, Ernie Forbes, Henry Sorenson.

U. S. Clearance and Run Races Settle Down to Reform Moves

The clearance and run race which followed the first ruling of the U. S. Supreme Court on trade practices in the Government anti-trust suit seems to have settled into a more orderly movement toward reform in various sections, a survey of exchange centers by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW indicated this week.

The principal change in the settlement again reaffirms that exhibitors are no longer eager to snatch a run away from a rival house, even if it is a circuit operation, and that the independent exhibitor is not too eager to batter another independent exhibitor for position. This, however, is a general picture and does not apply to congested areas such as the City of New York.

Active

Everywhere, however, the move to cut clearances from their one-time high—a move which has been going on even before the Supreme Court ruling in the anti-trust suit—remains active. Also, there is a trend toward seeking a re-zoning of areas so that theatres which are so far away from each other that the distance between them must be traveled by bus, automobile or jet plane, are no longer considered competitive and entitled to clearance and run protection. This move has made marked progress in the past year, the exchange centers report.

At the moment the average exhibitor in the majority of centers does not seem to want a better run unless he has a better house than his rival. But he does want to wait considerably less time before he gets a picture. His main argument is that his competitor does not need his present protection, that the distributor will benefit by shorter clearances as well as the complaining exhibitor, and that he is entitled to a picture while he can still benefit from its national and key run exploitation.

No Exchange Squawk

Actually the only opposition to reducing clearances seems to come from the house which runs ahead of the complaining exhibitor. Apparently the average exchange is not opposed to shortening clearances or re-zoning, excepting where the exchange has a theatre affiliate which might be affected, or lives in fear of a powerful independent circuit which might decide not to buy any product from an exchange which shortened its clearance or regrouped some of its houses so that opposition houses could play day-and-date.

The unofficial exchange opinion seems to be that the faster a picture is played off, the faster the exchange gets its money back. The only snag to date has been that re-zoning seems to have brought about day-and-date runs in some instances which cause print shortages. Apparently no exchange wants to increase its print inventory, because that means added cost.

Actually exhibitors in some instances have found that a better run often means less profit. A notable example of this is the Atlantic coast area in New Jersey. Because these locations are more or less isolated from New York, ex-

World Series Appeals to Theatres But Equipment Shortage Is Snag

Lack of sufficient theatre large-screen television equipment—apparently both Paramount and RCA—is the reason why not more theatres are taking advantage of the opportunity to bring the world series to their patrons, SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW learned this week.

As STR went to press, it appeared that the Fabian Fox in Brooklyn and the American Theatres Pilgrim in Boston would be the only theatres to have the entire series, though it was possible that a last-minute deal might bring Paramount into the picture with the New York Paramount, the Balaban and Katz Chicago, and the Famous Players Canadian Imperial, Toronto.

The shortage of theatre television equipment, however, was threatening to block the Imperial at Toronto and had definitely blocked the plans of the Times and the Roslyn, both in Baltimore, to bring in the baseball classic.

The two Baltimore houses definitely attributed their failure to bring in the entire series over television to the fact that they could not get large-screen television equipment. Even the ATC's Pilgrim in Boston is going to have to use an experimental RCA instantaneous model, which is to be replaced later by a permanent RCA model.

Canada Seeks

In Toronto, reports springing from usually reliable sources said that Famous Players Canadian, in which Paramount owns stock, had arrangements "practically completed" to show the series and presumably would rush the event, recorded on film, to its other theatres in the province of Ontario.

The reports did not say whether the Imperial would pick up its own image from Buffalo, whose television station is said to be easily visible in Toronto and do its own film recording, or whether it would depend on film recordings made by the New York Paramount and rushed to it by air. A remark attributed to Famous Players President J. J. Fitzgibbons that "No one can stop us taking something out of the air," had the industry guessing.

However, this deal reportedly failed when equipment was uncertain. Offices of Mutual Broadcasting Company, which controls the event, said that they had discussed a deal covering New York, Chicago and Toronto with Paramount but that they had heard no further about it and that unless closed this week, there would be no deal.

World Series Plus Duals For $1.20, $1.25, $1.80

Large-screen instantaneous telecasts of the World Series plus a double feature will be offered for $1.20 advanced admission by the Fox in Brooklyn, Fabian Theatres announced this week while American Theatres announced its Boston Pilgrim would also offer duals with the series for advanced admissions of $1.25 and $1.80. All prices include taxes and neither house will offer reserved seats, but the Pilgrim Tuesday opened an advance sale for the first four games of the series. The Fabian Fox will return to regular admissions daily after the telecasts end and will offer rain checks if rain or fog prevents telecasts.

Under-Skyers Help Under-Roofers By Building Audiences—Braunagle

Drive-ins develop movie-going habits and new movie patrons who can be lured into the under-roofers during the winter season, if the brick-and-mortar houses adopt some of the family trade appeal policies indulged in by the outdoorers, Jack Braunagle declared last week.

Speaking in Columbus, Braunagle, who is general manager of the Commonwealth Drive-in Corporation of Kansas City, Mo., suggested that a family trade appeal could be procured by installing nurseries, play rooms, laundry service, free rides for the kids and adequate parking space.

Repeating previous remarks, he said that drive-ins should be run by experienced exhibitors, such as those who had under-roof background. He foresaw 5,000 under-skyers by 1950 doing a gross of $120 million.

3rd Quarter Finds 256 Films On Market, 223 in Backlog

The end of this year's third quarter and the beginning of the fall season found distributors with 256 films in release or four more than they had on the market last year at the same time, according to the Booking Guide of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW.

Other facts shown by the Booking Guide are: Pictures in production or completed but unreleased at the end of this quarter amounted to 223 compared to the 247 held in inventory as of Sept. 30, 1948.

The number of pictures put into production since Jan. 1, 1949, reached 215, which is seven per cent off the pace of last year when 230 had gone before the cameras by this time. The breakdown by companies follows:

Allied—1949: Released 6, Unreleased 2, Started 1; 1948: Released 6, Unreleased 3, Started 4.

Columbia—1949: Released 34, Unreleased 37, Started 31; 1948: Released 30, Unreleased 38, Started 34.

Eagle Lion—1949: Released 30, Unreleased 16, Started 3; 1948: Released 25, Unreleased 22, Started 18.

MGM—1949: Released 25, Unreleased 28, Started 28; 1948: Released 18, Unreleased 20, Started 13.

Monogram—1949: Released 18, Unreleased 3, Started 10; 1948: Released 19, Unreleased 9, Started 18.

Paramount—1949: Released 15, Unreleased 21, Started 16; 1948: Released 20, Unreleased 22, Started 16.

RKO—1949: Released 26, Unreleased 18, Started 15; 1948: Released 16, Unreleased 24, Started 12.

Republic—1949: Released 18, Unreleased 12, Started 17; 1948: Released 23, Unreleased 10, Started 19.

Twentieth Century-Fox—1949: Released 23, Unreleased 24, Started 20; 1948: Released 33, Unreleased 28, Started 27.

United Artists—1949: Released 13, Unreleased 19, Started 12; 1948: Released 18, Unreleased 16, Started 11.

Universal-International—1949: Released 23, Unreleased 25, Started 25; 1948: Released 26, Unreleased 25, Started 17.

Warner Bros.—1949: Released 25, Unreleased 18, Started 13; 1948: Released 18, Unreleased 30, Started 26.

Canadian Houses Set New Records

Canadian theatres set new gross and attendance records in 1948, according to a government statistical report of the film industry released this week.

The report revealed that 222,307,140 customers paid $83,241,506, of which $13,622,459 went for amusement taxation. The resultant net gross of $69,619,047 shattered the previous mark, set in 1947, by $7,340,474. The 1947 attendance high was topped by some 1,600,000 and the gross-with-tax record of the same year was bettered by more than $4,000,000.

The revelations indicate that price scales were higher in 1948. In fact, some of the Dominion's 10 provinces showed higher net grosses in spite of reduced attendance. This was true in Ontario, the leader with $29,504,602 net gross on 92,787,781 admissions, where the figures in 1947 had been $26,483,044 and 93,137,140 tickets. It was true also in British Columbia, the third province, and in Manitoba and Nova Scotia. The B. C. gross was $7,532,221 for 23,572,587 admissions, compared with $7,055,066 for 24,062,010 admissions a year earlier. In the second-placing Province of Quebec, however, attendance jumped from 48,864,876 to 51,558,330, carrying gross up from $13,919,917 to $16,253,353.

The number of film theatres in the Dominion, not including drive-ins, legitimate houses or itinerant shows, increased by 224. Ontario went up 36 to 508, Quebec 39 to 358 and B. C. 3 to 175.

Broidy Budgets 3 Million for 16

In anticipation of what he thinks will be the heaviest spurt in production within the history of his company, Monogram Allied Artists President Steve Broidy this week earmarked a $3,000,000 fund to be spent on 16 pictures which he said would go before the cameras during the last quarter of 1949.

"I feel that we are heading into the most optimistic period since the wartime market," Broidy stated. "Every producer on the Monogram roster will swing into activity and not only will the full capacity of Monogram stages be utilized, but additional space off the lot will be rented. The 16 pictures which will face the cameras include five westerns to be made on the company's Newhall ranch and at other locations.

Off Again, On Again

Cinema Circuit this week was reported to have relinquished the Albermarle Theatre in Brooklyn to Century Theatres. The house had originally been turned over to Cinema by Century and the switch was reported to be based over a product situation.

Not So Bad

July box-office receipts zoomed almost $6,000,000 over the June returns, the Treasury Department report on the federal admission tax revealed in Washington, D. C., this week.

Collections for the month of August, which reflect the box-office business for July were $34,326,269 as compared with $28,661,712 for the collections which reflect the month of June. They were also slightly above the $34,141,295 collected for the July box-office returns last year.

ITO Will Seek Myers' Opinion On Kids-for-Free

Members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio (Allied) were this week scheduled to present at least one of their debatable problems—that of free admission for children at drive-ins—to the national Allied Convention when it meets in Minneapolis Oct. 24-26.

Martin Smith

This became known as the convention concluded its sessions at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel in Columbus last week with Vice-President Henry Greenberger announcing he would ask national Allied General Counsel Abram F. Myers to rule on the kids-for-free question at the convention.

Defends For-Free

The Ohio exhibitors heard Mrs. Ethel Niles, who owns 10 under-roofers and three under-skyers, defend the practice on the grounds that it developed a taste for movies which carried over into adulthood. This was disputed by Exhibitor Al Sugarman of Columbus who termed it unfair competition.

Exhibitors present decided there was a print shortage and that they had to resort to bicycling to alleviate it, but thought the circumstance arose as a result of more exhibitor accounts and not because of fewer prints in the exchanges. They also heard Trueman Rembusch declare that television offered no immediate competition, but warned them to be wary. The convention re-elected the following officers:

Reelects Smith

President Martin G. Smith, who now enters his 20th term and what he declared would be his last; Vice-President F. W. Huss and Henry Greenberger; Treasurer Leo Kessel, Secretary P. J. Wood. Horace Abrams, who replaced Herbert Ochs, was the only change made. Ochs now has interests outside of the ITO area.

Frank Rogers Dies at 74; Was Florida States Chief

Frank Rogers, 74, president of Florida State Theatres, Inc., and one of the toughest film buyers in the business, died at his home Sunday, following a heart attack.

Rogers, who had been in ill health during the last three years, was born in Frankfort, Ky. He entered show business via the amusement park route, eventually becoming associated with Sparks and later becoming president of the 105-house Florida State circuit. Polio Cases Show Slight Decrease

The infantile paralysis epidemic, largest since the end of World War I, was on the way down this week, according to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Total cases this year to date are 31,288 with Illinois turning in reports on the largest number of state cases. Total for that area alone was 2,326. The comparative breakdown by states follows:

Nace, Paramount Split Due Oct. 1

Vice-President Harry L. Nace and his son, General Manager Harry L. Nace, Jr., Wednesday announced in Phoenix, Ariz., that they would resign as officers in the Paramount-Nace Theatres, effective Oct. 1. The move is in connection with a split of interests in accordance with the Paramount consent decree.

As a result of this split, Paramount will take over the Catalina, State, and Paramount in Tucson, the Orpheum, Palms, Rialto, Strand, Studio, Ramona, Aero, the Drive-in and the Indian Drive-in at Phoenix.

Nace will continue as board chairman with his son as general manager of the Harry L. Nace Theatres, which include more than 20 houses throughout Arizona.

Show for Boy

Martin Theatres City Manager in Talladega, Ala., gave a special show recently for a young boy from Mumford in that state who faces several weeks of plastic surgery due to cancer. The sum of $237 was raised at the show and given to the youth.

NEWSREEL CLIPS

Worth Reading

Folks who think reports by presidents to stockholders make dull reading ought to give them another look. Last week Paramount President Barney Balaban revealed that the court had been persuaded to change the consent decree so Paramount stockholders would not have to pay income taxes on dividends held in escrow, a move which Paramount had managed to slip through the courts quietly. This week 20th-Fox President Spyros Skouras revealed to his stockholders that Motion Picture Association of America President Eric Johnston had in mind a series of conferences with other governments similar to those that led to the Anglo-American film conferences and that he was abroad for that purpose, among other things. This came as a surprise to some in the trade, for few have been able to see what has come out of the Anglo-American conferences that would make Johnston eager to spread them to other countries. It came as a surprise to the Johnston office, whose "information" directors would not confirm that such was Johnston's purpose but who certainly did not seem eager to deny what Skouras had written the stockholders, evidently on the assumption that Skouras is usually right.

Great Reception

Universal-International is celebrating the fact this week that "Hamlet" has rounded out a one-year run at the Park Avenue Theatre and that a film which some of the initiated looked upon dubiously because it came from a classic has stood up successfully instead of falling on its face. To date, the film version of Shakespeare's blood-and-thunderer, which gets by with frank speech, incest and murder, has been seen by 500,000 persons in its New York engagement alone and has grossed $1,500,000 in 351 engagements throughout the nation. Next year U is going to put it out on the road all over again, probably at lower prices and on a continuous run instead of a two-a-day policy.

Hail Columbia . . .

What the terse-talking sales and public relations staff of Columbia Pictures term "Columbia's Playdate and Billings Drive in Honor of Division Managers" opened Friday to pay tribute to Division Managers Nat Cohn, S. A. Galanty, Jerome Safron, Carl Shalit, I. H. Rogovin, B. C. Marcus, R. J. Ingram, J. B. Underwood, H. E. Weiner, with everybody enthusiastic. Incidentally Columbia General Sales Manager A. Montague pointed out that "Jolson Sings Again" won't be part of the drive. Seems it's getting special handling.

Lippert Meets

Lippert Productions President Robert L. Lippert and General Sales Manager Arthur Greenblatt have announced the following sales meeting: New York, Sept. 27-28, Warwick Hotel; Chicago Sept. 30-Oct. 1, unspecified place; San Francisco, Oct. 7-8, place also unspecified.

Handpicked

MGM has selected 12 members of its organization to go to Europe for a series of conferences with the international sales department. The 12, selected by Vice-President and General Sales Manager William F. Rodgers, will sail Oct. 17 to visit Naples, Rome, Paris and London for a 30-day period. They are: Rudolph Berger, John S. Allen, Walter E. (Doc) Banford, Hillis Cass, Louis Formato, Saal Gottlieb, Carl P. Nedley, Jacques C. ReVille, Louis J. Weber, Irving Jacobs, Harry W. Bache, Louis Orlove. All were picked for their "individual efforts during the anniversary year."

Cinecolor to Use Safety Film

Cinecolor will print all its release prints on Eastman's new non-inflammable nitrate base stock beginning Nov. 1, office of the company in Hollywood announced this week. Only the actual increased cost of the new stock, amounting to .0023 cents a foot, will be passed on to the customers, the announcement said, adding that it was expected that when safety stock becomes universally adopted, the price will come down to current cellulose-base stock.

Liberties Union Cites Pressure Group Censors

Two instances where censorship was made effective through group pressure, were cited this week by the American Civil Liberties Union in its 29th annual report entitled "In the Shadow of Fear." The instances mentioned were:

1) Pressure brought by certain Jewish organizations which prevented the scheduled release of J. Arthur Rank's "Oliver Twist."

2) Pressure brought by Negro organizations which caused the Mayor of Syracuse, N. Y., to suggest to an exhibitor that he not show "The Birth of a Nation." The exhibitor canceled the booking.

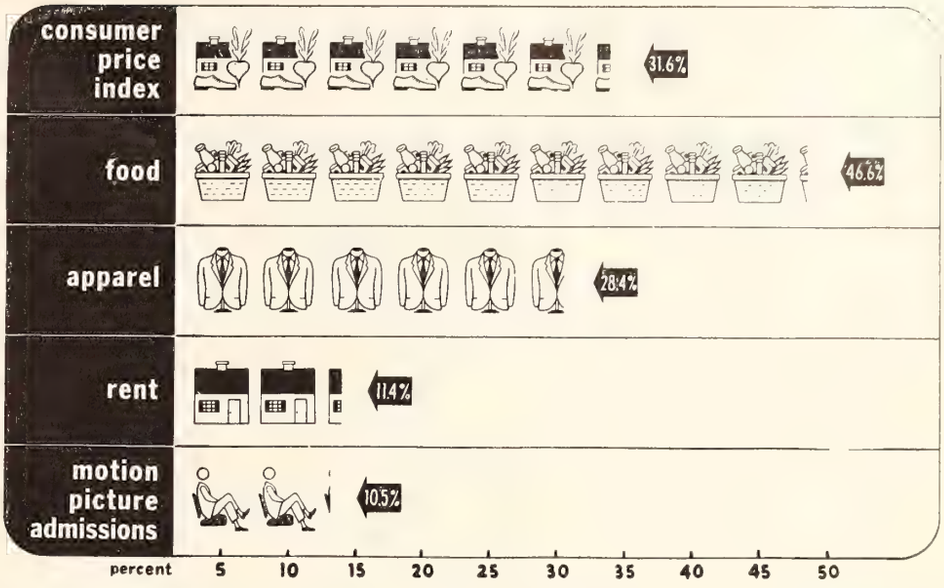
In the field of statutory censorship, the report pointed out that pre-exhibition censorship exists in seven states but that most of the issues which arose under it did not warrant a court test. In Memphis, the situation where the Motion Picture Association of America and Producer Hal Roach had carried their unsuccessful fight against Censor Lloyd Binford to the State Supreme Court was noted. The effort was made in an effort to clear the way to the U. S. Supreme Court, the report said.

The report pointed out two censorial actions taken by the U. S. Customs Bureau which involved the French "White Legs" and the Italian "Rapture." Both were admitted into the country after minor changes.

The report also pointed to the efforts which the Maryland Censor Board had made to censor ideas in a film accused of spreading communism. This attempt was nullified when the state's attorney ruled that such censoring was beyond the powers conferred upon the censors by the state laws.

Censor Sees 'White Legs,' Now Audience Can't

In what appeared to be an unusual move, the New York censor board has banned the French Picture "White Legs" in its entirety, Noel Meadow, whose Vog Pictures owns the American rights revealed. The action prevents it from being shown to New York audiences.



Meadow is appealing to the New York State Censor Board which can overrule the local board. He said the local board had termed the picture "immoral, indecent and tending to corrupt morals" and had refused him the permission to make changes.

Meadow, who had won a fight some time ago with the U. S. Customs Bureau, which did not want to let the print in because some frames revealed the nude rear view of a woman, declared that he had submitted the picture without English titles. He will seek to have the State board rescreen the film.

They're Art Now

A series of old films from the Museum of Modern Art library has been scheduled by the Institute of Contemporary Arts, Washington, D. C., to start on Oct. 7 and run through Jan. 20. The first will be D. W. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms." Series will also include Emil Jannings' "Variety," Greta Garbo's "Story of Gosta Berling," Marlene Dietrich's "Blue Angel" and Rene Clair's "Italian Straw Hat."

Movies ARE Your Best Buy

AND HERE'S VISUAL PROOF of it gathered and drafted by the U. S. Department of Commerce. The Commerce Department's study shows that the average admission price increase for motion pictures is less than one third of the 31.6 per cent rise in general living costs since September, 1945. While the food you eat three times a day jumped 46.6 per cent, the clothes you wear on your back mounted more than 28.4 per cent, the house that shelters you went up 11.4 per cent, the cost of a seat in the motion picture house held down to a modest 10½ per cent in the last four years.

hibitor demands for run ahead of Broadway, based on the legitimate reason that the long holdovers at the time were keeping them waiting for product, were not fought too vigorously. These resorts, exchange men say, did get their run ahead of Broadway but found that they were actually getting less out of the picture which played their house before it played a New York stand. The reason was that the tremendous exploitation put on in connection with a New York run penetrated even to their area and pre-sold a larger audience. When they moved ahead of Broadway, they lost the value of this exploitation.

The greatest difficulty noticed to date over the question of run, however, has been in those areas where there has been not only a rapid increase in population, but a radical shift of the type of population from neighborhood to neighborhood.

New York Example

New York is probably the prime example and this city stands high among those where theatres are trying to take runs away from each other and are getting down to bare knuckles over clearances (with hints of anti-trust suits thrown in).

The reason is obvious. In the five boroughs which comprise the City of New York, there has been an immense jump in population accompanied by a marked change in the types of population in some areas. What were slums 20 years ago have been cleaned up and have become swank residential areas, with well-kept gardens replacing the clothes lines and their waving wash. What were tenements have been and are being razed to make way for huge apartment projects.

The theatres which served these neighborhoods are in many instances not the type which would attract the new patron who has dollars in his pockets where the older patron was lucky to have dimes. As a result, newer theatres are springing up and these put in demands for run over the older houses and clearances which will bring them closer to Broadway.

The same is true of outlying areas which have changed in many instances from suburban communities into small cities. Again, the newer houses which sprang up to serve the new cities, want a better run.

Slightly Daft

The resulting situation is driving exchange men slightly daft. For even though the old customer no longer is any better than the new customer as far as the law is concerned, old customer relations are hard to break and very often the old customer may be a big, tough outfit which in the days of more rugged individualism would tell an exchange what it had better do. Even today, if the old customer gets mad and won't buy because he feels he has been discriminated against, he can make it hurt—provided he has enough bookings under his control to make himself felt in the exchange's income.

20th-Fox Increases Prints On 4 Films to Come

Print increases ranging from 15 to 35 per cent on four of its forthcoming pictures were announced by 20th Century-Fox this week. The company claimed that it had increased its print order by 15 per cent on "Oh, You Beautiful Doll" and Nat Holt's "Fighting Man of the Plains," pictures of a type for which approximately 250 to 300 prints were made. "Everybody Does It" has a 23 per cent print increase and "The Prince of Foxes" prints will be raised 35 per cent.

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

Sunshine Follows Rain

(Swedish Dialog—English Titles)

Scandia Films | Drama | 100 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Well photographed, well acted, but obvious melodrama with overinsistent music. Impelling folk dances.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Fair for art houses, with "Torment" stars. Particularly good for Swedish neighborhoods.

Cast: Mai Zetterling, Alf Kjellin, Sten Lindgren, Anna Lindahl, Hugo Hasslo, Ulf Palme, Torsten Bergstrom. Credits: Producer, Svensk Films. Director, Gustav Edgren. Screenplay, Gustav Edgren. Based on a novel by Margit Soderholm. Photography, Martin Bodin. Music, Charles Redland. English titles, Herman Weinberg.

Plot: The daughter of a rich farmer defies her father and the superstitions of Sweden's northern provinces by running out of her morganatic wedding to be with a gypsy fiddler. Later he inherits a farm and they marry. He is saved from the rapids by the girl's father when the latter realizes he has been tyrannical.

Comment: This rustic legend runs to melodrama, unfortunately obvious and accompanied by too insistent music. It does have pictorial grandeur, however, with the hills and woods and rapid streams of northern Sweden, plus some rhythmically impelling folk dances, the charming title song and good acting by a handsome young couple. This couple, Mai Zetterling and Alf Kjellin, furthermore, achieved note in "Torment," which was quite successful here for a foreign-language film. Miss Zetterling has added to her reputation in several British films. "Sunshine Follows Rain" rates only fair in the art house category, the "Torment" stars being the principal angle. Clinging so close to the Swedish soil, it should be a particularly good entry for Swedish neighborhoods.

Pinky

20th-Fox | Drama | 102 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A poignant, stirring drama with a timely theme that is vital and gripping. Most audiences will find it daring and compelling entertainment, but unless a miracle in territorial censorship occurs, it may be forbidden to the very people who should see it.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Because of its controversial theme, this picture will stir up a great deal of interest and discussion that will redound to its benefit at the box-office.

Cast: Jeanne Crain, Ethel Barrymore, Ethel Waters, William Lundigan, Basil Ruysdael, Kenny Washington, Nina Mae McKinney, Griff Barnett, Frederick O'Neal, Evelyn Varden, Raymond Greenleaf, Dan Riss, William Hansen, Arthur Hunnicut. Credits: Produced by Darryl F. Zanuck. Directed by Elia Kazan. Screenplay by Philip Dunne and Dudley Nichols. Based on a novel by Cid Ricketts Sumner. Photography, Joe MacDonald. Art direction, Lyle Wheeler and J. Russell Spencer. Music by Alfred Newman.

Plot: Having lived in the North since she was a child, 22-year-old Pinky returns to her grandmother in the South. Pinky, a Negro, who had lived in the North since she was a child and had passed as white, had fallen in love with a young doctor, and tells her grandmother she will return to him. But Granny induces Pinky, a registered nurse, to nurse back to health Miss Em, the landowner for whom her family has worked since childhood. The young doctor arrives to proclaim his love, although Pinky tells him of her background. A Negro doctor asks her aid in helping young Negro girls become nurses, but she refuses because she plans to return North as soon as Miss Em recovers. But Miss Em dies, leaving her property to Pinky. The will is questioned and the case brought to court. Pinky wins, but the young doctor asks her to give up the home and come North with him. Realizing that Miss Em intended her to turn the house into a nursing home, Pinky decides to remain where she feels she belongs and fulfill Miss Em's wishes.

Comment: "Pinky" is a poignant, stirring drama. The plight of an attractive Negro girl who had passed as white in the North and who has returned to her southern home because of the conflict of background provides a situation that is vital and gripping. If Producer Darryl Zanuck's other film, "Gentleman's Agreement," stripped the mask from intolerance in the case of anti-Semitism, this picture is even more daring and compelling in its presentation of the Negro question. The evil of prejudice is boldly revealed, and one cringes at the realization that this condition prevails today. As portrayed by Jeanne Crain, Pinky, though a Negro, might well have continued to successfully pass as white away from her Southern home. But there is that inner conflict of background which torments. And once she is home, the veil is lifted and prejudice and intolerance rear their ugly heads. Although she must give up the man she loves, Pinky realizes that her place is with her people. In the face of prejudice and intolerance, it is the only thing she can do. Elia Kazan has directed this drama with skill and understanding, and it is superbly acted by Miss Crain, Ethel Barrymore, Ethel Waters, William Lundigan, Basil Ruysdael, Evelyn Varden and others in the cast. Producer Zanuck has chosen his cast with care, and Director Kazan brings forth from them performances that are startlingly true to life. This applies especially to those who portray intolerant, bigoted characters. Undoubtedly, "Pinky" will stir up a great deal of interest and discussion that will redound to its benefit at the box-office. But unless a miracle in territorial censorship occurs, it may be forbidden to the very people who should see it. Whatever develops, there can be no denying the fact that an extremely vital subject has been forcefully and convincingly brought to the screen by Darryl Zanuck.

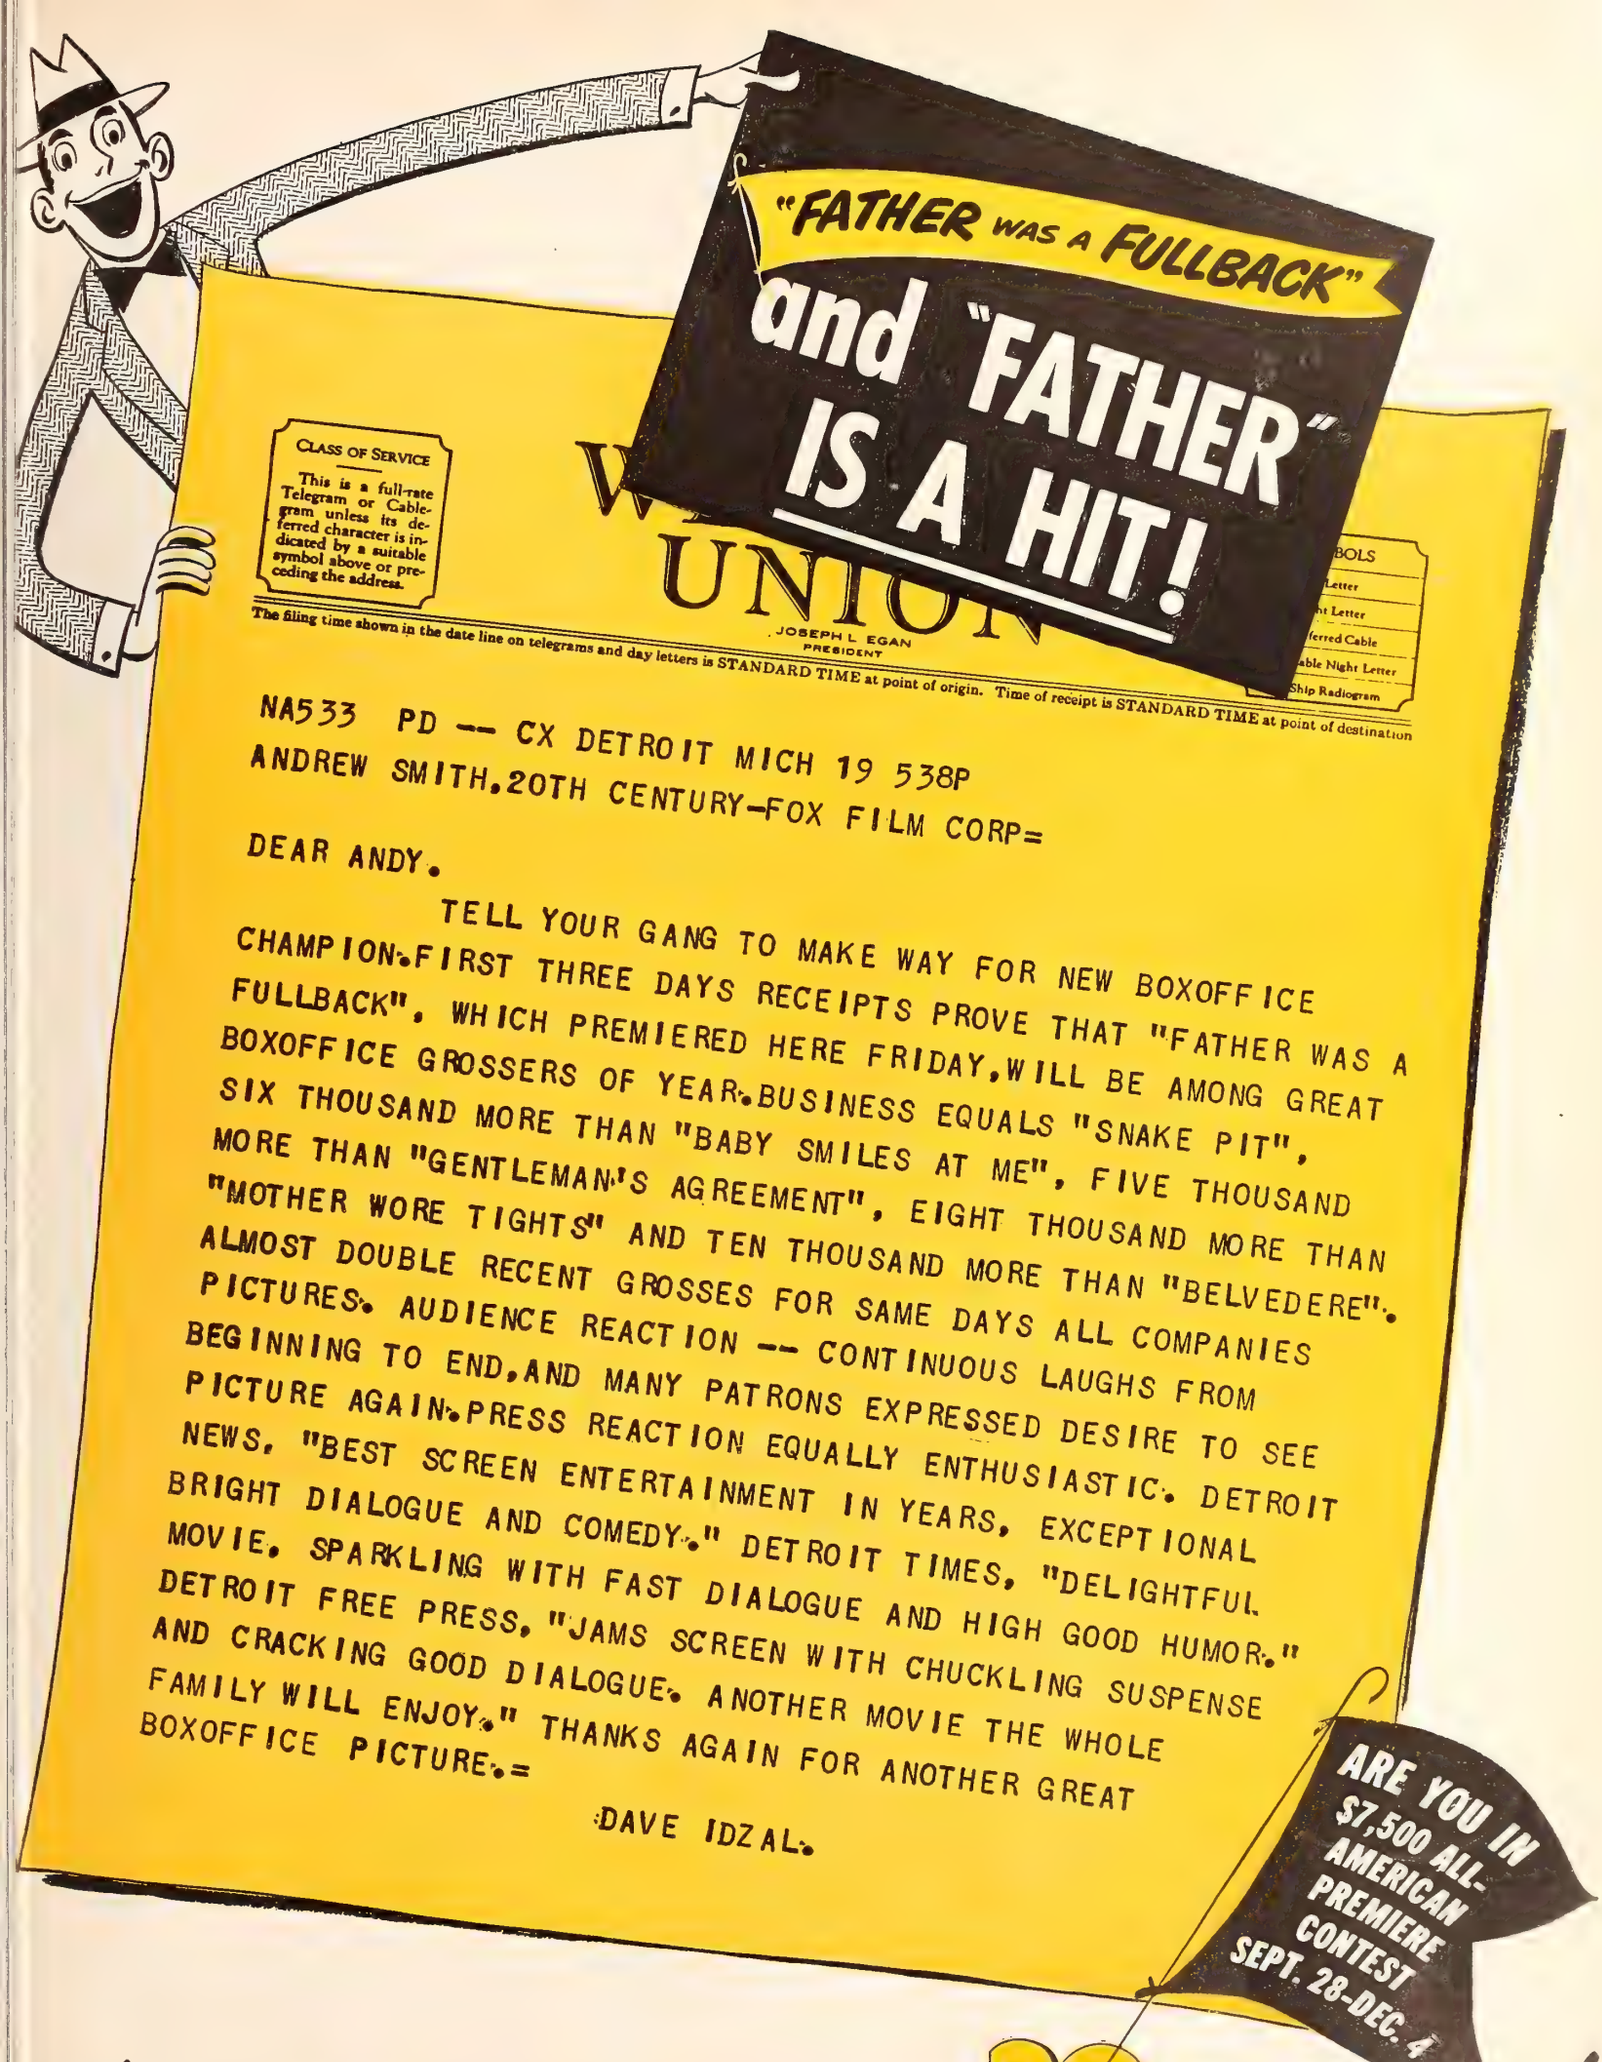
Battleground

MGM | War Drama | 118 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Far and away THE picture of World War II. To many, it may well be THE picture of both wars. A truly impressive screen document with an array of magnificent performances. It will thrill men and women alike, and it will be talked about.



BOX-OFFICE SLANT: In its subject matter and in its star names, this picture has strong box-office values. And the campaign being put behind it by MGM—probably the company's strongest in years—should insure top grosses in all situations.

Cast: Van Johnson, John Hodiak, Ricardo Montalban, George Murphy, Marshall Thompson, Jerome Courtland, Don Taylor, Bruce Cowling, James Whitmore, Douglas Fowley, Leon Ames, Guy Anderson, Thomas E. Breen, Denise Darcel, Richard Jaeckel, Jim Arness, Scotty Beckett, Brett King and the original "Screaming Eagles" of the 101st Airborne Division, who play themselves. Credits: Produced by Dore Schary. Directed by William A. Wellman. Story and screenplay by Robert Pirosh, associate producer. Photography, Paul C. Vogel. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons and Hans Peters. Montage sequences, Peter Ballbusch. Musical score, Lennie Hayton. Technical adviser, H. W. O. Kinnard, Lt. Col., Inf.

Plot: This is the story of the quiet heroism of the men of the 101st Airborne Division during Christmas week, 1944, in the Battle of Bastogne. Although outnumbered, without supplies, and surrounded, the American troops hold Bastogne against the unexpected Nazi breakthrough. When the fog lifts and the sun shines again, droves of planes overhead shower supplies and ammunition on the beleagured infantrymen.

Comment: There have been a few outstanding pictures based on World War I—"The Big Parade," "What Price Glory" and "Journey's End" come quickly to mind. There have been a number of World War II dramas, but they seemed to lack that "something" to make them imperishable. Only one fact seems crystal clear: "Battleground" is far and away THE picture of World War II. To many, it may well be THE picture of both wars. Here is a truly impressive screen document of that frantic Christmas Week of 1944 when outnumbered American troops without supplies held out against an unexpected Nazi breakthrough. Avoiding the temptation to treat the Battle of Bastogne from a spectacular scale with thousands of soldiers and planes and tanks, Producer Dore Schary and Associate Producer Robert Pirosh, who also wrote the story and screenplay, have wisely confined their treatment to a single platoon—a motley cross-section of America. The spectacular approach might have been temporarily thrilling and exciting, but not long remembered. By their treatment, Schary and Pirosh have made the story of the Battle of Bastogne an experience not easily forgotten. The plight of these beleagured Americans as they endure snow and cold and dirt and grime and possible annihiliation by the enemy is stripped of every bit of glamor and flag-waving and heroics. They grumble and gripe, they hate war, they want to go home—but they go on fighting. Their humor is, for the most part, bitterly derisive, their outlook frankly skeptical but their hope

Facts on Industry Lawsuits—Part 2

If you happen to have set aside last week's issue of STR you'd better dig it up and have it at hand before reading what follows. We are taking up where we left off last week in chronicling the results of a lengthy interview with one of the industry's outstanding legal advisors concerning the "whys" and "whats" of industry—and particularly inter-theatre—law suits. Last week's article is important because of frequent reference in succeeding paragraphs to the seven points of reasoning set forth therein as being basically essential to impartial consideration in any dispute calculated to disturb long established exhibitor-distributor practices in clearance and run—the underlying cause of the greatest portion of our currently staggering legal outlay.

In last week's article the function of the down-town theatre was clearly outlined. That was the first of two essential questions that have direct bearing on any and all problems concerning clearance and run.

Now we get around to some interesting calculations regarding the second question: "Can that function be performed as well or better by any other theatres, alone or in combination?"

Remember, what follows is the reasoning of a veteran motion-picture lawyer—with some 30 years of court battles behind him—and carry the combined weight of knowledge and experience.

As mentioned in the preceding article, it is to be hoped that the unprejudiced sincerity of his reasoning will serve to stimulate a return to the use of "wits" as an effective and inexpensive substitute for the barrage of "writs" that have, in recent years, been bombarding the industry to an all time high in public disfavor.

Sure to Show Effect on Certain Competitive Theatres

Clearly, to say that the function of the large down-town theatre can be performed as well should not require a change of established practice in the absence of any law forcing such a change, but the attempt is here made to reason the matter out as if a showing that it can be performed as well allows a change in method to be forced on both distributor and exhibitor. (It is conceded that the distributor can adopt any method he chooses—so long as he can sell exhibitors.)

If it can be shown that the function can be better performed, the pressure of economic law is certain to bring about a change or the maintenance of the system by artificial or unfair controls will be effectively prevented by law. In considering the question it is important that we recognize that any change in established practice is sure to show immediate effect on certain competitive theatres.

For example: Many exhibitors in smaller towns and cities select for their better theatres and better playing time, feature attractions which are exploited on first-run by a down-town theatre in some nearby town or city. Whether or not this is mere laziness is debatable but it is an established practice and certainly saves a great deal of time and effort in booking. It is also a known fact that proper exploitation and publicity in the nearby metropolitan center adds considerable value to the picture—and serves to increase gross—in the market area. This is true to such a marked degree that many small-town exhibitors resist playing any feature attraction until it has been played first run in some locality rated as the principal center of the area.

It is also well known that many exhibitors who are in direct competition with exploitation houses restrict their buying, as far as possible, to pictures which are played in what is commonly known as the "show case" house. This is done either by including in contracts a clause excluding pictures shown first in lesser calibre houses or including only those which are shown in the "show case."

At least four alternate methods of distribution and exhibitor exploitation suggest themselves:

1. First run and exploitation in a single neighborhood theatre.
2. First run and exploitation in several neighborhood theatres, strategically located, on day and date playing arrangements.
3. Day-and-date playing arrangements in a down-town theatre and one or more neighborhood theatres.
4. Move-overs from a down-town theatre to one or more neighborhood theatres.

In reasoning out the potential of these alternatives it is assumed that the seven basic principals of function, (as outlined in this department of last week's STR) whether they be cause or effect, are, in the main, adequately defined and valid and that these alternatives should meet at least most of these seven elements of function. (The eighth element, that of marketability in the area, since it is a distributor's argument, is omitted.)

Let's consider each alternative separately:

First Alternative

First run and exploitation in a single neighborhood house seems to fail to provide (1) location to transportation, (3) audience representing a cross section and (5) audience as an instrument of advertising in surrounding area. It might satisfy (4) exploitation which would, of course be limited by exclusion of widespread word-of-mouth and eventually (6) the institutional habit, since it is possible, with time required not considered, to create institutional status, and (7) prestige, since prestige is likewise acquirable. In other respects it is more than probable that acceptance of this alternative would produce other complications which might be very disastrous to a great number of independent competitive theatres such as exist in practically all of the larger population centers.

Normally neighborhood theatres are smaller than the downtown houses. To meet distributor demands for adequate rentals it would be forced to either raise admission, extend the length of run, or both. That the neighborhood owner, if he has any choice, would risk using the house for exploitation only on the very top bracket films, seems obvious.

Increasing price and extending running-time demands that the house depart from its original objective; to offer citizens of a neighborhood convenient access to entertainment at less than downtown prices and to offer selective entertainment in considerable variety. There can be no guarantee of the entertainment value of a picture until it has been exhibited. The first-run exploitation campaign tests this and in so doing provides a guide to enable the neighborhood house to fulfill the selective premise of its original policy.

Extension of run eliminates frequent program change and thereby interrupts, if it does not destroy, the habit of "repeating," or attending two or more times a week which is common in neighborhood houses. (Any neighborhood owner admits a substantial portion of his weekly revenue as being derived from the above source.)

In practically all large centers there exist clearly defined competitive zones in which two or more theatres compete for patronage. The extension of run in such zones by one house would greatly diminish the potential of a picture in all other houses. This is important because it is reasonable to assume that the owner of the neighborhood exploitation house will secure the best possible pictures obtainable. If other houses are forced to adopt a similar policy as to lesser pictures, the effect on those unable to pay the rentals would be pretty close to disastrous..

The crucial problem underlying acceptance of this alternative is "Who gets these top pictures and for what length of run?" The fight for product would become desperate because it would be a battle for survival. Somebody would have to qualify to get the top pictures and distributor revenue is certain to mount in such a competitive struggle, whether resulting from competitive negotiation or competitive bidding.

Second Alternative

If the method of day-and-date playing arrangements in several neighborhood houses, stragetically located were adopted it is hardly conceivable that, in large centers, functions 1, 2, 3 and 5 can be performed. The foregoing comment on exploitation in a single house would apply with greater force and the question "Who gets the run?" become more acute. To say that this encourages competition is fallacious because the competitive struggle between such houses is the struggle for product and not the direct struggle for the customer's dollar. Until the industry produces enough good pictures to assure all competitive houses equalization of product, in kind and number, the struggle will go on with ever increasing intensity.

Third Alternative

First-run in a downtown house, constantly used as a "show case," on a day-and-date basis with one or more neighborhood houses, clearly performs all of the functions specified except (6), an adverse effect due to breaking of the institutional habit would eventually be obviated. In order to fulfill all other functions it must be assumed that all exhibitors involved advertise and exploit the attraction.

However at least two effects—aside from the effect on the large investment in the downtown house, which is being ignored in this argument—might well counter-balance some apparent advantages of this method. First, it would divide the patronage flowing to a single house between two or more houses and deprive the public of a variety of available motion picture entertainment. If all pictures, good and bad, were thus exploited the effect on the neighborhood houses of poor quality product would be marked and more dangerous than the effect of such product under present policies of frequent change.

Second, it is hardly conceivable that any exhibitor, whose house is selected as a first-run, exploitation unit, would be willing to pay top rentals for even the best pictures without protection of clearance to insure his investment against a competitor paying and charging less in rentals and admissions. The ban on fixing admission prices by contract emphasizes this premise of reasoning.

Fourth Alternative

The argument is frequently advanced that a move-over from a downtown first-run to another downtown house does not effect the revenue of the first-run engagement. This is probably true under current practice but what would happen if the move-over house were owned by a different operator without restrictions on his advertising in advance or the admission price charged? This question is also important in considering the prospect of move-over to a neighborhood theatre. Any aggressive exhibitor would, if given any choice, avoid opening such a picture "cold." More than likely he would design exploitation calculated to draw his normal patronage plus whatever he could entice from the downtown theatre. The other effects under this plan, such as those previously mentioned as stemming from extended runs or higher prices or both and the difficulties as to choice of the move-over unit are as acute here as in the other alternatives. A very cogent argument could be advanced that if clearance is eliminated between downtown and first neighborhood run it should also be eliminated between first neighborhood and all subsequent neighborhood runs.

That last goes further than the Supreme Court and the Trial Court were willing to go in the Paramount case. In both decisions reasonable clearance was concluded as necessary to protect an exhibitor in the enjoyment of what he buys. Put another way, the Court states it is to protect the license fees paid by the prior run.

Under any or all of these alternatives there is no man wise enough to foresee all the results or wise and courageous enough to guarantee the industry against disaster, local or national, under any method varying greatly from the established practices on which it was built and under which motion pictures became so large a part of our cultural pattern. Any change in the basic structure of exhibition and distribution methods seems fraught with hazard. Even the Government, in the Paramount case, took the position that it did not desire to establish a new method of doing business. It sought certain remedies designed to destroy certain evils found to exist but avoided,—more, it even refused—to suggest a method of distribution, leaving the choice to the industry, within the law.

That's all there is to this two-episode chronicling of basic reasoning of points to consider before attempting—through process of law—to effect changes in run and clearance practices. If your personal peeve is outside this pattern of reasoning go hire a lawyer. But my guess is that—if you study and analyze in line with the reasoning advanced—there will be a wholesale cancelling of Country Club memberships by lawyers who have been eating high off the hog at the expense of the industry.

and courage indomitable. As played by Van Johnson, John Hodiak, Ricardo Montalban, George Murphy, Guy Anderson, Bruce Cowling, Jerome Courtland, Douglas Fowley, James Whitmore, Don Taylor, Richard Jaeckel and Brett King, this motley assortment of Americans gets inside of you and stays there. As performances go, these are all sincere and masterly, but to each individual spectator there will be one or two who stand out from the rest. In all likelihood they will be James Whitmore as the laconic, tobacco-chewing Kinnie—a truly fine characterization, and Douglas Fowley as "wise guy" "Kipp" Kippton whose clicking dental plates will probably become celebrated in screen history. But whomever one chooses, there is the stamp of excellence on the portrayal of every individual player. Undoubtedly much of the credit—perhaps most of it—for the quality of performances is due to the splendid direction of William A. Wellman, who has been responsible for some of the screen's better entertainments, but none more memorable and impressive than "Battleground." It is a picture that will thrill men and women alike. Little wonder that MGM is putting into use every resource at its command to herald this notable film through advertising, publicity and exploitation. It will be seen and talked about, and box-offices will prosper.

'They Live By Night'

Held back simply because of a title conflict, this is no lame duck. STR's review on June 26, 1948, when the film was called "The Twisted Road," said it had universal adult appeal, would have good word of mouth, in fact "just misses greatness." Excellent business, of course, was predicted. It's a drama of escaped lifers, the youngest of whom "finds himself" through marriage to a farmer's daughter. Like the others, he eventually pays the supreme penalty. The romantic leads are Cathy O'Donnell and the now potent box-office Farley Granger. Howard Da Silva is magnificent in a supporting role. It's an RKO release running 95 mins.

Flame of Youth

Republic Drama 60 mins.

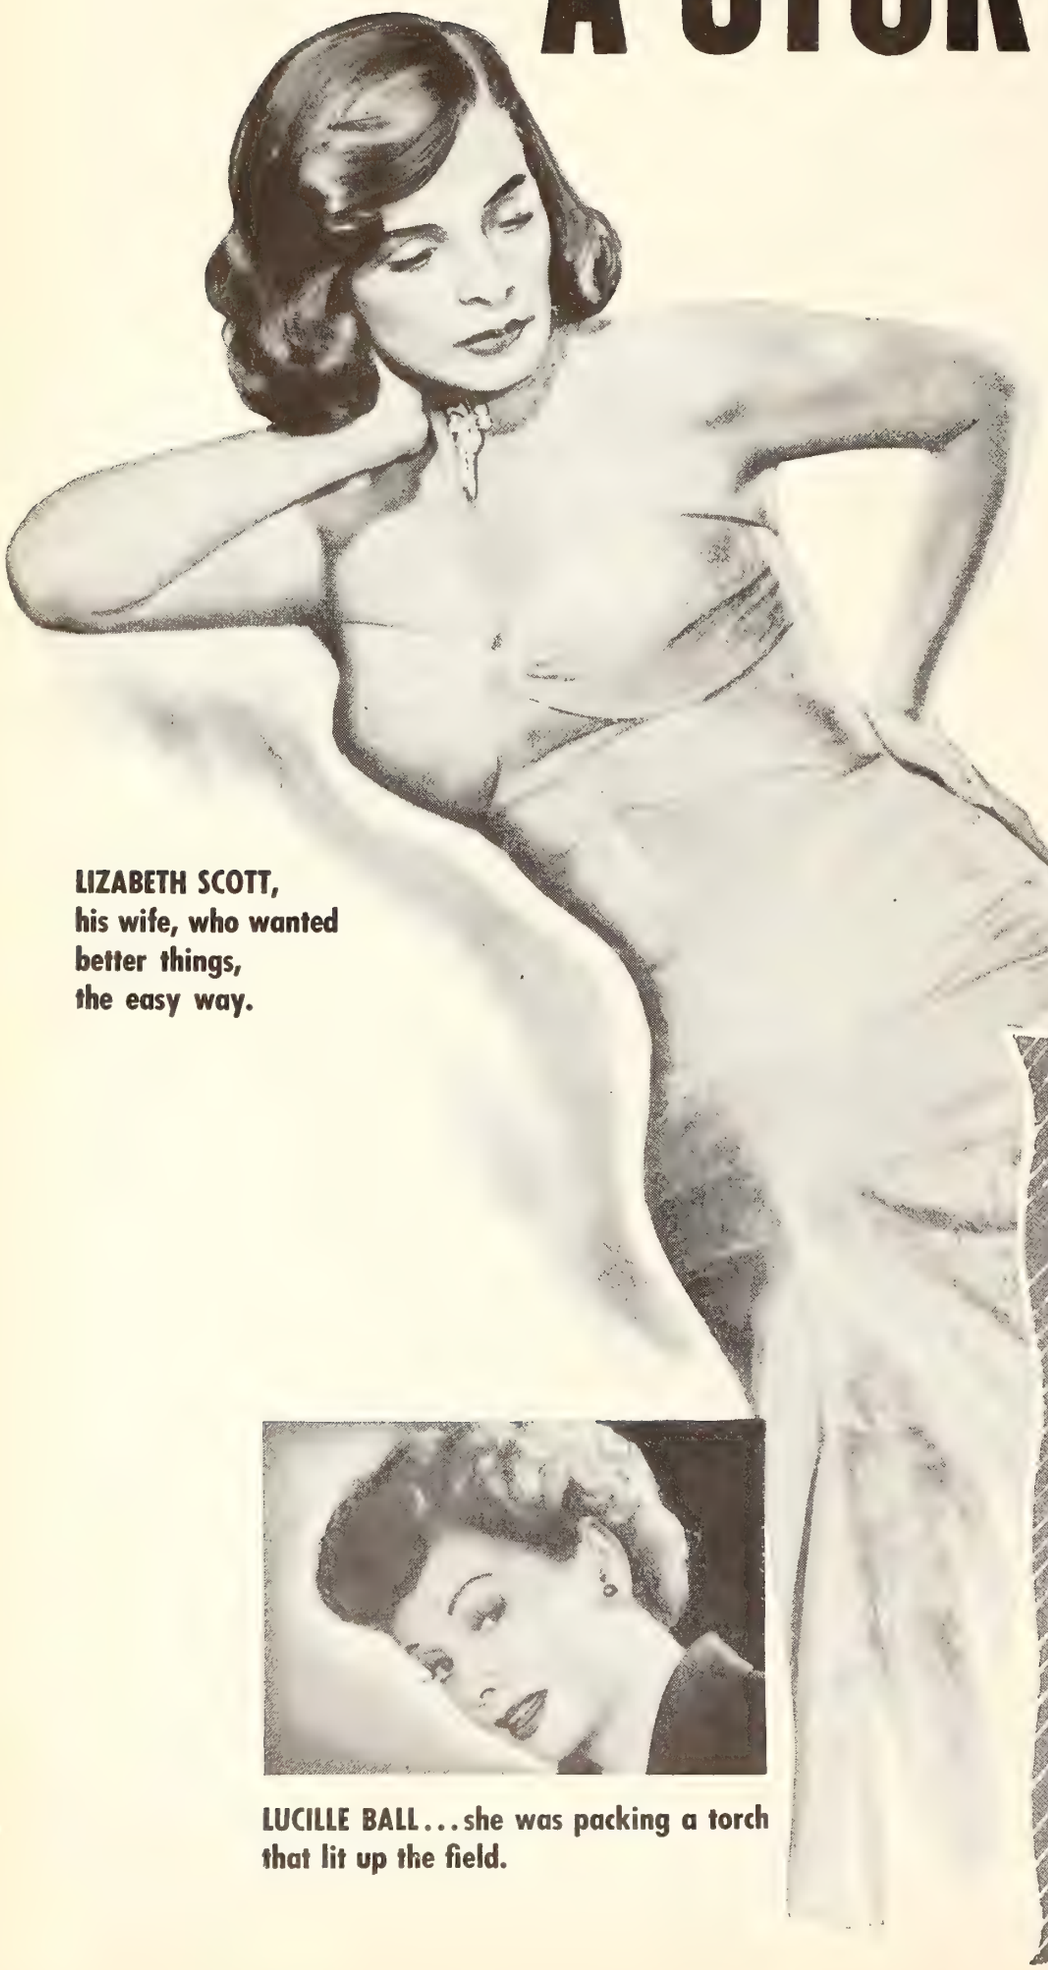
AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Routine juvenile delinquency yarn. Poorly acted.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Subject has pull, but picture itself has little. Best in support of a comedy or a bigger picture of its own type.

Cast: Barbra Fuller, Ray McDonald, Danni Nolan, Tony Barrett, Carol Brannan, Anita Carrell, Michael Carr. Credits: Associate producer, Lou Brock. Director, R. G. Springsteen. Screenplay, Robert Libott, Frank Burt and Bradford Ropes. Story, Albert De-Mond. Photography, John MacBurnie.

Plot: A teen-age girl persuades a bookie to back her in a hand-book racket to collect the kids' money. When one of the kids wins a sizable bet on a long shot, the girl resorts to robbery to pay it off. She gets several other kids involved, admits her guilt and is packed off to an institution. Her daddy gets a lecture on his negligence.



Comment: This is a story of juvenile delinquency, with betting on the horses, car-stripping, robbery and heavy petting entering into the picture. The subject, and the title reflecting it, have pull, but there is no other advance attraction and the film itself has little strength, being routinely scripted and poorly acted. "Flame of Youth" would probably be best used in support of a comedy with youth appeal or with a bigger picture of its own type.

Nuns Volunteer Help On 'Stable' Kid Show

When Manager Milt Baline of the Glove at Gloversville, N. Y., told the 37 nuns and seven priests attending his advance promotional screening of "Come to the Stable," that he was going to hold a special after-school screening for children on the Monday after opening, the nuns volunteered to tell their students about it. One priest said he would mention the picture.

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

U-I Rouses Explorer's Spirit To Beat Drums for 'Columbus'

History, Exploits and Day Honoring Discoverer Furnish Surefire Exploitation Angles

In his day Christopher Columbus was quite a guy. He could swing a mean hand on a loom to weave a snazzy, if conservative, piece of cloth. He could prove that old one about the square of the hypotenuse in the best geometric tradition of Euclid. He could name the stars in the sky and had a wacky idea about the world being round like a cook's belly instead of flat like a statesman's head. He could draw maps complete even to the dolphins breaking water in their far corners. He could find his way through front and back doors of at least two courts of Europe and could out-intrigue some of the best of the courtiers. He could sail a ship and—incidentally—discovered America when he was looking for another place.

But if anyone had told him that he would figuratively rise from his grave some four and a half centuries later to become the spirit press agent of a motion picture, he would probably have remarked in grammatical Castilian marred by Genoese accents:

"Chris? No!"

Anyway, that's what he's doing right now. For by happy coincidence, his history and exploits, plus the fact that the United States recognizes Columbus Day as a legal holiday each Oct. 12, provide a relatively surefire exploitation program for a picture in Technicolor known as "Christopher Columbus."

And you can bet that the strategists who plot and plan campaigns to sell Universal-International product were not going to overlook the fact that they had a picture about Columbus and that most of the United States takes a holiday on the day known as Columbus Day.

So out they started with plans to put the film over, making C-Day—Columbus Day—the D-Day for theatres in some 75 or 80 towns whose premieres will be followed by additional openings in a total of 100 cities during the period starting Oct. 13.

Only the Beginning

But that's only the beginning. The erudite gentlemen who exploit pictures for Universal went for their history books. It seems that Columbus, a weary fleet commander who was faced with water shortage, bad weather and mutinous crews, must have been a happy man when he sighted land; so happy in fact that in a fit of pious gratitude he called the first island in America San Salvador—the Savior. Less pious succeeding generations, according to the doctors of philosophy in Universal's Park Avenue offices, changed the Island's name to Watling Island.

But did this stump Universal? No. They persuaded the post office at Watling Island to issue a special San Salvador Stamp. Then they made up packets of a highly decorated script letter in Spanish which is the exact letter Columbus sent back to Ferdinand and Isabella about his discovery. This packet is being sent to editors and critics in all the key cities where the film will break Columbus Day. As it is written in Spanish, it is assumed that the newspapermen getting it will either be as erudite as the publicity men at Universal, or that they will be intrigued and hire an interpreter. Anyway, for one mailing, the historic name of San Salvador is back on the map.

Putting 11 Men in Field

Then to keep the drums beating long and loud about the picture, Universal is putting 11 men into the field. Eight of the men have been hired especially for "Christopher Columbus" and the entire crew is to blanket 23 cities, to work on art and school contacts and to plant the Columbus story series in newspapers.

This series consists of a five-chapter serialization of the picture story, each chapter accompanied by a still, which is given one newspaper in each community. While there is nothing to accent youth in this stunt which has been tried successfully before, to date the press seems to have taken cordially to it, and U-I proudly announces that it will run in the Cleveland Plain-Dealer, the St. Petersburg Times, the Washington Post, the New Orleans Item, the Chicago Herald American, the New York Journal-American and the Los Angeles Herald Express.

Part of the campaign leans heavily on school interest. For this purpose a visual education strip on Columbus is offered as part of the suggested campaign. Another is a "true or false" quiz on Columbus which may be held in the schools. Still another is a so-called matching contest known as the "Christopher Columbus Explorers' Contest." The idea on this one is to HORSE SHOULD KNOW. The best judge of pictures about horses, decided Manager H. Mellor of the Blackpool Theatre, Blackpool, England, is a horse. So he invited a local horse to attend a special screening of Columbia's "The Return of October" (retitled "Date With Destiny" in England). Naturally, the newspapers devoted front-page stories to the stunt and there was a rush to the box-office (folks, not horses) when the picture opened a few days later.

Belgium Dates Set On 'Battleground'

MGM will hold simultaneous premieres of "Battleground" in at least four Belgium cities and provinces the same time the picture opens at the Astor on Broadway, Nov. 11, it was learned over the weekend. There was a possibility that a fifth Belgium city would be added, but this would be contingent on the run of "The Three Musketeers."

Definitely set for the day-and-date premieres are two theatres (the General Patton and the Ardennes) in Bastogne, where the famous battle depicted in "Battleground" took place. Also, the Metro in Antwerp, the Marivaux in Luxembourg and the Forum in Liege. The fifth city is Brussells, where the Cameo is slated to open with the picture on or shortly after Nov. 11, depending on the length of run for "Musketeers."

There will be premiere invitational showings at both Bastogne houses, as well as at Antwerp and Luxembourg, Nov. 10, the same date as for the Astor.

Producer Dore Schary and a number of members of the cast will attend the special invitational premiere at the Astor, and there will also be in attendance a host of home office executives as well as important personages in army, city and state affairs.

Worth Fine to Plug 'Boundaries' Over Air

With "Lost Boundaries" booked, Manager Milt Baline invited 56 clergymen to attend a special screening at Schine's Glove, Gloversville, N. Y. Rev. Schaertel, prominent among the local clergy, said he would plug the picture over the air. He also made it the subject of an address at the Kiwanis Club which usually fines members $1 for a commercial. He told the meeting it was well worth paying a $1 fine to have had the privilege of seeing such a fine picture and recommending it. A local Negro clergyman said he would mention the film in his sermon.

$300,000 Budget For Magazines on 'Prince of Foxes'

Twentieth Century-Fox this week revealed that it would spend $300,000 to advertise its forthcoming "The Prince of Foxes" in 24 national publications which range from Sunday newspaper supplements to weekly and monthly magazines.

The schedule, said to cover the largest amount of money spent by the company on any single picture to date, is intended to pre-sell its Christmas film to a reading audience of 300 million. According to Vice-President Charles Einfeld, the campaign is an effort to employ for a motion picture a technique which has been successful in the sale of automobiles, electrical appliances, deodorants, dentifrices, razor blades, cereals, etc. It consists of the manufacturer laying down an intensive sales campaign so that the retailer need only follow with ads telling the public that it can get the product in his store.

Each ad is slanted for the particular publication in which it will appear, Einfeld said, and will push the picture as both holiday and family entertainment. The schedule follows:

Fan Magazines — Modern Screen, Screen Stories, Motion Picture, Movie Story, Screen Guide, Movieland, Movie Life, Movie Stars Parade, Photoplay, Screenland, Silver Screen.

Sunday Newspaper Supplements — American Weekly, This Week, Parade, Puck.

Hollywood Seen Tieing-In With New Comic Book

Hollywood, which has long avoided comic books because of the fear that they might involve films in their troubles over content, seems about to tie-in with the large circulation of one group—National Comics Publications—in their new "Miss Beverly Hills of Hollywood" series.

This particular group of comics, which allegedly avoids horror and is guided in editorial content by a group of psychiatrists and child experts turned to Hollywood with the new series which deals with the adventures of a girl in Hollywood. It also has pages with sketches on Hollywood styles, postures, a picture biography of a star in each issue, plus a short biography, a short interview and news about pictures.

Paramount Comics

Paramount announced this week that it had entered a special comic book tie-in with National Comics Publications for a new series to be based around the lives of its stars. The first two are on Alan Ladd and Bob Hope.

Fair Exchange Pays Off Radio and the Theatre

Richard Feldman did a little trading that worked to the benefit of the radio station as well as the theatre in a tieup for "Johnny Stool Pigeon" at Keith's Theatre, Syracuse. The swap was a 30x40 display out front featuring Howard Duff and his "Sam Spade" air show for six "A" and three "B" spots plugging the picture over station WFBL, Columbia outlet in Syracuse.

AT SCHINE SYRACUSE REGIONAL MEETING. Eighty-five Schine division, group and theatre managers attended a meeting recently with Schine Circuit home office executives at Syracuse, N. Y., and discussed a fall season showmanship campaign. Guest speaker at an afternoon session was Stirling Siliphant, 20th Century-Fox national promotion manager. Starting at the left: Harry Unterfort, Central New York zone manager; Seymour Morris, advertising and publicity director; Siliphant; Louis W. Schine, vice-president and treasurer; Gus Lampe, general manager, and Bernard Diamond, assistant to Louis W. Schine.

'New Era of Showmanship' Keynotes Schine Syracuse, Columbus Meetings

"Today the exhibitor faces new problems unlike any with which he has ever been confronted. The theatre manager must be prepared to cope with them by being fully acquainted with what he has to sell and how he intends to sell it. The routine and traditional type of selling is no longer adequate to merchandise our product. We must find new ideas and new avenues through which to sell our theatres and their attractions. . . . This is 'a new era in showmanship'; today we discard the old to make way for the new!"

Thus did Schine Circuit Vice-President and Treasurer Louis W. Schine keynote two regional meetings held recently in Syracuse, N. Y. and Columbus, Ohio. Meeting with home office executives in Syracuse were 85 division, group and theatre managers from New York State and Maryland, while 50 men from Ohio and Kentucky gathered in the Ohio state capital.

Stirling Siliphant, 20th Century-Fox national promotion manager, appeared as guest speaker at the Syracuse meeting, while MGM's Mike Simons addressed the gathering in Columbus. Siliphant outlined his company's campaign plans, his discussion patterned along the style of 20th-Fox's recent merchandising meeting in New York. Dealing with the status of the theatre manager in his community, Simons built for his Columbus listeners a theatre manager who was idolized by his community because of the deeds he did and the goodwill he earned for his theatre because of the friendship and respect of the townspeople.

Pete Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, was also a guest at the Columbus dinner and welcomed the visitors.

At both meetings, Schine executives spoke on various phases of showmanship and theatre operation and outlined fall season campaign plans. Schine Assistant Bernard Diamond expressed optimism and declared that "all we have to be concerned with is getting the amusement dollar into the movies instead of allowing it to go elsewhere." Chief Booker William Kraemer expressed his enthusiasm over the quality of new season product.

Tell Plans for Drive

Pointing out that the fall campaign was not prepared in its entirety but only in its fundamentals, Advertising and Publicity Director Seymour Morris told of plans for the circuit's showmanship drive, "Look Forward to Schine's '49-50 Show Season." He said the real campaign plans would be formulated by the Schine managers attending the conferences (which was later done, with the home office executive committee going over the ideas suggested by the men and choosing those that would be most applicable to the fall season campaign.)

General Manager Gus Lampe assured the managers that since Schine's was able to offer good playing time for vaudeville, which was brought back on a circuit-wide basis several months ago, they were assured of getting top acts. Maurice Glockner, head of the Confectionery Division, showed new ideas in dressing up candy cases and how additional sales of candy and popcorn could be obtained.

Personnel Director Charles Horwitz reminded his listeners that now, more than ever, the theatre must be the community center in every situation. It must be so inviting, he said, that its service, comfort and courtesy would be on the lips of every resident, and that wherever groups gather, the manager would be proud to have his theatre as the subject of conversation.

As guest speaker at dinner following the Syracuse meeting, WSYR Manager E. "Curley" Vadeboncoeur declared that while television would become an important medium in the entertainment field, it would never be a substitute for either radio or movies.

Interstate Film-Rating Plan Valuable Service to Parents

Some three years ago the Interstate Circuit down Texas way, having become concerned over rumblings from parents, courts and authorities on juvenile delinquency directed towards certain types of pictures allegedly unsuitable for children, launched a new service: if mother was in doubt whether the picture showing that day was suitable for junior or sissie, all she had to do was telephone the theatre and the pleasant voice at the other end would tell her yes or no (STR, Aug. 10, 1946, p. 13).

The plan was made authentic by judging the product on the film ratings of Parents Magazine. General Manager R. J. (Bob) O'Donnell subscribed for the publication for each city manager, who in turn copied the ratings for the month and sent them to each local theatre manager. The manager then posted the ratings in a conspicuous spot so that when a parent phoned for the information it could be immediately given.

Successful—For a While

Well, that plan was successful—for a while. But memories are short, dialing a phone often becomes an effort, and the calls became fewer and fewer. Here was a service of infinite value to the parent. Under no circumstances should it be discontinued. But the parents' interest was dwindling. What to do.

The solution was reached by accident. One of the circuit's small town managers, without asking anyone, started his own personal classification system and inserted in his daily newspaper ads, opposite the title of each picture, the symbols, "A" which stood for Adult, "AYP" which stood for Adults and Young People, and "F" for Family. This manager was unwise in attempting to classify each picture himself, and Interstate executives took him to task for this, but at the same time he had found the answer to the problem.

On a Trial Basis

Nearly a year and a half ago circuit officials decided to adopt the plan for their Dallas theatres on a trial basis. As a result, parental reaction was favorable, and there have been many favorable letters and verbal compliments on the plan. Complaints against the movies from delinquency-conscious sources has been eliminated.

A campaign has now gotten underway to install this classification system in all Interstate theatres throughout Texas. The Dallas trial was quietly instituted, but now all publicity stops are being pulled out to insure maximum attention and public relations values. Special ads, radio and television are being utilized. Personalized letters have been sent to the heads of the Parent-Teachers Association and other organizations. The campaign is being coordinated with the announcement of new Junior Prices.

Classifications are established by a committee of women in Dallas known as the Dallas Motion Picture Reviewing Board. Their designations are being used in the newspaper ads of Interstate theatres throughout Texas.

"We look at this way," explained Interstate Executive Secretary John Q. Adams at the recent All-Industry Public Relations Meeting in Chicago. "Hollywood can't make all pictures suitable for children. In fact, Hollywood has been criticized for not being realistic enough. There will always be pictures produced for adult and mature consumption. As long as these pictures are well made, are entertaining, and meet certain standards of decency, Hollywood has no responsibility whatever thereafter. It is entirely the responsibility of the parents to screen their children from pictures which they not only should not see, but often cannot understand and do not enjoy.

"We think it is our job as exhibitors to extend ourselves to the utmost to inform parents what kind of pictures we are offering. We tell them plainly right in our newspaper ads, if they will only take a moment to inspect them. What more can any exhibitor do? We are delighted to have hit on this solution to the problem, and feel very confident now that we are properly serving our communities. . . .

"We think it is the decent thing to do, and when all is said and done, what could be a better definition of good public relations than that?"

'Cluster' Dates Set for 'Ichabod'

Something new in motion picture-launching has been introduced. There have been saturation and penetration bookings. Now comes along RKO Radio with a series of key city "cluster" dates on Walt Disney's "Ichabod and Mr. Toad," starting Columbus Day. These "clusters" will stem from exchanges, it seems, and dates in the more important surrounding grapes—pardon, cities—will be sparked with an elaborate exploitation campaign.

Day-and-Date Plan

First "clusters" in the new day-and-date plan include New England, Boston and Buffalo, Oct. 12, with Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Minneapolis and Oklahoma City the same day. All of Canada will break Oct. 10, which is a holiday similar to our Thanksgiving. Other pre-release dates are Washington on Oct. 5 and New York on Oct. 8.

Breaking late in October will be Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Des Moines, Omaha, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. Kansas City and Milwaukee will break early in November; Salt Lake City and Denver at Thanksgiving, and Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas, Memphis and New Orleans at Christmas.

For each of the playdate "clusters" there will be a large newspaper display carrying the respective territorial dates. This series of key ads will augment the regular theatre advertising. Radio and television will be used by RKO's field men under Terry Turner.

Columbia Plans Star P. A. Tours; Swanson Hits Road for Paramount

The star personal appearance trend claimed a new convert last week when Columbia Pictures announced that, "in the interest of more localized promotion of product in key release cities and in keeping with the growing trend for closer relations between the studio and the exhibitor," a plan was being worked out whereby one or more of its stars and contract players would take to the road during the coming fall and winter season in conjunction with openings of important pictures.

The announcement said that the studio would schedule the stars and players at times when they would not be actively engaged before the cameras in other productions or would not interfere with studio production schedules.

On the list to participate are John Derek and Jerome Courtland, Columbia's two young male players being groomed for stardom, Broderick Crawford, Randolph Scott, John Ireland, Gene Autry, Gig Young, Lucille Ball, Janis Carter, Barbara Hale, Lola Albright, Evelyn Keyes and others.

Will Take Schedule Up to Spring

The group of pictures in which the personalities appear include "Miss Grant Takes Richmond," "And Baby Makes Three," "Tell It to the Judge," "All the King's Men," "The Nevadan" and "Tokyo Joe." This group of personalities and productions will take the schedule up to the early spring of 1950.

Plans are now being worked out between the studio and the home office distribution departments in New York for the scheduling of the routes.

Meanwhile, from Paramount's Hollywood studio Gloria Swanson left last week for a tour throughout the country on behalf of "The Heiress."

With her trip modeled somewhat after that Henry Wilcoxon made in behalf of "Samson and Delilah," Miss Swanson will discuss "The Heiress" with newspaper editors, civic groups, men's and women's clubs, service organizations, university and other educational groups. Her plans were to fly from Hollywood to New York, then start the tour to all key cities which will continue until Nov. 1.

Miss Swanson, a long-time queen of the silent screen, recently returned to Hollywood to star in Paramount's "Sunset Boulevard," now completed.

From Monogram came word that its western star, Whip Wilson, has been set for a four-week personal appearance tour starting Oct. 10. Accompanied by Monica Lane and his western band, Wilson will open in Amarillo, Texas, and then make appearances in theatres of the Interstate and Jefferson Amusement circuits, as well as independent houses. The tour will be under the personal supervision of Jim Schiller, who will accompany the troupe.

And Universal-International, which was right in there pitching when the star personal appearance trend got underway, is arranging a tour of a different kind in connection with J. Arthur Rank's "Christopher Columbus." Not the stars, but the costumes and properties used in making the picture, will be exhibited throughout the country in grammar and high schools.

The exhibit, which will tour under the guidance of Leigh Mason, technical adviser on the film, will include displays of costumes, charts, maps, set models and other properties used during production.

get the school children to name the men who discovered other important places in the world. A third contest suggested is an essay on Columbus with students writing on some aspect of his life, with local dignitaries to sit as judges. Presumably for ploughing through the scripts of America's future Hemingways, the judges will be allowed to see the show for free.

Classroom Guide

In addition, Universal is furnishing material to serve as a classroom guide on Columbus. Another angle is to see if schools will not dismiss the children earlier so that they may attend the show with possible reduced rates offered as additional bait.

And if Universal is remembering the schools, it is not forgetting the libraries. Displays and bookmarks plugging the film but also intended to stimulate reading on the life of a fabulous character, who literally dined with kings and almost literally died in chains, are ready for use. In fact they have been tried even now at Loew's Poli, in Hartford, Conn., by Manager Lou Cohen, who worked a novel angle in getting cooperative tieups with merchants around the theme "Columbus Discovered New Values."

The tub-thumping 11, however, who are going into the field for this job, probably will be a footsore crew when they are through. For the campaign, which is hitting hard for the student angle, is not neglecting the community tie-in. This includes a "Christopher Columbus" ball, preferably a fancy costume ball, which can be tied-in with local fraternal organizations—the Knights of Columbus, if they be willing. In fact, one of the pitches will be made to bring the local Knights into the premieres wherever possible. Then, if there is an Italian community in the city (and what city has not?), the exploiteers will try to get it to cooperate on a street fair in which display material from the picture will be featured.

Boat-Building Contest

Also, those who like to work with their hands and make things, will probably find that a boat-building contest is being conducted right in their midst, the boats—pardon us ships—of course, to be models following the lines of the trio Columbus sailed into the uncharted mystery of the new world.

In the advertising field, radio has not been overlooked. There are nine radio transcriptions available to plug the film. There will be 1,200 agate lines of newspaper ads in 250 cities "and," according to the Monroe Greenthal agency which handles the U-I account, "probably some magazine spreads in color."

There is also a plan to tie-in with merchants of products using the name Columbus or Columbia (Columbia Pictures will not be barred, U.I says).

Cigar Store Indian

There is, too, a tieup with the American Cigar Institute, with the cigar stores of the nation scheduled to step forward and give a helping hand. The basis of this tieup is that Columbus brought tobacco back to Europe. On this ground the cigar industry is tieing-in with a stunt built about the old wooden Indian which used to be as indigenous to the cigar stores of the past four decades as the barber shop pole is to the shave- and hair-cut establishments unto this day.

The New York premiere at the Victoria will have the usual fanfare with Actor Fredric March attending and with a pre-premiere showing on Oct. 11 as a benefit for the Seamen's Institute in New York.

In addition, the E. A. Laboratories of Brooklyn, which yearly print an institutional message as "a public service," will devote their page space this year to Columbus Day with stills of the picture brightening the copy.

All in all, the old navigator-weaver-intriguer-explorer is doing quite a job of showmanship. But why shouldn't he? After all, the man who discovered America was something of a showman, too.

He made an egg stand on its end to delight a Castilian court and to confound a heckler. Remember!

Ethel Waters Tours Theatres for 'Pinky'

Ethel Waters, one of the featured players of 20th-Fox's "Pinky," made a three-day series of personal appearances this week at Skouras, RKO, Randforce and Warner theatres throughout the metropolitan area. The tour covered the five boroughs and metropolitan New Jersey.

COOPERATIVE AD above, prepared by Columbia, is designed to boost the readership of local newspapers, permit the exhibitor to participate in the industry drive for institutional advertising and at the same time create interest in local engagements of "Jolson Sings Again." Space is left at bottom for theatre signature and playdate, while space in panel permits newspaper to plug its Hollywood correspondents and local writers. Plan is to have the theatre arrange with a local newspaper to run the ad as a promotional piece.

Hobby Lobby

Col. L. B. Fuqua, owner and operator of the Kentucky in Eddyville, Ky., was the subject of an illustrated feature article in the Louisville Courier-Journal, the angle being his hobby of collecting autographed first-day cacheted covers. The colonel has some very famous names on these philatelic items.

Navy Aid Set for 'Task' in Boston; Bows in Memphis

Full cooperation of the United States Navy will mark the opening of Warner Bros.' "Task Force" at the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston on Oct. 13, it was announced this week.

The picture will be screened aboard the U.S.S. Kearzage, a sister ship to the U.S.S. Langley (portrayed in the film) for top Navy personnel, newspaper and radio executives, and local civic officials. Heroes of the U.S.S. Langley and other Navy carriers will be guests of honor at a dinner aboard ship to precede the showing of the picture.

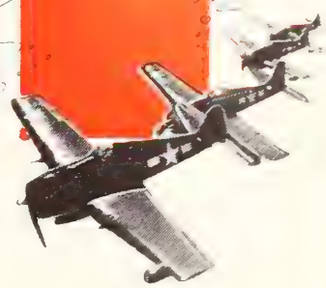
A squadron of airplanes will fly overhead on opening day and spell out the letters "T F." Communications will be set up from one of the planes to the ground, with Chick Morris of radio station WBZ doing the receiving and broadcasting same over the air. The Navy will also supply a huge display of airplanes and miniature Navy equipment to be exhibited in the theatre foyer. In addition, a mobile unit will be stationed outside the theatre with appropriate signs crediting the picture and playdate.

A Navy blimp will carry the message, "See Task Force Now Playing at the Metropolitan Theatre."

A contest, tied-in with a local newspaper, will select "Miss Task Force for a Day," with the winner to have hero-escorts to the premiere. Newspaper reporters and photographers will cover their tour of Boston following the showing of the picture.

Southern Premiere

Meanwhile, the Southern premiere of "Task Force" got off to a strong start in Memphis late last week when the picture opened at the Warner Theatre, with a monster Navy parade honoring Admiral H. Martin and Capt. J. V. Peterson, Commander of the fleet and Captain of the carrier featured in the picture. Capt. Peterson led the parade behind a 65-piece Naval Air Station band with a mounted police escort of 14 units, including a contingent of Waves, battalions of Marines, Navy marchers and sea scouts. Also in the parade were Navy heroes who were carrier pilots in the sections covered in "Task Force," plus a Navy Queen and maids of honor selected by the carrier pilots and Navy League of Memphis.



Preceding the parade, a dinner was held for Admiral Martin, attended by high Navy officers and representatives of the press and radio. Afterward, a premiere broadcast was made in front of the Warner featuring the Navy band, Admiral Martin, Capt. Peterson and Commander Condit, the carrier pilot shot down at Midway and a Japanese prisoner for two years.

The proceedings, broadcast over radio station WMPS and also over the loudspeaker system, were rebroadcast the next evening in front of the theatre, which was brilliant with huge Navy lights, with hundreds of signal flags flying from roof to marquee.

On the Square

It seems that Emmy Dickman, 20th Century-Fox dynamic veteran Buffalo salesman, really won the Variety Club golf tournament and the Mike Shea cup connected with it, on the up and up and not by default, forfeit, etc. Emmy and Dr. Marvin Milch were tied in the tournament and in the playoff, Emmy won and was awarded the cup. Al Fitter, Paramount office manager and head booker, had low score but inasmuch as he is not a member of the Variety Club he was not entitled to win the cup. At the time the cup was donated to the Variety Club by the late Michael Shea, it was stipulated and understood that only a member of the Variety Club could or would be entitled to win it. This explanation is made here in justice to Emmy.

TORONTO

While the 10-cent devaluation of the Canadian dollar will not be followed immediately by any change in quotas on imports from the United States, it was learned from a government source, it will mean a higher cost to exhibitors on advertising accessories from the states, but the U. S. film cost is practically unchanged. Films imported from Britain, however, will eventually be somewhat cheaper while revenue to British producers from exhibiting their pictures in Canada will become less. Import permits are based on Canadian dollars and not on the quantity of goods. Monetary allotments were being increased to compensate for the Canadian reduction in the value of its dollar, thus maintaining the merchandise ratio.

The annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Association of Ontario will be held in Toronto's King Edward Hotel on Nov. 1. The association is supporting a move on the part of the motion picture branch of the Toronto Board of Trade to seek a reduction in Ontario's 20 per cent tax on amusement admissions on the grounds that theatre operating costs have been increasing. The BOT film branch considered the province's tax situation at its Sept. 27 meeting.

KANSAS CITY

The Wyandotte County Planning Board last week gave its consent for a new 1,000-car drive-in theatre to be built in the Rosedale district on the Kansas side. The permit went to Dr. Paul Gatzoulis, Mission, Kans., veterinarian; it will be his first theatre. It will be the fifth major drive-in in the metropolitan area. While it will be a "rural" site, the actual property for the new theatre is just 700 feet outside the limits of Kansas City, Kansas. It is scheduled for opening next spring.

Golfing honors at the third annual film row stag last Monday (26) at the Santa Fe Hills Country Club went to Jack Braunagel. The Commonwealth circuit's drive-in man had a 62 on the par 58 layout. He was a prize winner at last year's event likewise. Second went to Paul Millberger of the Gauntier Theatre, Kansas City, Kans. About 100 turned out for the buffet dinner. The affair was arranged by Tom Baldwin, Columbia; Bob Shelton, Commonwealth circuit; Ralph Morrow, Universal; and Martin Stone, Screenland.

PRODUCTION PARADE

By Ann Lewis

The option of Ann Blyth, currently on loanout to Samuel Goldwyn for one of the top roles in "With All My Heart," has been exercised by Universal-International for another year.

Curt Siodmak has been signed by RKO to write the screenplay and direct "The Man He Found," slated for spring filming by Producer Herman Schlom. This mystery tale is based on an original by Roy Hamilton.

Robert Stillman, who was associate producer on "Champion" and "Home of the Brave," acquired screen rights to the popular radio program, "Queen for a Day," and plans this film as one of three productions now in preparation for major release by Robert Stillman Productions.

Producer Scott R. Dunlap's first Allied Artists production on his 1949-50 schedule will be "Land of the Sky-Blue Waters." Dunlap will produce this picture in Hollywood prior to his departure for England, where he will make another for AA.

Cary Grant has been signed by MGM to play the title role in a new adventure film "Ferguson," to be produced by Arthur Freed. The screenplay, written by Richard Brooks, who will also direct the film, will provide Grant with an exciting departure from his recent comedy portrayals.

Anson Bond of Emerald Productions has signed Elmer Clifton to direct his forthcoming film "Vicious Years," which is due to start sometime in October for release by Film Classics.

Producer Peter Scully and Director William Castle have formed a new independent film company called Motion Pictures, Inc. They will produce two pictures yearly with the first scheduled to roll the middle of October. Initial property, based on an original story by Castle, is titled, "It's a Smart World." A releasing deal is presently being sought.

Dennis Morgan and Betsy Drake will be co-starred in Warner Bros.' "Pretty Baby," which Bretaigne Windust is set to direct.

Contract of Alfred Werker, recently signed to direct RKO's "Eye Witness to Murder," has been extended to a long-term deal. Werker directed the Film Classics release "Lost Boundaries." Production of "Eye Witness" will be handled by Jack Gross.

Diana Lynn, presently working Columbia's "Rogues of Sherwood Forest," on loanout from Hal Wallis, had her option renewed for another year by the producer upon his return from England. Miss Lynn, who plays the leading role in Wallis' "My Friend Irma," is due to make "Irma on Vacation," sequel to the original film, now in release.

Nancy Olson, who went from college into the leads in two top movies, gets another break by being given the romantic interest role opposite Bing Crosby in Paramount's "Mr. Music." This forthcoming musical, which co-stars Charles Coburn, will have Robert Stack playing an all-round sports ace. Production is set for the end of October with Richard Haydn directing and Robert Welch producing.

Why Not Situation Drama?, Asks Hal E. Chester

Situation comedy is generally accepted these days, why not situation drama? That's the question advanced by Hal E. Chester, who is currently producing "The Whip," for United Artists release.

"You need no longer depend on dialog for laughs," Chester points out, "why can't you get tense drama over by getting your characters into situations that are suspenseful in themselves?"

The youthful producer who not so long ago was a child actor, and who guides the "Joe Palooka" series for Monogram, believes that "The Whip" will demonstrate his point effectively when it is completed.

"This is entirely situation drama," he says, "and the situations might happen to anyone. Everyday people are involved, and they react just as anyone in the audience might react to the same circumstances."

Hal E. Chester

Chester claims that nowadays those in the audience no longer identify themselves with the hero. They are sympathetic rather to the predicament the hero gets into, and wonder how they would act under similar conditions themselves.

Chester believes that once a story is ready to tell, a producer need only be certain that he develops his characters by making their costumes and personal habits recognizable, to avoid long explanations in dialog. Then if he has cast his picture skillfully, sound entertainment is guaranteed. He points to the choice of Dan Duryea and Herbert Marshall in his current film as ideal casting. Duryea, previously established in other films as a heel, is here given a part which shows that while he is weak, he might react manfully under certain conditions. The audience will not be sure, and its pleasure will be enhanced by the doubt. Marshall, on the other hand, is driven as far as he would be expected to be driven, before showing his true character.

On choosing a story, Chester has only one rule. "I pick them for their entertainment value," he says, "not to fill out a program need. If there isn't a story telling need, I don't think the picture should be made."

Six Editors Shearing Eleven Films at U-I

Six editors are assembling and editing 11 pictures on which shooting has been completed at Universal-International.

Busiest of the group is Frank Gross, who has three Technicolor films in various stages of editing. They are "Comanche Territory," "The Kid from Texas" and "Curtain Call at Cactus Creek." Other editors and the films they are shearing are Ralph Dawson, "The Big Frame" and "Free for All"; Milton Carruth, "Fugitive from Terror" and "Francis"; Russell Schoengarth, "Ma and Pa Kettle Go to Town" and "Bagdad" (Technicolor); Otto Ludwig, "Buccaneer's Girl" (Technicolor), and Edward Curtis, "The Story of Molly X."

Filmakers Close Deal With RKO for 3

Filmakers, Inc., the Ida Lupino-Collier Young-Malvin Ward company, which last week canceled a distribution deal with Film Classics over "Never Fear," this week entered a distribution agreement with RKO for three pictures. "Never Fear" is not included in the RKO deal, which covers "Nice Girls, "Pachuco" and a third, untitled. All three will be made on the RKO lot.

Douglas as the Son In 'Glass Menagerie'

Kirk Douglas, who recently completed "Young Man With a Horn," will portray the role of Tom, the son, in Warners' "The Glass Menagerie," scheduled for production in October. Jane Wyman will play Laura, the daughter. Jerry Wald and Charles K. Feldman will co-produce, with Irving Rapper directing.

Menjou Works in VC Heart Fund Short

With Monogram donating its stage, equipment and crew facilities, Adolphe Menjou over the weekend worked in a short as part of the Variety Clubs' drive for funds to combat heart disease. The subject, with Menjou making a plea for donations, will be shown in theatres during the fund-raising campaign.

Sarecky to Guide Lippert Kid Comedies

Barney Sarecky will produce and direct the series of six one-reel Western Kid Comedies to be made by Lippert Productions for its current year's product. The subjects are to be completed by December. First two are titled "White Phantom" and "Showdown at Sunup."

Three to Co-Star

Eleanor Parker, Patricia Neal and Ruth Roman will co-star in "Rock Bottom," story of unwed mothers, to be produced for Warner Bros. by Milton Sperling's United States Pictures Co.

Studio Roundup

Although only four new pictures went into production during the past week, there was a new twist in the call for extras. Of the human element, Columbia used about 150 for two of its pictures now shooting. But from circuses and zoos George Emerson, one of Hollywood's foremost animal experts, lined up lions, chimpanzees, giraffes, llamas and assorted other animals as extras in MGM's "Reformer and the Redhead," which co-stars June Allyson and Dick Powell.

The four films started last week included a Charles Starrett western, "Trail of the Rustler," which Ray Nazarro is directing at Columbia; another "Bomba" picture at Monogram for Johnny Sheffield, with Ford Beebe directing; RKO's "Carriage Entrance," with Robert Stevenson directing Ava Gardner, Melvyn Douglas and others; and "Twilight in the Sierras," another Roy Rogers Trucolor film at Republic.

3 Independents Start

Although starting dates are somewhat vague on films away on location, we have added three independent productions to the lineup just to be sure we have them in work, regardless of exact camera time. These are: "The Dark Road," shooting in Rome with Janis Paige and an Italian star, Massimo Serato; "Beloved," shooting in Mexico with Paulette Goddard and Pedro Armendariz; and "A Dog's Life," shooting in Michigan, with Harold Lloyd, Jr., and Cathy Downs.

A long list of featured roles were handed out to players at Universal-International for the Crane Wilbur picture, "Outside the Wall." Set were Signe Hasso, who hasn't been in a film since she played opposite Ronald Colman in U-I's "A Double Life" two years ago, and Anne Pearce, Lloyd Gough and Henry Morgan. An international flavor was given to the studio's "Deported," Marta Toren-Jeff Chandler costarrer to be shot in Rome, when deals were closed with Claude Dauphin, popular French star, Silvio Minciotti, and Mimi Aguglia, Italian actor and actress.

Release Canceled

While Sally Forrest of "Not Wanted" fame was checking-in at the Kabet-Kaiser Institute at Santa Monica for the role she is to play in "Never Fear," that of a dancer stricken with polio, Director Ida Lupino and her husband, Collier Young, were canceling release of the film by Film Classics. Negotiations are on for another release, but meanwhile shooting will continue.

'Glass Heart' Set by Cummings for Columbia

"The Glass Heart," an original by Marty Holland, has been set by Robert Cummings as his independent production for Columbia. The picture, to be made under the banner of California Productions, will star Cummings and is scheduled to go before the cameras early in 1950.

Subject on Japan

Japan's democratic progress since VJ day will be shown in a two-reel Technicolor film, "The Light of Asia," to be made on the Nipponese islands by Warner Bros.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Packed House Acclaims Variety Club Benefit Function; Daily Express Film Ball Lacks Zing of Previous Years

By JOCK MacGREGOR

The Variety Club, despite the devaluing of the pound, the sacking of more technicians and threatened crises in the industry, has called the London melody this week. Tent No. 36 had a royal send-off when H.R.H. The Duke of Edinburgh attended its first public function, the Midnight Matinee at the Coliseum. A packed house saw a performance rivaled only by the Royal Command for talent, and enthusiastically acclaimed the fifteen acts headed by Gracie Fields, Gigli, the Inkspots, Borrah Minevitch's Harmonica Rascals and Joe E. Brown.

Jock MacGregor

Over £7,000 (a lot of sterling at any rate of exchange) was raised for the National Playing Fields Association. A most gratifying aspect of the evening was the turnout which, while representative of all sections of London life, was dominated by show people. Exhibitors and renters were prominent and this augurs well for the future of the Tent, for it is on their support that a great deal of its success depends.

Happiest man in the Coliseum was unquestionably International Chief Barker Bob O'Donnell, and when I met him during the interval with C. J. Latta, he said he thought it was the greatest show he had seen and was determined not to be late back in his seat for the second half. It was a proud moment for him to see the heart of show business capture the heart of London.

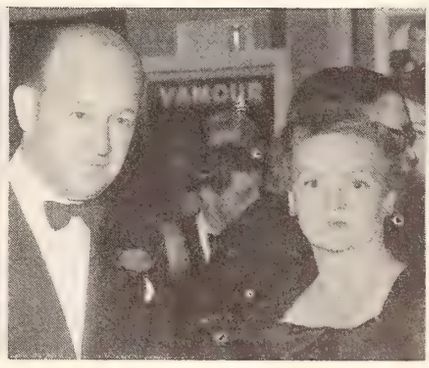
The previous night, Bob O'Donnell had had another slice of British showmanship at the Daily Express Film Ball at the Albert Hall where he met many artists headed by Jane Wyman, Robert Montgomery, Joe E. Brown, Jane Russell and Richard Todd, London's sensational discovery.



Though the band strummed selections from "Oklahoma!" for the third year, the evening lacked the zing of previous years. British topliners, unlike their American cousins, were as conspicuous by their absence as at the Venice and Cannes festivals. LONDON VARIETY CLUB OFF TO ROYAL START

An all-star show featuring some of the finest artists of the stage, screen and concert hall launched the first public charity event sponsored by the new London Variety Club. The event, which raised 7,000 pounds for the National Playing Fields Association, attracted a brilliant audience to the midnight matinee at the Colisseum Sept. 22. In photo at top: C. J. Sands of Iwo Jima (Republic). Principals: John Wayne, John Agar, Adele Mara. Director, Allen Dwan. Plot: The bitter personal feud between a corporal and a sergeant of Marines, prior to the taking of Tarawa, and how it is settled after that battle when the two go on to Iwo Jima is the basis of this story.

—suggested rival camps and detracted from the party spirit. On checking, I discovered the companies had to pay for the privilege of being represented.

Executives were in the minority, but the Associated British directors were strongly represented by Sir Phillip Warter, C. J. Latta, Jack Goodlatte, Dr. Fletcher, MP, and Robert Clark. I noticed BOT President Harold Wilson talking with Film Finance Corporation's J. H. Lawrie and no doubt observing where the money goes. Sidney Bernstein was gloating over the Music Hall hit of "Under Capricorn.' Sir Michael Balcon, John Woolf, Sidney Myers and Eric Fredman were others I saw.

It was not till next morning I learned why, at one period, I had been mobbed by autograph hunters. Apparently Christine Norden, to escape, had told them I was Richard Widmark.

While the proceeds go to the CTBF, I cannot understand why the industry does not manage these shows themselves. Such occasions cost the producers much, but since this dance is organized by one paper, the resultant publicity is small in relation to outlay.

Jane Russell received the press at the Savoy. She is here to appear in vaudeville under the new partnership of George Routledge and Gordon White. George joined the Rank group under their executive apprenticeship on demob from the Commandos and worked through the different departments. Incidentally, they have handled the publicity for the Jane Russell show themselves with noticeable results.

Uncertainty always breeds rumors. The current crisis is responsible for the following: 20th-Fox will buy the Shepperton Studios; the Aga Khan will finance Korda to the tune of £2 million, and the pictures will be made at Denham.

Recently, a young enthusiast challenged me for suggesting the press could force a picture on the screen. Columbia's "Dark Past" was slipped into a suburban house without playing the West End. A magazine critic caught it, gave it a good review and the Critics' Circle asked for a screening. As a result of the notices, the film was immediately booked into the first-run London Pavilion.

Returning to the office recently I was greeted with a strange smell. After a search, my nose led me to the mail to discover that H. Clayton Nutt's latest hand-out for the Broadway, Eccles, was impregnated with alleged perfume. He would have us believe in this tieup for "On an Island with You," that the native girls use it for "allure." Incidentally, critics attending the preview of Disney's "So Dear to My Heart" were presented with a bottle of "Lavender Blue."

Maurice Wilson tells me that Monogram have bought the American rights to Grand National's "Murder at the Windmill."

Appearing in the Broadway version of "The Chiltern Hundreds' is Diane Hart, a young British actress whom I am sure will go far on the screen. I shall be extremely interested to see if the Hollywood talent scouts do not recognize her ability.

Sorry to hear that Hope Burnup has had to return to the Middlesex Hospital for a reconstruction operation. She is in the Howard de Walden ward and would love to hear from friends.

ON A SILVER PLATTER TO CLIMAX M-G-M's SILVER ANNIVERSARY!

"The picture will stand as an epic for this or any year. Flawless direction. Mounting tempo grips its audience relentlessly." —MOTION PICTURE HERALD

"A remarkable picture with terrific emotional impact, relieved by choice comedy. A masterpiece. One of the outstanding attractions of the year." —BOXOFFICE

"The picture for which the industry and the public have been waiting. Loaded with exploitation ammunition, a natural boxoffice winner. Only William Wellman could have directed it." —HOLLYWOOD REPORTER

 ©CIB 213170

"The cutting humor of 'What Price Glory,' the eloquence of 'Journey's End,' the pathos of 'All Quiet on the Western Front,' the adventure of 'Hell's Angels,' the sentiment of 'The Big Parade' have all been combined in this truly extraordinary celluloid achievement. Dore Schary rates a vote of thanks from every industryite."

—DAILY VARIETY

"Here is the big film of the war made since the firing ceased. Hard-hitting, realistic and dramatic."

—MOTION PICTURE DAILY

"From the studio that made the unforgettable 'Big Parade' comes an equally unforgettable 'BATTLEGROUND.' Bold, brash, bawdy, frank, the script furnished by Robert Pirosh is stacked with incident."

—FILM DAILY

"Far and away THE picture of World War II. It will thrill men and women alike. The campaign being put behind it by M-G-M, probably the company's strongest in years, should insure top grosses in all situations."

—SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW

"Topnotch! Crammed with suspense, comedy, melodrama and everything needed to make it potent at the boxoffice."

—THE EXHIBITOR

"The first great picture to come out of Hollywood treating World War II. A memorable motion picture emerges as a super entry."

Is Hollywood Clicking?

A smart national circuit created a potent slogan as the keynote for its new movie season campaign and it reads: Hollywood Is Clicking.

A close inspection of your various trade journals for the past month or two would hardly bear it out. To judge from the lack of trade advertising and presumably, the lack of pictures good enough to advertise and shout about to the trade, one would be more apt to arrive at the conclusion that Hollywood and the whole industry, with the exception of a very few aggressive companies, has gone into a tailspin.

We had begun to believe that the jitters which gripped the industry for the past two years was beginning to ease up and from all indications the company balance sheets seemed to be bearing this out.

Then, the majority of the companies suddenly decided they didn't have so much confidence in themselves and their product, after all.

Comes again the jitters, or at least symptoms thereof, over the latest foreign market development brought on by devaluation. So in Hollywood film company biggies huddle over plans to tighten the studio belt to offset the devalued funds frozen in foreign lands. On this particular problem we sympathize with the film company biggies. No sooner do they set up what looks like a workable formula than some government edict or international horse-trading upsets the apple cart. At the same time one wonders if the game is worth the candle.

It seems to us there were some pretty good arguments set forth many months ago to the effect that it would pay U. S. film producers to concentrate on the domestic market to the extent of utilizing all the resources of brain- and man-power to turn out pictures that will please American theatregoers and at production costs that would permit a profit from earnings over here.

Some time ago the exhibitors were advised by a distribution executive that the film company does not have to guarantee a profit to the theatreman when it makes a deal to rent a film. It seems equally reasonable that the theatres don't have to guarantee a profit to the producer on every picture he makes.

The effort to get the most out of the American market—by pictures that will please and attract theatregoers turned out at costs that permit a profit from this, the biggest single market in the world—promises some very nice long-range benefits. Certainly it is worth the effort required to make pictures that will draw big audiences and worth the effort and relatively small expense of proper showmanship and selling within the trade.

Let George Do It!

If there's a job of good-will building to be done by any one spokesman for the industry at such public events as dinners or convention gatherings, we can't think of any one better qualified for the job than Screen Actor George Murphy.

On a previous occasion this corner paid its respects to George for his exceptional abilities as a spokesman for the industry and an ambassador of good-will. And with the passing of time and his repetitions of great performances in the role of Mr. Speaker for the Movies, our regard for him rises even higher.

The industry owes a lot to George Murphy for the amount of time and effort he has given to these public appearances. His accomplishments in the role of speaker are nothing short of brilliant and match some of the great performances (such as his portrayal in "Battleground," for example) on the screen.

We think there should be an award for such loyalty to the industry and such great talent in representing it at public gatherings—and we think George Murphy should get it.

Enemy or Ally?

Television, source of so much speculation as to what it would do to movie theatre attendance, was taken right into theatres this week for one of the big national events of the year.

The showings at Fabian's Fox Theatre, Brooklyn, Pinanski's Pilgrim in Boston, B & K's State Lake in Chicago, Comerford's Westside in Scranton and St. Cloud Amusement's Tower and Oriental in Milwaukee, demonstrated the potential of television for big events as an ally of screen entertainment.

Thus, while there were a lot of people wondering about television and the theatre, smart showmen just went to work exploring its profit possibilities at the box-office.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

EXHIBITION

In New York, or the Bronx if you want to be technically correct, crowds poured out the subway at 160th Street and headed for the Yankee Stadium. The World Series race was on and exhibitors across the country began to worry about their matinee trade. The big event is conservatively estimated to hit about 25 per cent of the afternoon trade in 25 per cent of the nation's theatres, a fact which the average showmen can do little about beyond flashing the score by innings on the screen or keeping a scoreboard in the lobby.

But this year six theatres in five cities did something to meet this competition. It joined it. (Page 7). Large-screen television in the Boston Pilgrim, the Brooklyn Fox, the Chicago State Lake, the Scranton Westside and the Milwaukee Tower and Oriental, brought the game play by play to audiences which cheered, booed, ate peanuts and popcorn and got up for the seventh inning stretch.

In Washington another bill to reduce admission taxes—this time from 20 per cent to five per cent—was introduced by Sen. Wayne Morse, (R. Ore.). Its chances? Not too good. In Hattiesburg, Miss., exhibitors who had sought to fight a state blue-law closing their houses on Sunday at 6 P.M., were permanently enjoined from violating the law. The exhibitors had counted on the fact that no jury would convict, but now they face contempt sentences if they operate.

Out in Missouri, the Dickinson Circuit was moving into first-run situations at Joplin and Springfield, where Fox Midwest hitherto was the sole first-run. In Hagerstown, Md., exhibitors find business there down another 10 per cent which makes it 25 per cent off in two years, and out in St. Louis a round table conducted by Mid-Central Allied showed that while film rental is the most important topic for the small-town exhibitor, it is outranked by availability and run in the estimate of the large-town subsequent-run operator. Meanwhile national Allied has added 730 new members in its 20 units and Michigan Allied elected Ed Johnston president.

And from Sikeston, Mo., the Malone Theatre corrects STR by pointing out that it and not the Sikeston Drive-in had first-runs on "Duel in the Sun," and "The Paradine Case." Further the Malone says it will have first-run on "Portrait of Jennie."

LITIGATION

The South Side Theatre of Hollywood revealed this week that it had asked the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the bidding practices of RKO and Paramount. The Justice Department meanwhile granted RKO a six-month extension to put divorce into effect. The company was supposed to drop its theatres by Nov. 8, 1948.

In Medina the Schine circuit failed in an effort to prevent reassignment of the Princess and Temple Theatre leases to their owners as a result of a pool dissolution arising out of the consent decree Schine signed in an anti-trust suit brought against it by the Government. In Rochester, preliminary arguments in the suit by Exhibitor Charles V. Martina against Dipson circuit and Emile Muller over an alleged breach of contract on Muller's part in connection with the Lyell Theatre, were heard. And in Kansas City, Fox Midwest's Granada was being sued for a total of $20,000 in separate actions by two Negroes who were refused admission.

GENERAL

Distributors, studying their exchange system with a view toward economies, apparently believe that they can't do much about cutting down the number of branches. The Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen, meanwhile continued its talks with exchange heads for higher wages, and out in Hollywood the 45 low-budget producers who comprise the Independent Motion Picture Producers Ass'n had voted to disband in protest over the attitude they think unions take toward them. Indications that they would try to battle the unions through the Taft-Hartley Act and other methods were seen.

In New York, meanwhile, an inter-union battle which threatened a split in the Associated Actors and Artistes of America was in progress with the Screen Actors Guild apparently threatening secession over a new "Television Authority." Sag had announced it would not tolerate its members being compelled to join another union to make films for video or to appear on live telecasts. Hints were that if Sag seceded from the 4A's—Actor's Equity, American Guild of Variety Artists, American Federation of Radio Artists, American Guild of Musical Artists (opera), Chorus Equity, Screen Extras Guild, Sag, and the actors' religious guilds,—it might unite with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes or with the American Federation of Musicians. If it goes to the AFM it will be an ironic twist for it was another quiet, soft-speaking AFM president, Joseph N. Weber, predecessor of the turbulent Jimmy Petrillo, who gave Actors' Equity a hand years ago. Weber reportedly told New York legitimate houses which were opposing Equity that musicians might refuse to work non-Equity houses.

In Baltimore the Maryland State Board of Motion Picture Censors found that "the moral qualities of motion picture had reached an all-time low," an echo of remarks made by the Legion of Decency Chief and reported that of 11,418 miles of film reviewed, only five films had been rejected altogether and parts had been eliminated from 219 others.

Financial: Columbia — Net profit 52 weeks ending June 30, 1949, $1,507,000, or $1.08 a share compared to $565,000 or 40 cents a share last year. Republic—Net for 39 weeks ending July 30, 1949, $730,-116.93, compared to $62,577.62 last year. The Commerce Department reported film dividends for August were down to $511,000, compared to $7,716,000 for August, 1948. The Securities Exchange Commission reported that Jack Cohn sold 500 shares of Columbia stock between Aug. 11-Sept. 10, leaving him with 48,568 shares, and that Lehman Bros., had sold all the RKO $1 par common — 4,835 shares — it owned.

Video Threat Is Weaker

By BILL SPECHT (News Editor)

Television today is less of a threat to motion picture theatre business in those areas where there are regular and selective video programs than it has been at any time since it first appeared on the horizon.

This doesn't mean that it can't become a more serious threat to the box-office in the near future. Nor does it mean that it can't threaten the nation's entire box-office front in a slow period of years to come. But judging from a survey in New York, video right now is less of a headache to the exhibitor, even in his dreams and imagination, than it has been in the past.

In August, 1948, this reporter made a check of the situation, and the picture he saw then was not too alarming. This week he made another check and the picture is more rosy now than it was then. At the time one of the surveys was conducted in a neighborhood which was selected because it contained "expensive apartment houses rising above others which if they don't meet the legal or technical definitions of a tenement certainly suggest the conditions which the word usually connotes."

Recheck

This same area was revisited. There were no marked changes in buildings insofar as the general situation was concerned. There was no marked change in the attendance at various bars in the neighborhood. Business was still good. But there wasn't the overflow crowd seated at tables with their eyes glued to the video receiver. Not that the beer drinkers were not looking at television. They were. But it had to be fights, baseball or wrestling. Every bartender in every bar agreed to that. Other programs were not popular.

There is nothing astonishing in this. Besides the sports craze which exists in the average American, it remains that boxing and wrestling are the things television does best. The camera doesn't have to be too active to keep up with them; the action area is comparatively small.

At all places the customers looked at television, but they weren't standing on each other's heels to do it. Television was being accepted now as a regular thing. It wasn't a novelty any more which caused you to look at it regardless with breathless interest.

The same thing seems to be applying in the home. Last year the family rushed through dinner to sit in rapture before a glass square or a glass circle in a darkened living room, and neighbors paid much-too-regular calls on the families that had a video receiver. This year the family seems to have found there are other things in life. Even bridge and gin rummy are staging a comeback. Movies as a matter of

World Series in Theatre Debut

Crowds Cheer Video Version Of Pennant Classic Shown By 6 Houses In 5 Cities

The World Series Wednesday made its debut over theatre television before audiences in six houses of five different cities who cheered, booed and were frequently bored at what turned out to be an all-around successful pickup of a difficult large-screen video event.

The cheering was directed at the plays in some of the earlier parts of the game. The booing was reserved in some instances for players and in others for the commercial, advertising Gillette, which the theatres had to run as part of their contract with Mutual Broadcasting, and which turned out to be the usual type of commercial. The boredom was the fault of the game which earned only one run and which early turned into a pitchers duel which, while technically a dream, lacked the color for which the fans put out their cash.

But SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, which had reporters at all scenes of the theatre telecasts excepting Scranton, found that all in all the initial telecast of the world series was a success technically and from an attendance viewpoint. Audiences for the first game ranged from near sell outs to good houses.

Six Houses

The theaters which contracted with MBS for the event were: The American Theatres Pilgrim in Boston; The Fabian Fox in Brooklyn; the Balaban and Katz State Lake in Chicago; the Comerford Westside at Scranton; the St. Cloud Amusement Company's Tower and Oriental at Milwaukee.

In Brooklyn the 4,100 seat Fabian Fox was almost sold out though empty seats could be seen in the auditorium. The audience seemed on the whole satisfied with the telecast of the game, though Brooklyn, being the home of the Dodgers, found that the cheering section had a tendency to yell for the Bums and boo the Yankees. There was some cheering for the latter also. When the Yankees made the lone score on a home run in the second half of the ninth, a large number of the audience got to its feet cheering.

Not Up to Standard

As to definition the television picture was not up to motion picture standard. However, this in part may be excused by the fact that light clouds covered the sky and a haziness

A prisoner of the Jefferson County Jail in Louisville seemed to be bored with his usual activity, and while unloading a truck at the jail as a trusty he managed to slip out and proceeded to the National Theatre where he bought a ticket, went in and started to watch the show. A theatre employe making rounds noticed the escapee's jail uniform and immediately telephoned the authorities. The jail guards came over to the theatre and promptly captured the escapee. Since the theatre had opened but a short time earlier, only a limited number of seats were occupied making it easy to spot the prisoner.

Would Cut Tax to 5%

Sen. Wayne Morse, (R. Ore) last week introduced a bill into the Senate at Washington calling for reduction of admission taxes on amusements from 20 per cent to five per cent. What chances it has is an open question.

The measure, which would eliminate certain other excise taxes altogether, also calls for a Tax Commission to study the nation's entire tax structure, including the overlapping of federal, state and municipal excise taxes.

Declaring that he considered excises taxes unsound "for I believe they hamstring business incentive because they are unfairly discriminatory in nature," Morse pointed out that the high wartime rates had been enacted as economic control measures, "with a clear promise on the part of the Congress that, come the end of war they would be removed."

FTC Asked to Investigate Paramount, RKO Bid Policy

Southside Theatres Charges Unfair Trade Practices On 4 Features Offered

The Federal Trade Commission in Washington, D. C. acknowledged this week that it had been requested by Southside Theatres, Inc., of Hollywood, Calif. to investigate the bidding activities of Paramount and RKO in connection with two pictures from each company but declined to give details.

While the FTC's silence was in accordance with its rules not to divulge information on any complaint before it acts, reliable sources said that the complaints alleged unfair trade practices. This allegation was based on the assertion that neither company would make public the bids it received and neither company pledged itself to sell to the highest bidder but apparently reserved the right to consider all bids and then sell to whom it pleased, regardless of the amount of the bid involved.

May Go to Justice

The same sources indicated that the complaints, though possibly within the scope of the FTC's activities, might be turned over to the Justice Department insofar as the latter federal agency was immediately concerned with allegedly unfair trade practices within the motion picture industry and that the two companies against which the complaint has been lodged have signed consent decrees with the Government.

In Hollywood, Marco Wolff of South Side Theatres, Inc., made public correspondence he had conducted with the two companies and that which he sent the FTC. This correspondence revealed that RKO had offered "Strange Bargain" and "Roseanna McCoy" for bids while Paramount's offer for "competitive negotiations" involved "Top O' the Morning" and "My Friend Irma."

Different

That the two companies operated somewhat differently was evident in that RKO advised Wolff that his bids must be made direct to Daniel J. Loventhal of the RKO legal department at the home office in New York, while Paramount assumably lets the bids be handled by its Los Angeles branch manager.

In his reply to Paramount Wolff said in part:

"You do not state that the offers received from the exhibitors are to be disclosed to them, so that they have the same information which, you will have. . . . Furthermore, you do not promise to make contracts with the exhibitors submitting the best and highest offers. We therefore assume that you do not intend to make contracts with the prevailing bidders, or with any exhibitor on the basis of the offer submitted by him, but that. . . you intend to make contracts for the pictures with any one and on any terms you may choose."

A similar reply was made to RKO. Southside Theatres operates the South Side.

No Exchange Cuts Seen

Major distributors have been conducting a constant study of exchange operations with a view to trimming expenses but have not decided to cut down the number of exchanges they operate domestically, it was reliably learned in New York this week.

The exchange heads all denied that they planned to lop off exchanges and were almost as certain that they did not plan any further cuts in personnel. The general answer from the sources queried was: "We're satisfied with things as they're running now. We don't plan any cuts."

Last year exchanges had tried to lop off salesman and had experimented with telephone and letter selling only to learn that to sell a picture it still takes a man in the field.

Extend RKO Time

RKO this week won a six-month extension of time from the Justice Department in which to carry out the divorce provisions of its consent decree. The decree had originally provided for divorce of RKO's production-distribution from its theatre operation by Nov. 8. Announcement of the extension was made by RKO President Ned E. Depinet and not by the Justice Department. This is the second concession made to consent decree signers by the government, the first being to Paramount, which was granted an easing of terms on income tax payments by stockholders part of whose dividends were to be held in escrow.

Series in Theatre Debut

seemed to hang over the stadium during the larger part of the game.

As seen at the Fabian Fox, the sun peeped through enough for a very short time so that the shadows of the players reflected themselves on the ground, but most of the images during the run of the game were on the hazy side, which made the faces of the players scarcely distinguishable at times, excepting during close-up shots.

In addition there was, part of time, a ribbon of darker density extending vertically across the left side of the screen, which varied in width from approximately half a foot to two or three feet. No reason for this was obtainable as STR went to press.

Robert Jamieson of Dumont Television Studios, who was in charge of the pickups, declared that the images left the park clearly and were seen very distinctly on the average television receiver. Jamieson used four "supersensitive image orthicon" cameras to pick up and placed his cameras well.

Better Camera Work

Indeed this world series broadcasts showed a number of improvements from a camera coverage angle and gave a wider view of the plays than usually noted on television. Jamieson even had a camera in the bull pen and another, equipped with telephoto lens, was placed behind the pitcher so that it could give a pitcher's view of the game.

The fans at the Fabian Fox seemed to like it. Fabian used RCA large screen theatre television and offered the game with Warner Bros. "White Heat" and Columbia's "Kazan" as a double bill for $1.20.

In Boston, a disappointed city which found that its home team was not in the swim and that two from the city of New York were gave Sam Pinanksi's Pilgrim Theatre a crowd of 2,000 for the first world series broadcast over theatre television in the city's history.

The disappointment over not having a home town team in, which manifested itself as the advance sales ($1.25 and $1.80) dropped off, seems to have been dissipated though. An American Theatre executive said that sales now indicated that the theatre will be filled for the remainder of the series.

The crowd reacted like a ball crowd—noisy when unusual plays were made. The reaction on the whole was splendid. Ample comment on the excellence of the accommodations were heard, with the majority of these comments being to the effect that the fan was more comfortable in the theatre than he would have been at the ball park.

Box Lunches

A stunt which the Pilgrim pulled by serving box lunches at noon also drew praise for the patrons, some of whom had come in at 10 A. M.

As to visibility most of the fans seemed leaned to the belief that the plays on the screen were clearer than they would have been at the park and that they were "right on top of the plays." The crowd also seemed surprised to find that an improved technique, plus a large screen, gave a good view of field and players.

In Scranton, Comerford put on the series at its West Side on a purely experimental basis. Originally Comerford had not been able to get clearance from the Federal Communications Commission because of a temporary microwave relay line needed to get the images from the Scranton Times. The Commission reversed itself and the house put on the series, charging 30 cents admission and offering no features. RCA large screen television equipment was used.

In Chicago more than 2,200 baseball fans paid $1.25 each to see the first of the world series games at the Balaban and Katz State Lake Theatre.

Intermediate System

The show was brought in over the Paramount intermediate system, which records the video image on film and then passes it through projectors. However in this instance the actual reception of the image and developing of the film took place in B&K's Chicago where the Paramount equipment had been installed and the film rushed to the State Lake across the street. First pictures reached the screen at the State Lake approximately 20 minutes after the game started and were somewhat hazy due to mist on the playing field. But as weather cleared the images became much sharper.

State Lake management had no complaints on the show and expect an even larger crowd during the remainder of the series.

Two Houses, Same Town

In Milwaukee, the St. Cloud Amusement Company's Town and Oriental both put on the World Series over RCA's television system. The Tower drew an attendance of about 1,000 and the Oriental about 1,400, which amounted to about two-thirds of the capacity of both houses. However, the audience seemed pleased. The reception of the telecast was good excepting that it was somewhat cloudy during the first three innings and during the seventh and eighth innings, the image flickered, due possibly to atmospheric conditions. Milwaukee fans paid an admission of $1.25.

Schine Loses Medina Suit; Dissolution Is Upheld

Schine this week lost another round in its Medina Princess Corporation fight when the Cuyahoga County Court in Ohio upheld the original leases. Directors of the corporation, which owned both the Temple and the Princess, had voted to dissolve the corporation and reassign the leases to the owners. Schine, which had operated the houses in a pool, claimed the reassignment was improper and sued for a received to wind up the affairs of the pool and offer both houses at public sales. The court denied this. M. S. Fine and P. E. Essick of Cleveland head the Medina Temple Theatre and the lessees had been Schine and Mrs. Ethel Yudelevitz, each owning a half interest.

Heat, Too

Moonlite Movies, a new drive-in located near Santa Clara, Calif., owned by Golden State Theatres, is slated to open Oct. 21. The open-airer will be equipped with individual car-heaters for winter operation. Ben Stevenson has been named manager. He was formerly at the Parkside Theatre where Bud Sears is now in charge. Roy Young, assistant manager of the Noe Theatre, was made manager when Sears left for the Parkside.

No Effect, Yet

Devaluation has not made itself felt at the British box-office, Sir Sidney Clift, head of the Clifton Cinemas of Britain, declared this week upon his arrival in New York.

As to future effect, Sir Sidney said: "I have no idea," adding that he did not think the Government itself knew. Business has been off for the summer in England but good product continues to draw good business, he declared, adding: "If you get the right product the business is good."

Sir Sidney said he was in New York only on a visit.

David E. Griffiths, president of the Kinematograph Renters Association, who accompanied Sir Sidney, declared he was also visiting and expressed interest in television.

Paramount Wins Stockholder Suit

Attempts by Stockholder Sol Kokol of Brooklyn to force Paramount to buy his stock in the present company for cash before it split up under the consent decree received a set back Monday when the New York Appellate division of the Supreme (state) court reversed a decision of its lower branch favoring Kokol. (In New York the Supreme court is approximately the same as a county court in other states. Appeals from it go to the Appellate Division and the to the Court of Appeals, which is similar to the Supreme Court in the majority of states.)

Reverses

The Appellate court found that the split of Paramount under the decree did not constitute a voluntary dissolution in the sense of the state statute. This statute provides that when a company dissolves or transfers its assets it must receive stockholder approval and dissenting stockholders have the right to have their stock appraised and be paid cash for his stock by the company on the basis of the appraisal.

Kokol, who had not approved the consent decree transfer of assets, sued under the statute and won in the lower court which appointed appraisers. Appellate court reversed the lower court. He may still appeal to the Court of Appeals in Albany.

Miss. Blue Law Fight Is Lost

Blue-law fighting exhibitors of Hattiesburg, Miss., seemed to have taken the count in their struggle this week when a state court made permanent a temporary injunction which ordered them to comply with the state curfew statute.

The law allows theatres to operate from 1 to 6 P.M. on Sundays, but requires them to close after that. It is thought to have been designed to prevent competition with churchgoing and exhibitors in Hattiesburg had decided to nullify it by defiance, fairly certain that no jury would convict them since the measure is unpopular.

Injunction

The mayor sought an injunction however, which was issued temporarily by Chancellor Lester Clark on Aug. 20 after public disorders which resulted in almost 200 arrests had resulted. In making the temporary injunction permanent Chancellor Clark said he did not think much of the law but had been impressed by the exhibitor defiance and the resulting disorder.

Sells Industry to Sell Seats

Baltimore exhibitors' business-boosting program, built around the idea that by boosting movies as an institution business at the box-office will in turn be boosted, swept through its fifth successful week Thursday with every indication that it would run for months to come as the first striking example of what showmen could do for themselves by cooperating.

The campaign, which is based on paid advertising and free space, is directed at hammering home to the public that movies offer a wealth of direct benefits to the audience — Relaxation, Recreation, Stimulation, Information, and pleasant surroundings for children as well as grown-ups.

Exhibitor Financed

It is financed entirely by exhibitors and the contributions present almost a united front which crosses affiliated and non-affiliated battle lines. Of 126 theares in the Baltimore area, 115 are footing the bill.

"It is the first time in local history that independents, circuits and downtown houses have united in a city-wide cooperative effort," Joe Walderman, exhibitor who fathered the plan, said. "The program involves a minimum expenditure of $20,000."

The program, which is planned by the Azrael Advertising Agency for the contributing exhibitors, was originally endorsed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland after Walderman had presented it to them. But it caught on rapidly and non-members joined the campaign with their contributions.

The Baltimore exhibitors contend that running a movie house is no longer a matter of selling an individual picture. Today, they say, the question that a customer asks himself is not, "What picture shall I see," but instead:

"Shall we go to the movies, or the prize fight, or a dance, or shall we take a drive in the car or call on friends, or go down to the corner tavern and look at television?"

To Get Them Going

"So," Walderman points out, "we are not selling a particular picture or specific theatre. We are showing the people why they should go to the movies. We are trying to merchandise and stimulate the movie-going habit, just as the Florists' Association sells the idea of sending flowers."

The campaign involves separate sub-campaigns to attract each of what its sponsors consider the backbone of theatre attendance. These are the housewife, dating couples, the working man and children. (See illustration at right).

The campaign includes half-page newspaper ads which run twice weekly plus many smaller spaces which tie the campaign together. In addition it runs to local radio time with cooperative announcements and with street car cards, billboards, strips, store posters and other media.

Free Space

By tieups with taxis, local restaurants and transportation companies, the campaign actually is getting approximately as much free as paid lineage.

The Azrael Agency works out the ads in association with a committee which consists of Chairman Walderman, Elmer Nolte, Lauritz Garnan, Leon Back, Louis Gaertner, I. N. Rappaport, William Allen, L. E. Green, Jack Wittle, Oscar Coblentz. Exhibitors who are interested in further details may write Walderman at the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, 531, N. Howard St., Baltimore, Md.

HITTING STRAIGHT FOR THE BACKBONE of theatre attendance is the campaign put on by Baltimore exhibitors aimed at increasing movie going by selling movies in general to the public. Top panel shows a general appeal ad used in cars and busses. Below it is a street car and bus card run for free by transportation lines. Lower left is an ad designed to put the idea in Mother's head, who after all puts the ideas in Father's. Right top is ammunition for Junior and his Miss, and right bottom hits right at . . . well you guess.

Although the plan originated several months ago when the box-office was sagging, the support for the campaign is as strong now, even with better business. Walderman puts this down to a keener exhibitor realization of the facts.

"The local exhibitors realize that the lush period of the past seven years is over," he declared. "That it takes more than simply listing attractions to do enough business to meet 1949 costs. It takes team work on the part of all exhibitors to revive the movie-going habit and it takes keen cooperative thinking instead of individual competition."

fact were never out of the picture as far as family interest was concerned.

What's more, television has lost out to radio several times this year so far as the bar trade is concerned. Each time there is a big sports event which is broadcast but not televised, the bars shut off the video receiver and the crowd gathers around a portable radio which is usually put up on the back bar. To add insult to injury, Wednesday night when the Washington Senators licked the Boston Red Sox 2-1, there were bars where the television set was showing wrestling and boxing, but where the customers were gathered around the radio set to hear a radio account of the game. The account was not even broadcast from the ball park. It was brought to the studio by telegraph and then reeled off by a sports announcer!

Theatres in the Field

Meanwhile theatres themselves, in a few instances, it is true, have taken a more active interest in television. The World Series, which probably interests more Americans at the moment than what Russia is going to do, were booked for theatre telecasts this week by six theatres in five different cities. There is evidence that had equipment been available and had the facilities to pick up the signal on the series been greater than they are now, that a number of larger first run-houses would have jumped on the series band wagon.

Judging on the evidence of the first game, which from the viewpoint of the showman was a stinker, since it had little flashing action and was based on a duel of pitchers, the idea of showing special events in theatres is sound, even though they lack color. The future may prove this assumption wrong, and present evidence does not apply to smaller houses.

But it was a tremendous step forward in experimentation and one which should answer some of the questions the Federal Communications Commission wants to know about theatre television before it grants frequency allocations for that purpose. The theatres which tied in with this event are pioneers. They may eventually prove saviors.

May Prove Lesson

In fact, when this series is over, exhibitors who tried it may find that they have discovered a lot of what's wrong with theatre television. One thing that faces them is that while sets in the home and the bar reduce pictures, theatre television has to blow them up. And in this expansion the defects stand out. Will the future of theatre television demand that separate cameras pick up the theatre events from those intended from the home receiver? That's a good question, for on the home receiver the event, much smaller, looked better, from all evidence, than the theatre showing, even though you couldn't see what was what in many instances.

Another thing that may be brought to light is whether theatres need cable service or whether they can pick it out the air. The New York Paramount, most consistent experimenter, has tried both. Fabian's Fox used cable. Yet there were times when the signal was not good. Comerford's Westside used an air pick up. Which is going to be the better method?

Pioneers

Incidentally, it appears that Fabian has pioneered in one respect. The extra profits television brought in will not increase his film rental. Apparently both Columbia and Warners, whose product play the Fabian bill, have agreed to take an average on what the matinees ordinarily bring as a basis for film rentals and not demand the extra "something" which the video shows brought in.

Wants Money's Worth

A man-that-wasn't-there caused the State Theatre in Hollister, Calif., to bounce back an admission price. Playing MGM's Spencer Tracy starrer, "Edward, My Son," the cashier found an angry customer in front of the box-office after the show. After much argument the payment was returned. The refund slip under "reasons" gave the cause. It read: "Edward didn't show."

DR. E. H. HONAN, who among other distinguished accomplishments, helped the commercial development of stereophonic recording, this week joined Altec as engineering manager. Prior to that Honan had been engineering manager of Western Electric's Electrical Research Products division.

Rent for One, Run for Another

What's sauce for the small town independent exhibitor is not sauce for the independent subsequent-run exhibitor in larger cities, it was emphatically demonstrated this week as a result of the directors' meeting held by the Mid-Central Allied Independent Theatre Owners at the Hotel Sheraton in St. Louis.

Round table discussions held by the directors showed that while film rental is of vital importance to the independent in smaller locations, it is not as important to the independent subsequent-run exhibitor in larger cities as availability and run. The round table discussion concerned itself with buying and booking in various areas of the territory.

The directors elected William H. Hoffman of the LaMar at Arthur, Ill. as board chairman and appointed a new executive committee consisting of President Henry Holloway; Vice-President Jeff Jeffries; Secretary-Treasurer Hugh M. Graham, Charles Beninati and Hoffman.

Dickinson Adds 3, Will Seek 1st Run

The Dickinson Circuit, operating in western Missouri and eastern Kansas, this week moved to step into two more major situations when it took over two houses in Springfield and one in Joplin, Mo.

The houses—the 1,000-seat Tower, the 850-seat Granada in Springfield and the 850-seat Glen, formerly the Show, in Joplin—will be remodeled and converted from subsequent to first-runs late in October, Circuit Chief Glen Dickinson said. He added he expected to get product, for both situations in which Fox Midwest now operates, through bidding, a system which enabled him to reopen the Crystal at Topeka, Kansas, under a first-run policy.

The three new houses now bring the Dickinson circuit up to 36 under-roofers and three under-skyers.

PCCITO to Hold 'Exhibitors' College'

An "exhibitor's college" to offer refresher course on current problems will be a highlight at the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners' Convention at Sun Valley Oct. 15 - 17, Board Chairman Rotus Harvey announced.

Committees composed of exhibitors best informed on such subjects as competitive bidding, arbitration, maintenance, drive-ins, exhibitor-distributor relations, print handling, local checkers, contracts, family series pictures, National Screen, labor relations, daylight saving time and national taxation, will give the instructions.

"Everyone of us spends thousands of dollars educating our children but few of us spend anything to keep up on our business," Harvey said, discussing the plan. "School teachers, professional men, take refresher courses each year so they will be able to keep up with the changing times. We have to do the same."

Canada Delays Action On Public Relations

The Motion Picture Branch of the Board of Trade at Toronto this week delayed recommendations on public relations program presented to it by the Canadian Motion Picture Industry Council. The decision not to act was based on a desire to study the proposal made at the all-industry conference to be held in Ottawa Oct. 12-13.

Iron Curtain No Bar To American Movies

To Irving Brown, European representative of the American Federation of Labor, American films are not only "a vital and indispensable force in spreading American democracy abroad," but they're also getting the business in the Iron Curtain countries. Brown, back from Europe, told the AFL convention in St. Paul: "I have seen it demonstrated time and time again that American motion pictures are more popular with the masses of the people than the films of any other nations." Speaking of U. S. films in Czechoslovakia, he said: "Getting tickets to see them is tougher than pulling a strike in the salt mines of Siberia." Russian pictures, he claimed, often play to almost empty houses.

A SIREN SONG OF SELLING ANGELS!

Listen:

It's rich in that basic audience ingredient—rapturous romance.

It's startling in its drama of a wild temptation that whispered to a duty-bound wife, "Surrender—Surrender—Surrender!"

It's scored with enchantment by a new Hit-Parade-headed sensation, "Song of Surrender," written by famous composers Victor Young, J. Livingston and Ray Evans—and sung by Buddy Clark.

It's irresistible as it brings back the voice of Caruso to thrill a new generation as he sings the songs the whole world loved.

Merchants, 4-H Help Karp Sell 'Green Promise'

Manager Harry Karp of the Temple Theatre, Viroqua, Wis., is mighty proud of a letter he received recently.

"I want to add my congratulations to the many I know you must have received," the letter read, in part, "for your very complete and showmanly handling of 'The Green Promise.' . . . [it is] an example of a complete and intelligent handling of a picture with specialized appeal."

The congratulatory message came from RKO Radio's Director of Advertising, S. Barret McCormick, as the result of the fine campaign engineered by Karp on "The Green Promise."

Karp began his activities one month in advance of the film's showing. At that time he held a private screening for 4-H Club leaders in Vernon County.

From then on, things were humming. Following conferences with the 4-H leaders, county agent, assistant county agent, home maker and leading merchants, it was decided to make the campaign a 4-H tribute to Vernon County 4-H Clubs.

The merchants tied-in solidly. All in all, there were 10 windows devoted to 4-H Club work and advertising the picture. Five-hundred postcards were sent to Vernon County 4-H Club members.

Karp was invited to attend the 4-H Club picnic a few days before the film was scheduled to open.

"I was introduced to the entire crowd," he reports, "and was given as much time as I wanted to speak to them over their p.a. system on the picture, which I took full advantage of."

One-sheets were posted in store windows in both Viroqua and surrounding communities. Double-truck layouts promoted from the merchants appeared in the two local newspapers, and these newspapers were distributed house-to-

53 Openings Set for 'Intruder in the Dust'

MGM has set 50 openings in Mississippi on "Intruder in the Dust" for this month and three for Tennessee. Starting with the world premiere of the picture at Oxford, Miss., which will be attended by Claude Jarman, Jr. and Elizabeth Patterson, appearing in the film, and Clarence Brown, producer-director, subsequent openings will follow in Memphis and Nashville, Tenn.; then Columbus, Tupelo, West Point, and Starkville, Miss.; and then Jacksonville, Tenn.

After Jacksonville, the balance of the openings will be in 45 Mississippi cities and towns.

Bogart Tours Neighborhood On Behalf of 'Tokyo Joe'

Humphrey Bogart made a series of personal appearances at 10 Loew neighborhood theatres in New York on Wednesday and Thursday evenings in behalf of his latest Santana starring production, "Tokyo Joe." The Columbia film will open in mid-October at the Capitol Theatre.

Wide Awake Krolick

No one has ever accused Arthur Krolick of the Buffalo Paramount of sleeping on the job. For the showing of "I was a Male War Bride," he put the house on a 24-hour basis and advertised that those who came in around 4 A.M. thinking they could take a nap were in for a disappointment for "the laughs of other patrons will keep them awake." Stunt pulled in extra business.

Lipton Calls Meet On Film Campaigns

Promotional campaigns for forthcoming Universal-International releases during the November to February period, will be set at a series of meetings at the studio called by David A. Lipton, U-I's national advertising and publicity director, Studio, home office and field representatives will attend the meetings and screenings starting October 8.

Present for the conferences will be Al Horwits, studio publicity director; Archie Herzoff, studio advertising manager; Henry A. "Hank" Linet, eastern advertising manager; Charles Simonelli, executive in charge of national exploitation; Phil Gerard, eastern publicity manager; Ben Katz, mid-west field representative with headquarters in Chicago, and Cliff Brown, west coast field representative.

Screenings of "Francis," "Free For All," "Woman in Hiding," "East of Java," "Bagdad," "The Story of Molly X" and "Ma & Pa Kettle Go to Town" will be held at the studio.

Paramount People Contact 1,200,000 During P. A. Tours

With Gloria Swanson the latest to "hit the road" on a six-week nationwide tour for "The Heiress," during which she will meet with newspaper editors, civic groups, service organizations and university and educational groups, appearances in a period spanning the past 30 days and the next 60 will bring Paramount studio personalities into contact with an estimated 1,200,000 people, the studio revealed late last week. Additionally, local press and radio interviews are expected to bring the travelers into contact with an estimated 50 million more. Several top-bracket personalities are included, acting as "ambassadors of goodwill" on behalf of many forthcoming and current releases.

Producer-Director William Wyler, in New York for the world premiere of "The Heiress" at Radio City Music Hall this week, has been meeting with the press and radio people and area exhibitors.

Marie Wilson has just completed a 35,000-mile tour during which she has been exploiting "My Friend Irma." She has covered 11 cities.

Corinne Calvet has been "meeting the people" in major U. S. and Canadian cities and telling them about "Rope of Sand," in which she debuts.

Bob Hope, who recently returned from Michigan appearances, takes off soon for another swing of a half dozen major U. S. and Canadian cities, during which "The Great Lover" and "Fancy Pants" will be exploited.

CALLS FOR CELEBRATION. Laurence Olivier's "Hamlet" last week completed one year's continuous run at the Park Avenue Theatre, New York, so Universal-International officials thought it proper to do a little celebrating. At the theatre (left above) a huge birthday cake is cut by Miss Marion Hopkinsons-Hopkins—who has seen the picture 24 times as a paying patron—assisted by U-I Vice-President John J. O'Connor. At right, closeup at the speaker's table during a luncheon of U-I officials hosted for the press at 21 Club, as President Nate J. Blumberg accepts on behalf of J. Arthur Rank a scroll awarded for "Hamlet" by New York University's Washington Square College of Arts and Sciences, with Dean Thomas Clark Pollock making the presentation.

20th-Fox Goes Beyond Nation, Plans 'Prince of Foxes' Global Premieres

Time was when a premiere in Hollywood was something to hear about and marvel at, but seen by few. Then someone decided that if it could be done in Hollywood, why not New York? And so Hollywood and New York became premiere cities.

But despite all the hoopla and bright lights and celebrities and all that sore of thing, you couldn't impress the greatest number of people with the importance of a premiere if you confined it to Hollywood and New York.

So other large cities came into the orbit—Chicago, St. Louis, Atlanta, Miami, etc. That was ringing-in more people, but it still wasn't enough.

Why not have simultaneous premieres, with the picture bowing in two or more cities at a time? No sooner said than done, and it was successful. More people were reached—but couldn't even more be reached?

Yes, they could—through area premieres and saturation premieres and penetration premieres in which pictures were set to open simultaneously in certain territories, with hundreds of theatres taking part in day-and-date openings branching out from principal cities as the hubs of activities. Stars and other celebrities came on from Hollywood to make the occasions even more glamorous and impressive and to attract more people.

Had Nothing on Them

More people? Yes, more and more people were finding out what a premiere was really like. Hollywood and New York had nothing on them. You could maybe even live in Hidebound, Mont. (don't look that up) and become just as familiar with premiere procedure as did the folks who inhabit the territory around Hollywood or New York. The Hollywood klieg-light affairs were being brought to the masses.

Now it looks as though the premiere boys are out to tackle the world. For 20th Century-Fox announced last week that "Prince of Foxes" will have—not a one-city premiere, not an area premiere, not a saturation premiere, not a "cluster" premiere—but a ten-nation global premiere with fifteen of the major cities of the world opening the picture in November, running day-and-date with the film's domestic premiere at the Roxy in New York.

The theatres and cities are all lined up, too: Luxor, Buenos Aires; Rex Cine, Anvers, Belgium; Eldorado or Eden, Charleroi, Belgium; Liege Palace, Liege, Belgium, Palacio, Rio de Janeiro; Bolivar, Quito, Ecuador; Cairo Palace, Cairo; Odeon, London; Roxy, Hong Kong; and the Central Caracas, Venezuela. In addition, the picture will open in Australia; Bogota, Colombia; Cali, Colombia; and in Paris at theatres yet to be designated.

Each city involved in the mass premiere will give the picture a lavish celebration. The mass launching is scheduled during the first two weeks of November following large-scale advertising, publicity and exploitation campaigns in each country.

There you have it—a global premiere.

Future possibility: a planets premiere with openings taking place simultaneously on Earth, Saturn, Mars, Venus, Neptune, etc. Stars (the Hollywood kind) would attend via specially chartered and bannered rocket ships.

IMPRESSIVE DISPLAY. This special lobby display for MGM's "The Barkleys of Broadway" was set up at Loew's State, Providence, by Manager Maurice Druker. Note how Druker also incorporates a plug for the MGM Cartoon, "The Little Orphan," into the exhibit.

Showing for Handicapped

Manager Morris Rosenthal of Loew's Poli, New Haven, Conn., screened "The Stratton Story" for physically handicapped persons in the area, admitting them free.—HFD.

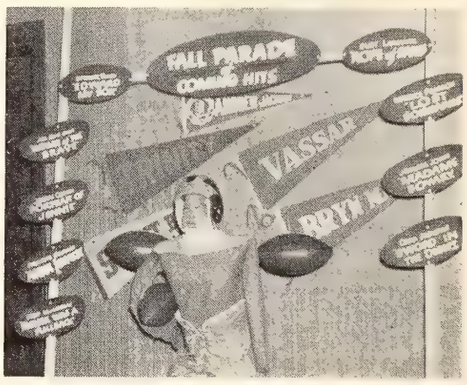
'Abandoned' Bows In Detroit as Aid for Hospital Fund

Under sponsorship of the Detroit Times for the benefit of the Salvation Army's Booth Memorial Hospital Fund, Universal-International's "Abandoned" had its world premiere Thursday evening at the Downtown Theatre, Detroit, with Gale Storm, star, and Meg Randall, featured player of the film, aiding in the promotional campaign and making personal appearances at the theatre.

As part of the promotional activities, radio station WXYZ carried a half-hour roundtable discussion of the black market baby racket, with the program going over the American Broadcasting Company's 10-station Michigan network two nights before the premiere.

The Detroit Times conducted a Premiere Queen contest, with the winner receiving valuable merchandise prizes and a vacation trip.

There was extensive radio coverage of the premiere.



Advance campaign was handled by Ben Katz, U-I midwest advertising and publicity representative, and Harold Butchin, special U-I field representative. Charles Simonelli, U-I executive in charge of national exploitation, aided in the windup of the campaign which started four weeks ago with a special screening for the Governor of Michigan.

Oxford to Distribute 'Fame' in America

American distribution rights to "Fame Is the Spur," British film version of the novel by Howard Spring, have been acquired by Oxford Films, Vice-President Edward L. Lingsley announced last week. Arrangements are being made for a November premiere in New York.

Cleric Plugs 'Boundaries'

A special showing of "Lost Boundaries" for women's clubs, business men and clergymen resulted in a Methodist clergyman recommending the picture from his pulpit and giving to Manager Bill Straub of the Colonia, Norwich, N. Y., the names of a number of persons to whom he could write.

NO DUMMY is Leonard Tuttle, manager of the St. Albans Theatre in St. Albans, N. Y., for tieing in his "Fall Parade of Hits" with that "autumnal madness," football. Tuttle's titles are an impressive list that made it well worth his while to seek the merchant cooperation that made this lobby display possible.

Teachers Invited As Theatre Guests

Activity in the right direction to win school cooperation and goodwill was undertaken recently by Manager Richard E. Eason, resident manager of Colonial Theatres' Carolina and Rivoli theatres in Hickory, N. C.

To all the teachers in two counties, Showman Eason sent this letter:

"The Management of the Carolina and Rivoli theatres extends its greetings and wishes to convey a most cordial welcome to you as a teacher.

"We recognize the outstanding work being done by you; and in appreciation thereof, we offer our fullest cooperation at any time we may be of service to you.

"To acquaint you with our service and the quality of entertainment available in our theatres, we would like for you to be our guest at the Carolina. You may present this letter at the box-office in exchange for an admission ticket."

With the industry embarking on an institutional selling campaign, and with the school year now under way across the nation, theatremen would be making a wise move to insure educational cooperation and goodwill by following Eason's example.

Paramount People Meet 1,200,000 During Tours

in his tour for Cecil B. DeMille's "Samson and Delilah," and DeMille himself made a three-week tour with the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey circus during which he received a wide press on "Samson and Delilah," although his prime objective was to gather material for his next production, "The Greatest Show on Earth."

John Payne, who toured the southwest for "El Paso," is scheduled to repeat in key cities for "Captain China," with William Pine and William Thomas, producers of the picture.

Others who have been on tour include: Nancy Olson, publicizing "Sunset Boulevard" and "Top O' the Morning"; Lizabeth Scott, for "Bitter Victory"; June Havoc, "Chicago Deadline" and "Red, Hot and Blue"; Macdonald Carey, "Song of Surrender" and "Copper Canyon"; John Lund, "My Friend Irma" and "The Lie"; Angela Lansbury, "Samson and Delilah"; Burt Lancaster, "Rope of Sand"; William Demarest, "Red, Hot and Blue," and Dan Duryea, "Manhandled."

Manager Didn't Give Up; Milk Firm Gave In

Manager Bud Somers of Schine's Madison, Richmond, Ky., is a manager disinclined to take "No" for an answer when it comes to getting a sponsor for a kiddie show. A local milk distributor turned him down flat, but a short time later he returned to the attack with new persuasive arguments and closed for a special morning show at which the milk company admitted all kids free who brought the can top from a new chocolate milk it was introducing.

'McCoy' Coloring Contest

For "Roseanna McCoy" at the Hipp, Corbin, N. Y., Manager Lou Merenbloom had 2,000 coloring contest heralds made up on "The Adventures of Roseanna and Johnse," using black on brilliant pink stock. These were paid for by the 7-Up Bottling Company. Firearms were borrowed from a local museum for a window display and 10 merchants paid for a full-page co-op ad.

50,000 See Display

More than 50,000 persons participated in a "Stars of Yesterday" contest conducted recently by Francis Deverter, manager of the Rio Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa. Deverter had 128 photos of old-time stars displayed in front of his theatre, and persons or passersby were asked to submit correct names for four prizes. In the first week more than 17,000 persons viewed the photos, he said, and he based his estimate of the total on that one weekly figure. The display was on view for more than a month.

Skouras Theatres Aid Salute to Levittown

Marking the second anniversary of Levittown, World War II veteran community on Long Island, 30 Levittown community organizations, under the leadership of the "Salute to Levittown Committee," are staging a two-week Salute to Levittown exhibition in the lobbies of the Skouras Rivoli and Calderone theatres in Hempstead.

Formal dedication took place Wednesday afternoon with Hempstead Mayor Ernest Ashdown officiating. The exhibition was arranged with the cooperation of the committee, headed by Joseph J. Corriston; Nick John Matsoukas and Miss Thana Skouras of the Skouras Theatres community service department; Hank Lowery, manager of the Rivoli, and Ed Enke, manager of the Calderone.

Horseshoe Co-Op 'Dan Patch' Boost

A novelty in cooperative advertising put "The Great Dan Patch" across to 160 per cent of normal business at the Pix Theatre, Alva, Okla., according to a report from W. F. Deaton and J. L. Kelley of that house. First step was to promote 10 horseshoes from W. R. Frank Productions, Hollywood, which made the film. The horseshoes were gold plated and were imprinted with the picture's title.

Hide the Horseshoes

Second step was to arrange with 10 merchants to hide one of the horseshoes in their merchandise and to take a co-op ad in the Review-Courier. Each merchant's ad was very brief, and was enclosed in a pictured horseshoe, taken from one of the pressbook ad mats. Centre of the co-op page was a large ad for the film, while across the top was a large-type line: "Find the lucky horseshoe." Every shopper who found one of the shoes was entitled to guest tickets for two to see "The Great Dan Patch."

Shoppers appeared to take delight in pawing over the merchandise in each store to locate the hidden shoes, and the merchants were delighted to have so many persons enter their stores, knowing that many would make purchases while there. Without other exploitation undertakings by the theatre management, and against the opening of a new $300,000 theatre as opposition, business leaped to the 160 of normal noted above.

'Dodgers' Magic Word for Promotion

When it comes to promotion in Brooklyn, it's a cinch if it has anything to do with the Brooklyn Dodgers. For everyone is a Dodgers fan.

As one of his stunts in connection with Fabian's 35th Anniversary Jubilee, which was celebrated by all Fabian-Wilmer & Vincent theatres during August, Johnny Burke, advertising director for Fabian's two Brooklyn theatres (Fox and Strand), tied-in with the Brooklyn Eagle to print a ballot daily throughout August during which the public could vote for the most popular and the most valuable Dodger baseball team member.

While the public was voting, Johnny was promoting prizes to be awarded the winners. It was a cinch. Dealers came through with television sets, gold wristwatches, portable radios, complete men's wardrobes, electric shavers, etc. Incidentally, the prizes had to be in duplicate because of the two categories, most popular and most valuable.

It was so easy Johnny decided to go out and promote more. He came back with men's jewelry sets for the Dodger team members and simulated pearl necklaces for their wives.

Well, the team appeared at the Fox, and Branch Rickey was there to take a bow. The Dodger Sym-Phony Band opened the ceremonies by parading down the aisles. And then the prizes were awarded to Jackie Robinson, most valuable Dodger team member, Peewee Reese, most popular, and Gil Hodges, runnerup in both most valuable and most popular divisions.

It was the last night of the show at the Fox, but that made no difference to the 3,000 fans—they were on hand to cheer their favorite Dodgers.

Some promotion—some evening.

AND IT WAS ILLUMINATED ALL NIGHT. Manager Roy A. McLeod of the Vogue Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., Canada, is mighty proud of this window promotion on J. Arthur Rank's "The Perfect Woman." And with good reason, for the window is quite large (8x24 feet) and was illuminated all night. Furthermore, it is situated in a well-trafficked section. The figure of Patricia Roc, incidentally, was lifesize, and that drew the eyes of many of the boys.

Elicker's 'Pocono' Set for Wilkes-Barre Premiere

World premiere of "Pocono," independent color film made by Joe E. Elicker in the famous Pennsylvania mountains, was scheduled to take place Friday (7) at the Iram Temple, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to be followed by an indefinite engagement at the Shriners temple.

The film was to be shown in its original 16-mm. version. Although "Pocono" was produced for commercial release in theatres, Elicker said he would not permit any 35-mm. printing and national release until after the Wilkes-Barre showing, at which audience reaction was to determine if any further editing would be necessary.

Considerably Enlivened

Engagement of "In the Good Old Summertime" at the Ritz Theatre in Tulsa, Okla., was considerably enlivened through a contest which received good coverage in the Tulsa Tribune. Readers were invited to compete in an ancient car contest and also for the best-decorated jalopy or hot rod.

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST was the angle chosen for his ballyhoo on RKO's "Mighty Joe Young" by I.M.P.S. Member Leonard Utecht of the Essaness Lake Theatre in Oak Park, Ill. The manager used a 6 ft. 4 in. usher as the gorilla, local model as the frill, had them driven all over Chicago's west suburbia and used them on his stage. Homo sapiens on the right is Utecht. His assistant, Frank Pandolfi, is at the wheel.

house in all surrounding towns to those who were not regular subscribers. Both newspapers printed 800 copies above their usual circulation. Incidentally, both newspapers also gave liberal space to the special screening and the activities in tribute to the 4-H Clubs. Naturally the picture, theatre and playdate were always mentioned.

All who took part in the campaign were pleased with its results, not only from a commercial standpoint but for what it did for the members of the various 4-H Clubs located throughout the country.

4-H, 4 Page, 4 Bell 'Green Promise' Tie

The management of the Butler Theatre in Butler, Mo., promoted an unusual amount of cooperation for its recent engagement of RKO's "The Green Promise." Four full pages—two spreads—of ads built around theatre copy and playing up the 4-H Club angle were taken in the Bates County Democrat in a tie-in that involved not only retail establishments but also such organizations as a leading dairy where individual employes took part in sponsoring the film.

GRIST for the SHOWMANSHIP MILL

To create word-of-mouth comment, Paramount is sneak-previewing "My Friend Irma" in all key cities about 10 days prior to regular openings of the film. A similar policy was tried on "Miss Tatlock's Millions," and it paid off.

In a concentrated drive for Halloween business, Monogram has made available new prints and advertising accessories on 34 spook and mystery dramas previously released by the company. Included among the films qualifying for the occasion are "Suspense," "Fear," "Unknown Guest," "Spook Busters," "Face of Marble," "Isle of Missing Men," "The Living Ghost," "Revenge of the Zombies" and "Murder by Invitation."

Boston's Libraries Boost 'Quartet'

Backbone of the Boston promotion for "Quartet" at the Majestic Theatre was the popularity of the novels and short stories of W. Somerset Maugham upon four of whose short stories the film is based. Boston's main public library and all its branches as well as most of its book stores were receptive to campaign participation. Stillboards and credit cards and 10,000 credit-carrying bookmarks were distributed through the library and its numerous branches. All book stores and book sections of the department stores carrying the Pocket Books edition of "Quartet" were bannered and supplied with displays of stills. Theatre management also promoted 25 trucks which were bannered with 24-sheets.

Cooperative tieups were made with all stores in the populous parts of the city. Highlight among these was a full window in Jordan Marsh Company which featured a "quartet" of men's toilet articles along with stillboards which carried stills from each of the four stories in the film. A special screening, followed by a cocktail party, was held for all Boston newspaper critics. Newspaper society editors were invited to attend the formal opening and to bring their guests.

UNICEF Film Shown To U.N. Delegates

"For All the World's Children," a three-reel film made by Warner Pathe News to show the work of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, was screened for United Nations delegates at U. N. headquarters, at Lake Success, Wednesday afternoon.

The subject shows all phases of UNICEF operation, from the shipment of supplies in the United States, Australia and Canada, to distribution of the food to Europe and the Middle East. Far Eastern coverage includes sequences depicting malaria control and anti-tuberculosis vaccination in India, child-feeding in China and the Philippines, and particularly moving scenes made in Canton and in a Philippine leper camp. The film represents the work of 10 Warner Pathe camera crews. Distribution of the subject is being handled by the United Nations.

IF there's a Dictaphone distributor in your community, then you can duplicate the stunt used by Manager Babe Cohn of the Paramount Theatre, Kansas City, for Paramount's "Top O' the Morning." Through the lobby display shown above, patrons were asked to dictate a letter to a serviceman in a hospital. The message was then transcribed and sent to the serviceman. The tieup was very successful and acted as a direct mailing piece.

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

Treasure of Monte Cristo

Lippert Prod'ns Mystery 76 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Dealing with a descendant of the famous "Count of Monte Cristo," this mystery should satisfy the general run of whodunit fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do okay in most situations.

Plot: A descendant of Edmund Dantes finds himself accused of murder when he falls for, and marries, a young lady whom he helped out of a phoney predicament. He is close to being made to pay for his crime when he gets help and clears up the mystery.

Comment: This film, based on a continuation of the "Monte Cristo" theme, has enough suspense and mystery to satisfy the general run of whodunit fans—especially those more interested in characters and motivation than action. Cast is competent, with Glenn Langan playing a present-day Edmund Dantes, descendant of the one Alexandre Dumas made so famous. Adele Jergens is an attractive and convincing phoney heiress and Steve Brodie does very well in the role of the crooked lawyer. A police investigator is capably portrayed by Michael Whalen. Leonard Picker produced and gave the film an air of authenticity by having it photographed in San Francisco, the locale of the story. William Berke directed.

Masked Raiders

RKO Radio Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Latest in the Tim Holt series is up to par with a Robin Hood twist.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Well stocked with the elements for the regular western-action market.

Plot: A pair of Texas Rangers are assigned to bring in a gang of masked raiders but discover them to be a non-killing Robin Hood outfit protecting local poor ranchers from the harsh foreclosures of the banker. The latter's record, with that of his town marshal cohort, is further blackened by murder. Their victim's daughter is the leader of the raiders. The real villains are killed and the raiders seem headed for clemency.

Comment: The latest Tim Holt picture is up to par for his western series, being well stocked with the elements—riding, shooting, fighting—to sell it in the regular western-action market. This time there's a Robin Hood twist, the masked raiders supposed to be the villains turning out to be ranchers protecting themselves against the supposedly respectable banker and town marshal. Holt and his amusing sidekick, Chito Rafferty (played by Richard Martin), are Texas Rangers. The gal who appears oh so feminine when not leading the raiders en masque is very pretty Marjorie Lord. There's a juvenile role, that of her little brother, well brought off by Gary Gray.

It Happened in Europe

(Hungarian Dialog—English Titles)

Lopert Films Drama 93 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Visually stimulating, realistic drama of Europe's war-displaced children.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A good bet for any exhibitor who sells "class" fare. A European prize winner.

Cast: Miklos Gabor, Suzy Banky, Laci Horvath, Arthur Somlay, George Bardy and 24 children. Credits: Written, directed and produced by Geza Radvanyi. Photography, Barnabas Hegyi. Music, Denes Buday. English titles, Herman G. Weinberg.

Plot: Some two dozen displaced children forage over the land, hole-up in a ruined castle when authority threatens to overtake them. The musician who lives there feeds them, clears them with the law and finally gives them the place, but only after one of the youngest has died defending it against a posse.

Comment: The war-displaced children of Europe are dealt with once again in this Hungarian film, formerly titled "Somewhere in Europe." If there's a saturation point for that subject matter, this film is one step closer to it. "It Happened in Europe" compares favorably, however, with the notably well-made "The Search" from America and "Guaglio" from Italy, and can show in evidence of its quality several European prizes. Its peculiar excellence is that it is visually imaginative and stimulating. The eloquent camera gets along with excellent music, well chosen sound and very little dialog until near the end of the film. Less control of the dialog and rather unrestrained play upon the death of a small boy weaken the later moments. The performers are all good, especially Arthur Somlay as the wise, kindly, sixtyish musician who pleads that the children have only acted in response to the deplorable conditions brought about by the older generation. Miklos Gabor is the young man who leads the kids and Suzy Banky, as a girl among them, is attractive enough to turn Hollywood eyes. The picture is, in the postwar European mood, a realistic one. The beating of a child is so brutally conveyed as to disturb some audiences. For the exhibitor who sells "class" fare, however, this film should be a good bet.

Bandit King of Texas

Republic Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Has all the ingredients of a western to appeal to boys—young and old—who dote on action, gunfire, fist fights and thundering riding.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good for first-runs in neighborhoods and small towns. For more captious audiences, bill it under a good comedy.

Cast: Allan "Rocky" Lane, Eddy Waller, Helene Stanley, Jim Nolan, Harry Lauter, Robert Bice, John Hamilton, Lane Bradford, George H. Lloyd, Steve Clark, I. Stanford Jolley, Danni Nolan, Richard Emory. Credits: Directed by Fred C. Brannon. Associate Producer, Gordon Kay. Story by Olive Cooper. Photography by John MacBurnie.

Plot: Jim Nolan, bandit king of Texas, is luring homesteaders to Elko, selling them claims on government land, getting the deeds back, killing many of them. "Rocky" Lane comes to help a friend (already robbed and murdered) and by his derring-do straightens everything out, dealing death or imprisonment to the villain and his henchmen.

Comment: Another in Republic's "Rocky" Lane westerns that has all the ingredients of a western to appeal to boys—young and old—who dote on action, gunfire, fist fights, and thundering riding. "Rocky" acquits himself well as usual and Eddy Waller as Nugget Clark gives another of his rugged, winning characterizations. They make a good team. It is their action, plus the gaudy gun battles and rugged fist fights that will "get" the western addicts. Jim Nolan's villain is worthy of any youngster's hissing. Any suspicion of a love story is non-existent (the girls are all married) and Rocky, invulnerable to bullets and horny fists alike, rides off to new adventures. Story, production, direction and photography are satisfactory.

Abandoned

Univ. Int'l Drama 79 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A credible and always interesting story that will engage audience sympathy for its drama, naturalness and excellent acting in the chief roles.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Worth the upper half of a dual bill in the larger situations, with strong enough appeal for singling in small-town and neighborhood theatres. Not much marquee strength in cast names. The sympathy-arousing subject matter and the good acting are the exhibitor's best promotion bets.

Cast: Dennis O'Keefe, Gale Storm, Jeff Chandler, Meg Randall, Raymond Burr, Marjorie Rambeau, Jeannette Nolan, Mike Mazurki, Will Kuluva, David Clarke, William Page, Sid Tomack, Perc Landers, Steve Darrell, Clifton Young, Ruth Sanderson. Credits: Produced by Jerry Bresler. Directed by Joe Newman. Story and screenplay by Irwin Gielgud. Photography by William Daniels. Music, Walter Scharf.

Plot: Gale Storm arrives in Los Angeles looking for her missing sister, killed under suspicious circumstances after giving her fatherless baby girl out for adoption through Marjorie Rambeau, head of a black market in babies in cahoots with Gangster Will Kuluva. Newspaperman Dennis O'Keefe takes Gale in charge and they, with an assist from the district attorney, unearth the leaders of the baby-selling racket, recover Gale's sister's baby which they decide to adopt after they get married.

Comment: This drama of the black market in babies has much to recommend it: the story is credible, exciting, and always interesting; it has been nicely produced, directed and photographed, and for the most part excellently acted. Audience sympathy is won by the girl's search for her dead sister's baby, and by the friendly helpfulness of the newspaperman who realizes he has embarked on a dangerous course in attempting to uncover the lucrative black market in babies. In this, his love for the girl outweighs his newspaperman's instinct to run down a good story. Dennis O'Keefe acts the reporter with naturalness and charm, and Gale Storm is just as natural and engaging. They keep their performances down to earth. Marjorie Rambeau as the society head of the baby-selling racket, gives another of her fine "character" parts. Raymond Burr as the double-crossing "private eye," Meg Randall as an unwed, expectant mother who risks her life and baby to help expose the racket, Will Kuluva as the gangster, Jeff Chandler and Jeanette Nolan do commendable work. In the larger situations "Abandoned" is worth the upper half of a dual bill while it has appeal and excitement enough to be singled in small towns and neighborhoods. Marquee names will help little in exploiting the film; the subject matter and the good acting should be played up for all they are worth.

Black Shadows

Eagle Lion Travelog 62 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A trip through the Belgian Congo, with shots of the natives that offer plenty of action and interest and first pictures of the capture of a gorilla.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Exploitable, especially the gorilla capture and the human sacrifice of the leopard men.

Cast: Jeff Corey (narrator), Jacques Nateuil, Iris Jasinsky. Credits: Producer-Director, Andre Cauvin. Photography, Andre Cauvin and Charles Lengnich. Music, Pierre Moulaert. English adaptation, James Leichester.

Comment: New pictures, from darkest Africa always stand a chance as exploitation pictures in the proper situations. This particular one, a record of a trip through the Belgian Congo, prides itself on the first filming of the actual capture of a gorilla, but the impression it leaves is much more one of the natives than of the animals. Besides the gorilla sequence there are shots of other well-known beasts and one of an odd half zebra-half giraffe, none of them having much movement. The scenes of the natives, however, have plenty of action and interest. There are the frenzied ceremonial dancing, the traditional disgorging operations, the high jumping of the handsome giants, the curiosity of the pygmies. And there are the leopard men. Those vicious outlaws of the jungle are portrayed in a highly exploitable if not always tasteful account of human sacrifice. Aurally, there are fragments of the tireless native rhythms and narration by American actor Jeff Corey. Chiefly responsible for this production is Andre Cauvin, a well-known Belgian film man who has had previous dealings with the Congo.

Trapped

Eagle Lion Melodrama 78 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Well constructed and fast-moving melodrama of counterfeit investigators that will hold audience interest tense.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Word-of-mouth publicity will jump the attendance at every show. Exhibitors have the cooperation of the Treasury Department in filming the story to highlight campaigns, plus an entertaining, fast-moving melodramatic story.

Cast: Lloyd Bridges, John Hoyt, Barbara Payton, James Todd, Russ Conway, Bert Conway, Tom Noonan, Ruth Robinson, Rory Mallinson, Mack Williams, Stephen Chase, Harry Antrim and many others. Credits: Produced by Bryan Foy. Directed by Richard Fleischer. Story and screenplay by Earl Felton and George Zuckerman. Photography by Guy Roe.

Plot: A prisoner, Lloyd Bridges, is sprung by Treasury agents as he crosses Missouri by bus to lead them to the owner of counterfeit plates, the passing of currency from which landed him in the pen. Bridges double-crosses the Treasury agent, John Hoyt, but is eventually captured, his confederate sweetheart killed by the owner of the plates who meets death by electrocution. The counterfeit plates are seized.

Comment: "Trapped," one of Bryan Foy's last productions for Eagle Lion before going over to Warner Bros., is a well-constructed melodrama of Treasury agents hunting down the printer of counterfeit $20 bills. Foy's production and Richard Fleischer's direction keep audience interest tense through rapid, melodramatic action, including some stirring fights and a chase new to films—that of Treasury agents and Los Angeles police after the owner of the false plates through a car barn, in and out of long rows of cars, underneath the tracks and on top of the cars, with the counterfeiter being electrocuted when he touches a live wire over the trolleys. Lloyd Bridges and John Hoyt give deft characterizations that never let audience interest lag. Acting of the top members of the supporting cast is capable. While the picture may get off to a slow start, word-of-mouth reports should jump attendance at succeeding shows. While there are no marquee names, exhibitors have, for selling ammunition, the fact that the Treasury Department aided in producing the picture, and that many of the early scenes show activities of its various departments, plus an entertaining, fast-moving melodramatic story.

'The Fallen Idol'

An eight-year-old boy gets a distorted view of an accident, believes his "idol" has committed murder and out of loyalty lies and contradicts himself in such manner as nearly to do the man in. Director Carol Reed has gotten almost constant suspense out of the Graham Greene story. Sir Ralph Richardson as the suspect, who had been unhappily married to the victim, and Michele Morgan as his lover, are excellent, but Bobby Henrey as the boy "eyewitness" (once the title) dominates the scene. Viewed in New York, where it will follow "Quartet" into the Sutton Theatre, the film certainly seemed to justify the report of Showmen's Jock MacGregor from London. "Aimed at better class audiences," he wrote (STR, Aug. 28, 1948), "'The Fallen Idol' may well turn out to be a sleeper through its undeniable feminine appeal and the word-of-mouth publicity Bobby Henrey's performance will create." Since then the film has received several awards and Richardson has turned in a performance in "The Heiress" which should greatly boost his stock at the box-office. "Idol" runs 94 minutes and is handled by the Selznick Releasing Organization.

'Passport to Pimlico'

This whimsical and satirical comedy should well please followers of the British cinema and others who appreciate "chuckles rather than belly laughs," as STR's London review-in-full (June 11, 1949) put it. Dealing with a London suburb which is suddenly found to be foreign territory not subject to Britain's austerity regulations, it has no real star value but performances which range from pleasant to delightful by an assortment of characters including Stanley Holloway, Hermione Baddeley, Margaret Rutherford, Paul Dupuis and others. As Jock MacGregor wrote, "Art house patrons should find it an amusing comedy of the times and the British way of life." An Eagle Lion release running 84 mins.

Angels in Disguise

Monogram Drama 63 mins.

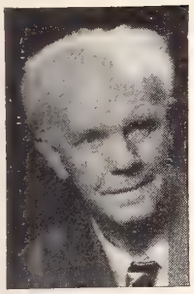
AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This latest Bowery Boys film lacks the mugging and action of its predecessors. It is slow-paced and not "exactly" what the followers of the series want.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do fairly well at the box-office but perhaps not as well as others in the series.



Cast: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, Gabriel Dell, Mickey Knox, Edward Ryan, Jean Dean, Billy Benedict, David Gorcey, Bennie Bartlett, Bernard Gorcey, Richard Benedict, Joseph Turkey, Pepe Hern, Ray Walker, Rory Mallinson, Marie Blake, William Forrest, Don Harvey, Herbert Patterson, Ray Gordon, Jane Adams, Jack Mower, Lee Phelps, John Morgan. Credits: Directed by Jean Yarbrough. Screenplay by Charles B. Marion and Gerald Schnitzer. Photography, Marcel LePicard. Produced by Jan Grippo.

Plot: The killing of a detective, buddy of the gang, inspires them to track down the killer. To achieve this purpose they join an underworld gang, and eventually find the man responsible for the deed.

Comment: Folks interested in seeing The Bowery Boys pictures are naturally entertained by their antics and the comic situations that arise, in character. Therefore, most of their films have action and a good bit of goings-on. This one is different, for it tends to use the narrative technique, and this slows the picture to such a degree that it is doubtful whether those who like their "Bowery Boys" as is, will be entirely satisfied with this latest offering. Cast members, the majority of them, are the same, with Leo Gorcey, as the head of the gang, doing his usual mugging. His handling of the lines, plus the Huntz Hall dumb assist, gives the film most of its laughter. Others in the cast fill their roles adequately.

Show Sense

The Evils of Multiple Playing Time

For the past couple of weeks this column has been given over to the detailing of basic factual reasoning—not mine but that of one of the industry's topflight legal minds—to effect a better understanding of the business principles underlying the formulation of existing distribution-exhibition practices. In presenting these "foundation blocks" of sound and solid business reasoning the writer was actuated by a dual purpose: to discourage unwarranted and expensive lawsuits and, if at all possible, to curtail certain practices that are proving themselves exceedingly harmful to theatre attendance.

Today there exists every possible reason for adopting and following assiduously a course of procedure directed toward the very sensible goal of making it as easy and inviting as possible for folks to spend their spare moments and spare currency in the movie marts. Any studied analysis of current business chartings, Washington bureaus and fact finding committees, etc. will evidence that considerable honest confusion is rampant about whether we are headed for further recession or another dose of inflation.

These typings have always been directed toward "Today" and the immediate future with long-range business prognostications left to the crystal balls and ouija boards of swivel chair Sachems. In what I've read and studied—as well as the paper of this metropolitan city which carries ads of a soft drink selling six bottles for 15 cents (no limit) and preserved cherries at 15 cents per pint—there is little to indicate other than a continued purse flattening for the population category we look to for the bulk of our ticket sales.

With ticket sales far below last year—Government tax reports show a drop month-to-month that runs into the millions of dollars—and all reliable factors indicating no surcease within binocular range, it's high time we applied some common sense to the job of getting and holding customers. Everybody from studio slavey to the mighty moguls of distribution and exhibition knows that "habit" is the mightiest of all human elements implementing movie attendance. Ergo: any business practice holding the slightest possibility of seriously interrupting the "attendance habit" must be viewed as perilous.

To give you an illustration of just how serious the interruption of "habit" can be to theatres, let me cite the results of the August strike of San Antonio, Texas, street railway employes. I stopped in the Alamo City some two weeks after the strike had ended; here's what I found out:

During the early days attendance was affected very little, since most folks considered their inconvenience in the form of a lark and had fun hiking and hitch-hiking on private cars, trucks, etc. Toward the end of the first week the drop began showing, with the downtown "B" and deferred runs being hardest hit. The "A" showcase customers were still coming along pretty fair but the increase in autos in the downtown area was making the job of finding parking space rather difficult.

Some of These Houses Chalked Up 30-Year Lows

The drop in attendance was progressive—but fast—with the second week showing serious effect in the gross of the showcase houses and bordering the disastrous in the "B" and deferred runs. The neighborhoods were hardly affected until the third week when they hit the skids for a slump of 10 to 15 per cent. By that time business in the downtown "A" houses had dropped off 25 to 35 per cent and the "B" and deferred runs—where attendance is drawn principally from the lower non-auto-owning class—down 50 to 60 per cent. I was told that some of these houses chalked up 30-year lows during the closing days of the strike.

Of course the street railway employes strike was no fault of the theatres. But it did interrupt the "habit" of going to the movies for no end of folks. The highly important point is that some three weeks after settlement the theatres had still failed to reach the attendance normally enjoyed previously. This despite concentrated publicity and advertising directed toward correcting the situation. The "habit" had been broken and considerable time will be required—and considerable dollars lost—before it again reaches the gross enjoyed before the unfortunate interruption.

I forgot to mention that during this time the Drive-Ins enjoyed a pronounced increase in business and that one neighborhood, catering to the city's elite with art and foreign films, went through unscathed and reported a slight hike in attendance.

* This series copyrighted and must not be reproduced in part or whole without written permission from Showmen's Trade Review, Inc.

As mentioned above, the street railway strike was, so far as theatres were concerned, unpreventable. But let's take a look at some of the crazy practices of both circuit and independent theatres in highly competitive metropolitan centers that tend to accomplish the same purpose. Most outstanding of these "sins against ourselves" that are preventable, and currently in practice throughout the nation, is the utterly senseless, silly and selfish scramble for day-and-date availability following first run.

In recent years, circuits and independents have "gone overboard" to determine who could excel in building the most impressive and imposing community theatres. In itself, this procedure is highly laudable and of a nature that promises to increase the prestige of the industry and attract a greater flow of patronage. Just what part was played by the prospect of those annoying and business-destroying "writs" in influencing one chap to attempt excelling the other for the purpose of establishing a premise on which to base a law suit for prior run because of better or more imposing accommodations and facilities? Regardless of motive or intent, the result is an array of theatres that would defy the judgment of Solomon to select one over the other for preference in availability. With the court decisions providing so much in the way of conflicting regulation on distributor practices, with lawyers of owners advancing from all directions to flay and slay, came the neutral decision of day-and-date availability.

Vie for Rail Position

So, with porcine avidity—and seemingly kindred intelligence—any and all in the favored category grab for "firsts." Now what happens? Well, let me give you a tabulation of conditions in one middle-sized city where seven neighborhood de luxe circuit huses vie with five super independents for the rail position. (I should mention that the first-run situation is one where it is possible to liquidate three top-rank pictures a week but where hold-overs and move-overs frequently reduce the quota.) Examination of the newspapers over a two-week period showed that, on the average, eight of the twelve houses were playing the same attraction while the other four were dividing potential patronage of another. That this condition, or derivations and deviations of it, is being duplicated in practically all metropolitan centers can be proved by checking the newspapers as I did.

Now, let me ask: Does not this practice serve to discourage theatre attendance or, at least, to interrupt, to a marked degree, the "habit" of "Let's go to the movies" which the industry has spent many years and many dollars to cultivate? If you lived in this city and preferred attendance at its better theatres but found the choice of pictures confined to two selections—where stars, story, title, or other factor was not to your liking—what would you do? That's right! You'd stay home, or go to the ball game, or play bridge, or bowl or give your time and patronage to any of dozens of competitiors.

Movies were built to their present status of public reception through the variety of entertainment they offered. Knowing, as we all do, the multiple likes and dislikes of our complex sphere of patronage, aren't we indulging in the most obvious of idiotic, business-destroying practices when we confine the field of selection to such skimpy proportions that we entirely eliminate the factor that proved our best customer magnet?

Don't misunderstand; this is not an argument for longer clearance. Nobody welcomed the elimination of extravagant clearance and advocates further telescoping of the clearance schedule in many situations than this writer. This is an argument for common sense in booking and a complete cessation of the business-destroying practice of saturation, multiple day-and-date playing time. Our customers MUST be given a wider scope of attraction selection than this growing practice permits. If we don't correct the situation and give it to them, the time is not far off when "going to the movies" ceases to be a "habit" and enters the "occasional pastime" bracket.

That the industry stands to gain through quick liquidation of product on closely related playing dates goes without saying and I'm all for it. It just makes sense to exhibit a picture as near as possible to the release date since this enables the showing while the publicity and propaganda is still echoing in public ears. That makes for more customers and the consequent reward of added revenue with which to make bigger and better productions. But let's use a little common sense and stagger the spots of exhibition in some relation of playing time other than the complete saturation of a city through multiple day-and-date engagements. Why not let all owners of houses entitled to concurrent booking get together and draw lots? That method would certainly be without favor and prevent two or three theatres in one vicinity from forcing their customers to seek entertainment elsewhere because they are all showing some one film not to the patron's liking. Even two- or three-day clearance is preferable, and the exhibitors should be able to work that out to the satisfaction of all concerned without putting distributors on the spot for infraction of some controversial or conflicting legal opinion.

Over many years, movie patrons have been accustomed to choose their entertainment from a wide variety of film attractions. In continuing the odious practice of saturation sub-run bookings we are, in a sense, saying to our patrons: "You either buy this or take your money elsewhere." We don't mean it. We want and sorely need that money. They want a choice of film attractions. Let's give them what they want. Let's get that revenue.

We can ill afford to lose even the smallest fraction of present theatre patronage, so why not take every precaution to prevent even the slightest interruption of the "habit" we've striven so hard to develop among America's millions of amusement seekers? Once they get out of the "habit," it takes great gobs of time and costs heaps of money to bring 'em back again.

Why not go back to a sensible schedule of progressive exhibition with the clearance telescoped to a minimum? It'll be more pleasant—pleasant for the customers and more profitable for the exhibitor.

That's Public Relations

A series of 13 trailers concerned with various phases of safety traffic lessons are being prepared for release throughout the houses of the California Theatre Owners Association. Instituted by Fox West Coast Theatres as a public welfare gesture the plan is being picked up by the Association to be shown in all the houses of the organization.

Fire Prevention Week Offers Chance for Community Effort

It's a little late to remind you, if you haven't been reminded already, but Fire Prevention Week, which opens Oct. 9 and runs through Oct. 15, offers the average exhibitor a whale of a chance to do a public service which will reflect itself to his advantage in his community-public relations.

Because in the average city's fire department, which the average citizens knows little about, and in the ever-present and expensive problem of fire, which again the average citizen knows little about, there is ample opportunity for colorful and effective tie-ins which range all the way from slogans on a theatre program to demonstrations held before the theatre.

Past exhibitor experience has shown that cooperating with the fire department in this week has netted results in goodwill and appreciation and has centered attention on the theatre. The tie-in doesn't have to be gargantuan. It can be small and still be spectacular.

As an illustration, a lobby board with a punch line can call attention to the fact that three of the country's biggest fire hazards are matches and cigarettes, faulty chimneys and furnaces, and "misuse of flammable fluids." Ten to one it will surprise your patrons to know that matches and smoking cause 28.88 per cent of the nation's fires; faulty chimneys, furnaces, 21.11 per cent, and that the little woman cleaning a pair of gloves with gasoline starts 15.15 more of the fires. Misuse of electricity is behind 10.86 per cent more.

It may be late to start but the National Board of Fire Underwriters has three pamphlets—"60 Ways to Prevent Fire in Your Home," "Stop Fires," "The Fire-Safe Home"—all of which can be obtained from the local fire board or your local fire insurance agent. If enough of these can be obtained they'd make good giveaways, for every one of them contains vital information that would surprise the average home owner.

The National Board of Underwriters also has a trailer on the subject which Filmack is distributing and in the City of New York the Fire Department is putting out, with the assistance of the industry, another trailer for limited local use.

However, there is a wider tie-in possibility with your local fire department where you can use other facilities than the screen.

First, there is the conventional tie-in whereby the fire-department demonstrates the use of its equipment before the theatre with the house plugging the demonstration in its ads.

You can probably get a crowd around your theatre if a piece of fire equipment just shows up, but if the firemen unreel the hose or send the ladder of the hook and ladder soaring skyward and men to clamber up its rungs, you'll undoubtedly have a crowd. You might even get a jump into a fire net.

You might even get the loan of some of the smaller equipment for display in your lobby, accompanied by suitable fire prevention messages. Such suits as firemen wear to fight fires in places where gasses are stored, or where ammonia gas might be freed, are attraction getters.

There probably is a squad devoted to resuscitating people overcome by smoke. There are possibilities for a tie-in there.

Probably an antiquated engine is around your town that could be used in the lobby or before your theatre.

If you live in a port town there is the waterfront fire fighters as a possibility, and in every city there is a city fire alarm telegraphic service, which has a whale of an interesting story if a way to tie this in with the theatre can be found.

And while the Average Citizen envisages the fire department as a thing of racing engines, it has functions which are equally useful to the community though less spectacular.

It does a whale of a job in preventing fire. That inspector who comes around from time to time, saves the property owner thousands of dollars by warning against defective electrical equipment. He, or his fellow fireman, makes sure that such liquids as gasoline, or such explosives, as dynamite, are properly stored. In the five boroughs of the City of New York alone, inspections for one year alone totaled 963,887. The fire fighters in turn put out 40,522 fires.

Your fire department may have its own ambulances. The firemen in their off time may have some "big brother" movement for underprivileged children.

Anyway in this day when the entire industry is public relations-conscious, in this week which is intended to beat fire, the exhibitor can find an opportunity to improve his local relations.

Special Newsreel, Free Flowers for Birthday

A special newsreel in which radio commentator William Winter reviewed the highlights of the past 10 years was one of the features which the Telenews Theatres of San Francisco and Oakland used recently to celebrate their 10th anniversary. Other specials were the mayors of the two cities congratulating General Manager Ellis Levy from his screens on his decade of news theatre operations and free gardenias to all feminine patrons.

PRODUCTION PARADE

By Ann Lewis

Louis Calhern, veteran Broadway stage star, has been signed to a long-term contract at MGM and his first assignment will be the role of Buffalo Bill in "Annie Get Your Gun," starring Betty Hutton. Arthur Freed is producing and George Sidney directing.

Director George Marshall signed a new pact with Paramount providing for him to direct a picture a year for the next two years. Contract marks Marshall's thirty-sixth anniversary as a motion picture director.

Producer Barney Sarecky, who will produce and direct the series of six one-reel Western Kid Comedies in color for Lippert Productions, will also make two features for the company. They will be "Radar Patrol" starting Oct. 17, and "Tales of Captain Kidd" starting Oct. 31.

John Lund, on loanout from Paramount, has been set by MGM for one of the starring roles in "Duchess of Idaho," to be produced by Joe Pasternak. The Technicolor film co-stars Esther Williams and Van Johnson.

Producers Jack H. Skirball and Bruce Manning have signed Jane Cowl as Claudette Colbert's aunt in their RKO release "Blind Spot."

"Birthday Party," first of a series of five short subjects for children and youth groups, was placed in production by the Protestant Film Commission, with Paul F. Heard producing and Edward L. Cahn directing.

"Shoplifter," scheduled to go before the cameras October 17, will be Director Charles Lamont's fourth assignment for Universal-International this year. Producer Leonard Goldstein is presently rounding up a cast.

"Storm Center," which Jerry Wald is producing for Warners, will star Lauren Bacall. Stuart Heisler will direct from a screenplay by Daniel Fuchs. Production is due to start sometime this month.

William Bendix is getting private lessons from Al Sommers, Coast League umpire and chief instructor at Bill MacGowan's famous school for umpires at Cocoa, Fla., to prepare for his forthcoming starring role in Columbia's "Kill that Umpire." This will be one time when Bendix, a rabid Brooklyn baseball fan who heckled many an umpire, will have to account to the "umps" for his decisions.

"Redwood Forest Trails," an original, has been purchased by Republic and assigned to Associate Producer Franklin Adreon as the second of five western films to star Rex Allen.

Raoul Walsh leaves for England to seek locations and backgrounds for "Captain Hornblower," which he will direct for Warner Bros. The picture is based on the famous character in C. S. Forrester's best-selling novels, and most of the filming will be done at the Elstree Studios in London. No cast or producer has been set.

Another director on his way to England and points East is Victor Saville. He is setting up final preparations for Technicolor filming of MGM's "Kim." Actual locations described in the Rudyard Kipling classic are to be used. Leon Gordon is producing, with the cast to date including Errol Flynn and Dean Stockwell, who will portray Kim.

Frieda Inescort and Sheppard Strudwick have been named for supporting roles in the forthcoming Paramount film, "An American Tragedy."

Sensible Exploitation Salient Box-Office Factor

A successful motion picture must have several important attributes to make it "box-office"—a good story, top-quality performances and direction, a professional production job and, most of all, sensible exploitation.

After 20 years as an actor and now also a producer with two Republic pictures to his credit ("Angel and the Badman" and "The Fighting Kentuckian"), John Wayne is well qualified to speak with authority.

Exploitation, he feels, is a very important ingredient in box-office success and should be carried on vigorously by producers, distributors and exhibitors.

"Regarding the stories," he said in an exclusive STR interview, "I think that any yarn which deals simply with genuine and significant people can be developed into a good film. I also believe that short stories, through their very brevity, make the best motion pictures, for they aren't cluttered-up with contrived situations that add nothing to the picture as a whole. Hackneyed situations, characterizations and dialog are, of course, unfailing signs of a poor picture, no matter how expensive it is. You can fool the public once or twice by camouflaging the same old plot with big-star names and lavish production, but essentially it is a short-sighted and extravagant policy . . . and even good exploitation won't help put it across."

John Wayne

Wayne. for the past 2 years among the 10 top box-office stars by exhibitor acclaim in STR's "Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry" poll, believes that "as a producer one must protect and enhance the value of a film with a big star, but I do not believe in overloading the production with a number of big names. For one thing, it's a needless drain on the budget and, too, the public wants to see new faces."

Engel Riding Herd With 12 Scripters on 10 Films

Constituting a virtual one-man revival of scripting prosperity, 20th Century-Fox Producer Sam Engel is currently riding herd on a round dozen writers working on treatments and screenplays for 10 high-budget pictures slated on Engel's production schedule for 1949-50.

The producer is working with Charles Marquis Warren on preparation of "Royal Canadian Mounted Police Story," Eleanore Griffin on "The Foreign Service Story," John Collier on "21 Bow Street," Phoebe and Henry Ephron on "The Jackpot," Philip Charlot and Leonard Hoffman on "International Criminal Police Story," Dudley Nichols on "Ransom," Art Cohn on "FBI of Horse Racing," Richard Wormser on "Fire," Dale Eunson on "Accustomed As I Am," and Gwen Davenport on "Spare the Rod."

Engel is also producing "Night And The City," currently before the cameras in London.

Technicians, Stars, Off for Africa Location

A crew of skilled film technicians and three top screen personalities have been dispatched to Equatorial Africa by MGM for the filming of H. Rider Haggard's "King Solomon's Mines," 90 per cent of which will be made in the heart of the Dark Continent.

The stars are Deborah Kerr, Stewart Granger and Richard Carlson. A staff of nine men, including Director Compton Bennett and Cameraman Robert Surtees, already is in Nairobi, making final plans for the start of filming Oct. 17.

Rights to 'Old 880' Acquired by 20th-Fox

Twentieth Century-Fox has acquired screen rights to "Old 880," an account by St. Clair McKelway of the career of a counterfeiter who confined himself to the manufacture of a few one-dollar bills as he needed them. The story was published recently in the New Yorker, based on Treasury Department Files. Julius Blaustein is scheduled to produce the film, and Edmund Gwenn and Walter Huston are reportedly being considered for the leading role.

Widmark Added to 'No Way Out'

Richard Widmark has been set for an important role in 20th-Fox's "No Way Out," which will star Anne Baxter. The story deals with the ordeal of a Negro interne in a metropolitan hospital when a patient who has insulted him dies under his hand.

Vidor to Direct

King Vidor will direct Warners' "Lightning Strikes Twice," adapted by Lenore Coffee from Margaret Echard's novel, "Man Without Friends."

Myrna Loy Set

Myrna Loy will appear opposite Clifton Webb in 20th-Fox's screen version of "Cheaper by the Dozen."

Studio Roundup

Once upon a time you could keep both eyes on major production activities, with an occasional glance toward an independent. Now it looks as though an occasional glance is not enough, for independent activities are increasing. You have to keep at least one eye on them.

Last week, if you remember, we reported three going before the cameras in various parts of the world. Now along comes three more, and these are being made right here in Hollywood. They are: "Wrong Guy," which Frank Seltzer is producing: "Flying Saucer," being made by Mikel Conrad, and "Personal Record," the first effort of a new company, World Artists. "Wrong Guy" has Eddie O'Brien and Joanne Dru in the top roles, with Joe Newman directing; Conrad is star, producer and director for "Flying Saucer," and Irving Reis is directing "Personal Record," with famed pianist Artur Rubinstein starred.

But the majors are also active, too, accounting for the seven other pictures which went before the cameras. At Columbia, Sam Katzman started "Captive Girl," another Johnny Weissmuller film, while D. Ross Lederman began directing Stanley Clements, Leon Tyler, Myron Welton and Gene Collins in "Military Academy."

The Cinecolor "Blue Grass of Kentucky" got underway at Monogram with Bill Williams, Jane Nigh and Ralph Morgan in top roles. William Beaudine is directing for Producer Jeffrey Bernerd. "Borrowed Guns," the fifth in the studio's Whip Wilson western series, also got the green light. Lambert Hillyer directs.

Vaughn Monroe to Screen

Your patrons have heard him on the radio and probably own many of his records, especially his best-selling version of Riders in the Sky. Of course we mean Vaughn Monroe. Well, he's coming to the screen, sure enough, in Republic's "Singing Guns," a Trucolor film in which he is co-starred with Ella Raines.

"The Hawk and the Arrow," large-scale romantic drama which Norma Productions will release through Warner Bros., went into work last week with Burt Lancaster and Virginia Mayo co-starring. The Technicolor epic is being co-produced by Harold Hecht and Frank Ross, with Jacques Tourneur directing a cast of thousands. Meanwhile, Vincent Sherman began directing "The Victim," which co-stars Joan Crawford and David Brian.

"September," the Hal Wallis production for Paramount which was on location in Italy, resumes filming at the studio late this month upon the return of Director William Dieterle.

Columbia Films Set For Location Shooting

Plans are being completed at Columbia for location shooting on certain of its forthcoming films to insure authenticity.

Producer-director Robert Rossen is planning to shoot "The Brave Bulls" principally in Mexico. Producer S. Sylvan Simon is scheduling locations at Jamaica, W. I., and the Virgin Islands on "Virgin Island." Producer Robert Cohn will film most of "The Killer That Stalked New York" in—well, where do you think? Producer Harry Joe Brown plans to film most of 'Fortunes of Capt. Blood" at Catalina Island, and two other major Columbia pictures—"In a Lonely Place" and "The Glass Heart"—will be filmed principally in Beverly Hills, actual locale of the plots.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Idle Stages, Studios for Sale, Salary Cuts, Errors in Production Seen Aftermaths of Quota Act's First Year

By JOCK MacGREGOR

For the past week British exhibitors have been completing their quota returns for the year which ended on September 30. The results of the first session of the 45 per cent rate will not be known for some time, but even with reliefs, it is conservatively estimated that the total number of cinemas, circuit and independently owned, to fail in their obligations will exceed four figures.

Jock MacGregor

It would appear that for the third time legislation to foster British film production has failed. The greediness which asked for a 50 per cent quota has resulted in a bilious attack and a consequent weakening of the system. The need for a more varied diet was ignored by the sponsors who believed the public must go to the cinema, regardless of the fare, in the same way they knuckled down to rationing.

Today, many stages are idle, the Shepherds Bush and Isling studios are up for sale, and the majority of the industry who are not unemployed have received a 10 per cent salary cut. That sums up the help of the unrealistic act.

The Unions may be blamed for restrictive practices and some rising costs, but they cannot be held responsible for the choice of subjects or the indecisions of certain producers which result in drifting budgets. Far too many pictures are made and then months afterwards partly re-made. In the past week players have been re-assembled for new scenes for "Travellers Joy" and "Boys in Brown" which have been off the floor for a long time. Proper scripting and planning in the first place would have surely eliminated the need for this.

The first quota act was passed in 1927 and shortly afterwards many film production companies were formed, but few continue to function. British International became Associated British and flourishes more brightly than ever. Gainsborough Pictures (1928) Ltd. has lost its studios and all but been absorbed in the Rank Group which has also drawn in the British and Dominions Film Corporation. This was formed by Herbert Wilcox, but is now a studio holding company. British Lion has withstood the changes from those early times and Ealing Studios have grown out of Associated Radio Pictures. Butchers has weathered the storm from the days before the first Quota Act.

All too many are apt to forget the good pictures made here between the wars. They rightly cheer Laurence Olivier's Academy Award for "Hamlet," but are ignorant of the fact that fifteen years before Charles Laughton was similarly honored for his work in a British picture, "The Private Life of Henry VIII." They forget that others, like Ralph Richardson, Vivien Leigh, Madeleine Carroll, Rex Harrison, Ann Todd, Robert Donat and Anna Neagle, served their apprenticeships in these films, to say nothing of directors Alfred Hitchcock, Victor Saville and Carol Reed.

The salvation of the British film industry lies in making pictures which are commercially slanted and will sell themselves. Merely to seek legal protection will never create anything save disaster, for no government can ever make patrons see a picture they do not want to see. To concentrate on official channels may be correct and achieve ultimate results, but goodwill and showmanship pay the quicker dividends.

Passing through London on his way back to the U. S. after visiting most of Europe, Bernard Kriesler held a press conference to explain the objects and progress of International Film Associates. Planned to offer a co-operative distribution setup for European pictures in America, active operation will start next month when eight to twelve features will be available for release. Pictures not deemed suitable for general distribution will be available for television and 16-mm. use.

Participating companies will receive a dollar payment immediately a picture is accepted by the independent viewing panel, and it is believed by offering the specialized theatres, university and town hall groups a substantial program, better terms will result.

Kreisler has received much U. S. government support and it is obvious the scheme is being most favorably received by the Italian and French officials who have long wanted to see their pictures more adequately exploited in the American market. In common with Britain, they regret that the payment for entertainment films is, for the most part, one way.

While franchise members must offer IFA first refusal on all product made within a year, they can place it elsewhere in the U. S. if it is rejected. Kreisler expects at least two British films to be included in the first group and points out that IFA will also arrange European distribution for Hollywood product. Several deals have already been concluded in this direction including the sale of "A Night in Casablanca" for Sweden. IFA will have resident managers in the European capitals.

Seven leading French producers have joined together to exploit their output in Britain. Under George Arnull they have taken over the Rialto, one of the West End's first cinemas, had it re-equipped and redecorated and opened with a gala premiere under the patronage of the French Ambassador. "Le Grand Balcon" was chosen for the occasion.

MGM held a reception to welcome John Hodiak and Cathy O'Donnell, who have arrived to take up their roles in "The Miniver Story," which has now started production at Elstree with Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon in the leads. H. C. Potter directs and Sidney Franklin produces.

Goldwyn Buys Novel

Samuel Goldwyn has acquired "Come to Me," an unpublished novel by John De Roth, as a prospective vehicle for Farley Granger and Joan Evans.

Venuta in 'Annie'

Benay Venuta has been signed for a role in MGM's "Annie Get Your Gun."

ADVANCE DATA
On Forthcoming Product

Woman in Hiding (U-I). Principals: Ida Lupino, Stephen McNally, Howard Duff, Peggy Dow, Dorothy Malone, Marvin Gordon. The former hireling general manager of a large mill marries the boss' daughter and then gains control of the business when the father is accidentally killed. His plans to have the daughter committed to an insane asylum are discovered in time to prevent this further tragedy.

Holiday Affair (RKO). Principals: Robert Mitchum, Janet Leigh, Wendell Corey, Gordon Gebert. Director, Don Hartman. A young war widow with a seven-year-old son finds it difficult to turn down a serious attorney suitor for a brash young salesman whom her son found interesting. Circumstance finally takes a hand, so that the final decision is taken out of her hands.

Ma & Pa Kettle Go to Town (U-I). Principals: Marjorie Main, Percy Kilbride, Meg Randall, Richard Long. Director, Charles Lamont. Ma Kettle wins a contest and part of the loot includes a trip to New York. They get mixed up with a gang of crooks, but things are finally straightened out.

Belle of Old Mexico. (Republic). Principals: Estrelita Rodriguez, Robert Rockwell, Dorothy Patrick. Director, R. G. Springsteen. Jealousy between the young lady he's engaged to and the young ward he's adopted puts the president of a college in a very awkward position which is eventually resolved.

The Big Fall (20th-Fox). Principals: John Garfield, Micheline Prelle, Luther Adler, Orley Lindgren. Director, Jean Negulesco. Plot: An American jockey, in trouble with a race track racketeer, lives abroad with his young son, who idolizes him. Forced to promise to throw a race, he nevertheless remains honest for the boy's sake and dies in the attempt.

Rogues of Sherwood Forest (Columbia) Technicolor. Principals: John Derek, Diana Lynn, George Macready. Director, Gordon Douglas. Plot: In the year 1214, after King Richard and Robin Hood had died, the King's evil brother mounted the throne. Robin Hood's young son is now the crusader, defending the people against cruelty and unjust taxes. In this he is helped by the King's ward, the girl he loves.

Bed of Roses (RKO). Principals: Joan Fontaine, Robert Ryan, Zachary Scott, Joan Leslie, Mel Ferrer. Director, Nicholas Ray. Plot: A beautiful, selfish young girl tries to hold on to both the rich society man she marries for his wealth and position and the young novelist she loved and threw over. In the end she loses both men.

Exploratory Stage

It looks very much as though the theatremen are taking a realistic approach to the subject of television as a potential ally of the film entertainment they offer on their screens. While others have been speculating as to what the video shows might do to the movie theatres, the exhibitors have been looking over the situation and moving ahead to find out just what this new medium offers as an attraction, rather than merely worrying about what it might mean as a counter-attraction.

It will take time and added experience with large-screen video to determine whether there's a way to harness this new dynamic development to the box-office. Nothing conclusive could be expected from such limited application of television as has been possible so far. But the spirit to go ahead and find out is there and the theatremen will find out. Among other things, in due course, they will find out whether television can be offered profitably when the program is available for home as well as theatre presentations. How much more, if anything, the public will be willing to pay for a show that combines regular motion picture entertainment with the televised presentation of non-theatrical events, such as big baseball games, horse races, boxing bouts, etc., is another question to be answered.

There has been some recent speculation as to whether it will not be necessary for theatres to have some exclusive entertainment or features which may not be seen except in the theatre. That brings things back to some of the opinions we heard very early in the game. But if such proves to be the case, this phase of the job is one that motion picture men are better equipped to develop and conduct than those in any other branch of show business.

Meanwhile, it appears that a far more sane attitude is being taken by theatremen than was possible when the stampede for sound hit the industry in the late 'Twenties. That scramble cost the theatre industry uncounted thousands of dollars for equipment which rapidly became obsolete and which failed to pay its freight in attraction value while product capable of measuring up to standard was being developed. It's right cheering to observe this realistic approach to theatre television. The big theatre outfits are doing the pioneering. They deserve the thanks of the entire exhibitor body for their enterprise and their willingness to undertake costs in experimenting with the medium.

Putting P. R. to Work

As remarked several times recently in this corner, the theatremen are going ahead with practical application of public relations programs while the industry as a whole comes to grips with the over-all aspect of setting up a general program for united-front effort to improve the public's understanding of motion picture business and what it means to the public and the welfare of the country.

Last week we gave full coverage to an area-wide job of selling the industry to sell theatre tickets in Baltimore. This excellent campaign, backed with hard cash and a great spirit of cooperation among exhibitors of the Baltimore area, should be applauded by producers and distributors, actors, writers and directors, as well as by theatremen who cannot help but find in it both inspiration and material for better showmanship.

The Allied Convention

Exhibitor conventions should mean more to the individual theatreman, whether active in membership or not, than at any time in the past. We have always been a rooter for big attendance at these annual meets, and we take the opportunity to issue a reminder that Allied is holding its annual meet—a Twenty-First Birthday Celebration event, is the proper billing—in Minneapolis October 24, 25, 26.

Aside from the benefits of contacts with fellow businessmen with mutual problems, the convention will provide discussion of important subjects. It also will provide opportunity to hear speakers for some of the film companies. And, from an industry-wide viewpoint, it will afford opportunity to hear Ned Depinet's dynamic summation and informative exposition of the plan for an All-Industry Public Relations program.

A-T-M

On the regional front, another important exhibitor gathering takes place this month, for the MPTO of Arkansas-Tennessee-Mississippi are meeting in Memphis next week for an annual convention of one of the most progressive and alert local organizations in the country. President William F. Ruffin, Jr., will preside at the opening of the convention next Monday.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

TELEVISION

In a Brooklyn bar a gentleman sitting over a glas of beer said he had seen every one of the World Series games over television—right in that bar, and no sir, he wouldn't put up no $1.20 a seat to sit in a theatre to see it when he could get it along with beer much cheaper. This sour note was the only one heard this week as the World Series was played off in its entirety by six theatres in five cities of the United States which brought it to their audiences through the medium of television.

Post mortems showed: 1) That with only one exception were the games a sellout, but the audiences enjoyed them and managements in Boston, Chicago, Brooklyn, Milwaukee and Scranton had no kicks; 2) That probably admisisons were too high —both Milwaukee and Boston cut prices when crowds did not meet expectations, while the Comerford Westside at Scranton, which charged 30 cents, sold out and turned 'em away; 3) That the image was good, that there were still bugs to be ironed out, and that, in Scranton again, the image could be picked up from 130 miles away.

None of the participating theatres announced future plans, excepting that the Fabian Fox, Brooklyn, said it would continue its experiments. Several cities reported a public interest in football telecasts. Meanwhile New Jersey Allied reported that equipment costs to date were too heavy for the smaller exhibitor and that he would have to await either cheaper equipment or a system by which he could lease it.

In Washington, D .C., RCA exhibited its color television, which was regarded by some observers as inferior at the moment to the CBS system which uses a mechanical scanner instead of electronics. In Louisville, Victor Sholis, manager of a radio station, told the Kentucky Association of Theatre Owners that theatres 50 miles away from a main television outlet need not fear it as competition for some time to come but that video nonetheless should be studied seriously as future competition.

LITIGATION

In Washington, before a red curtain, the justices of the U. S. Supreme Court assembled Monday for the first decision day of their fall term and: 1) Refused Partmar the right to intervene in the Paramount consent decree in an effort to preserve its lease on the Los Angeles Paramount; 2) Refused Harry Norman Ball of Ambridge, Pa,. his petition to intervene in the same consent decree to protect his interests; 3) Refused to review an appeal carried to it by Hollingshead Park-In which owns patents on ramp drive-ins, against a ruling by the first U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals which invalidated the patents "for want of invention." Hollingshead had sued E. M. Loew for royalties and damages (P. 5). The case is considered important in that it may free drive-ins from any need to pay royalty payments and was so hailed by national Allied Counsel Abram F. Myers. Myers wasn't so happy though about the Justice Department's six-month extension of the time in which RKO must dispose of its theatres.

In Los Angeles the former owners of the Wilshire at Fullerton sued the eight majors and National Theatres for $185,000 triple damages alleging conspiracy to monopolize, and in the same city the Rex at Bakersfield sued National, Warner Bros., 20th-Fox and United Artists on the same general charge for $510,000. And still out on the West Coast Producer Benedict Bogeaus sued Paramount for $3,000,000 under the anti-trust laws charging monopoly. This was a counter suit to Paramount's efforts to foreclose on his "Lulu Belle."

EXHIBITION

Years and years ago, even before the folks who came over on the Mayflower had forgotten its discomforts and turned it into a crest of nobility, the Pilgrim Fathers decided that any labor performed on Sunday was heinous and handed out some pretty stiff sentences to anyone who might open his mouth in gay song or joyous laughter. This week, in the year of 1949, Milton, a suburb of Boston, revived the ancient blue laws and prohibited all labor on the Sabbath—including lawn mowing and of course, exhibition of movies. A man presumably may still kiss his wife on that day.

Out in St. Louis the civil rights committee was again introducing an amendment to the new city charter which would prohibit discrimination in public places because of race, color or religion, and out in Overland, Mo., the board of aldermen there was considering a petition to change its mind about a drive-in so that St. Louis Amusement Company could build the country's first four-screener. But in Franklin County, Ohio, authorities stopped construction of a drive-in on a farm in an area restricted to farms and homes, and out in the Minnesota-Dakota area, exhibitors were inspecting damaged doors and marquees in the wake of a wind said to have reached 80 miles an hour.

DISTRIBUTION

Tom Bailey, Lippert distributor in Denver, is proposing a joint shipping center at Albuquerque, N. M., to help solve shipping problems. Henry W. Kahn has joined Paramount as special sales chief for "Samson," and Toddy Pictures, handlers of Negro films, has announced a 1949-50 release schedule of 26 features, 15 musicals, 6 one-reelers and 11 two-reel comedies.

GENERAL

The American motion picture industry will benefit from tariff concessions granted by Italy, Denmark, Finland and other countries, the Commerce Department claimed this week. Meanwhile Sen. Sheridan Downey told the Senate that American movies were doing a splendid job of carrying the "American mesage" even into places which the "Voice of America" could not reach and were doing it at great financial sacrifice because of European restrictions on films.

In Hollywood Cinecolor announced that it was processing its first feature by a three-color process.

Financial: Monogram—Net loss for year ending July 21, 1949, $1,108,433 compared to $978,110, for same period 1948, despite a 1949 gross of $10,177,868 compared to a gross for 1948 of $9,030,906. Amortizing high budget pictures was given as the reason. Blocked foreign funds of $300,000 not included. Columbia—Quarterly dividend of $1.06¼ on cumulative preferred declared payable Nov. 15, 1949.

DARRYL F. ZANUCK, who this week negotiated a new contract with 20th Century-Fox which extends his tenure of the vice-presidency in charge of production for 10 years and retains his services for an additional 10-year period after that in an advisory capacity. During this latter period Zanuck will have no "proprietary interests in other motion picture undertakings," President Spyros Skouras announced. Zanuck has been production chief ever since Fox merged with 20th Century in 1935.

Paramount Seeks Buyer For Butterfield Stock

Paramount Monday took another step to conform with the consent decree it reached in the Government anti-trust suit by which it agreed to theatre divorce and put up for sale its stock in some 113 houses operated by one of its partners, the two Butterfield companies in Michigan.

Paramount's holdings in the W. S. Butterfield Theatres, which operate 91 houses, is 37,500 shares of Class B stock or slightly more than 25 per cent of the outstanding stock. Its holdings in the Butterfield Michigan Theatres, which operates 22 theatres in smaller Michigan towns, is 6,940 shares of Class B, about one-third of the outstanding stock.

Coast-to-Coast Vaude

RKO will extend its vaudeville policy to the west coast on Oct. 26 when the Golden Gate in San Francisco joins 14 other RKO Theatres in playing shows originating at the N. Y. Palace.

Yes, Snow

Salt Lake City reports word received there indicates that the recent snowfall in Montana, Idaho and Wyoming is the worst in the early fall season on record, and that hundreds of cars and trucks are marooned in those areas. Deer hunters out for their season's bag are among those cut off by the big snow.

To Ask Fight On Bidding

North Central Allied is preparing an attack on competitive bidding to present to the national Allied convention which meets in Minneapolis on Oct. 24-26, it was revealed this week.

The principal attack will be aimed at the legality of the practice under consent decrees already reached in the Government anti-trust suit and it was indicated that NCA General Counsel Stanley D. Kane stood ready to prepare court cases for individual exhibitors. Apparently an effort will be made to swing national Allied into a stand on the matter.

Other practices to be brought up by NCA at the national Allied meet include the alleged wide use of percentage deals for all but deluxe stands and so-called "forced buying" of one picture to get another. The latter is distinctly forbidden by decree in the Government anti-trust suit and details on such practices were not available from NCA.

Outsiders expected to attend the convention include sales heads of MGM, Paramount and RKO, with stars such as June Haver, Jane Powell, Chill Wills, and George Murphy, president of the Screen Actors Guild.

U.S. Supreme Court Knocks Out Hollingshead Drive-in Patent

Refusal to Review Decision In E. M. Loew Suit Upholds Invalidation by Lower Court

The U. S. Supreme Court meeting in Washington Monday for the first decision day of its fall term, upheld a ruling by the first U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals which nullifies the Hollingshead patents on ramp systems for drive-ins.

Refused

The court also refused to review two other appeals based on the Paramount consent decree. They were:

1) Efforts by Partmar, a Fanchon and Marco subsidiary which operates the Los Angeles Paramount under lease, to intervene in the consent decree. The decree would nullify Partmar's lease on the house and the F&M subsidiary sought to avoid this.

2) Efforts on the part of Harry Norman Ball, Ambridge, Pa., exhibitor to intervene on the ground that the consent decree would not relieve him from the damaging effects of Paramount's monopolistic practices. Ball had sued the neighboring State, half-owned by Paramount, and several distributors, including Paramount, alleging a monopoly which prevented his Penn at Ambridge from getting first-runs. He won in a Pennsylvania federal court, but appealed the decree as inadequate. His intervention plea was based on the claim that Paramount had three years to dispose of its jointly-held theatres and could, under the decree, acquire complete ownership of the State.

But the high court's refusal to review the Hollingshead Park-in suit, a decision for which it gave no reason, aroused the greatest amount of interest among exhibitors.

Not Valid

Hollingshead's Park-In Theatres had procured patents on a ramp system and other features of drive-in construction in 1933 which it allowed exhibitors to use on a royalty payment basis. During the early part of 1937, E. M. Loew's circuit took out a license for the system to cover a drive-in at Providence, R. I., but later discontinued royalty payments after its attorney had advised it that in his opinion the patent was not valid.

Whereupon Hollingshead sued for royalties and damages and won his case in a Boston federal court. E. M. Loew thereupon appealed and the first U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the lower court, on the ground that the patent was invalid for "want of invention."

Myers Hails High Court Stand

National Allied General Counsel Abram F. Myers Tuesday referred to the Supreme Court's refusal to review the Hollingshead patent case as "tremendously important." He assumed other courts would take the same stand which the First Circuit Court of Appeals did in declaring a "want of invention" in the system and invalidating the patent. However, he pointed out, if another Circuit Court should consider the case and disagree with the First Circuit Court, the matter might then come once more before the Supreme Court.

Myers added that he could not agree with the Justice Department in its six months' extension of the time in which RKO must divorce its theatres from distribution and production.

Golden Sees Film Industry Benefits In Foreign Concessions on Tariffs

The American motion picture industry will "benefit tremendously" from the tariff concessions granted by nine nations at the recent trade agreements conference at Annecy, France, Nathan D. Golden, Commerce Department motion picture chief and delegate to the meeting, said this week, following the announcement of the new rates by the State Department.

Motion pictures were considered as a major commodity in international trade for the first time, Golden declared. The new rates, which became effective this week when formally signed at the United Nations meeting at Lake Success, N. Y., by 33 countries, were made possible when Congress last month passed legislation extending the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

Concessions

Principal tariff concessions granted the United States on film imports were these, said Golden:

1) Italy eliminated a proposed 4 lire per meter duty on sound tracks. This would have been added to the film duty, amounting to approximately double the normal film import levy. American studios normally export sound tracks separately for processing at foreign laboratories, and it was pointed out that this practice would be abolished and film and sound track shipped in a single package if the proposed duty were enacted. Italy backed down, and, under the new agreement, sound tracks will come in duty free if imported with the corresponding motion picture. Raw film will enter at rates ranging between 20 and 28 per cent ad valorem, a level substantially below the proposed rate, as compared to 30 to 40 per cent under present regulations. Film negatives will enter at rates between 4 and 40 lire per meter, as against 8 to 60 formerly; positives will vary between 2 and 40 lire per meter, as compared with 3 to 60 lire per meter. Duty on newsreels has been reduced from 5 lire per meter to 3 lire per meter.

2) Denmark has switched its rates from 10 per cent ad valorem to a specific duty of 30 crowns per kilo (about 2 cents per foot). This, said Golden, is particularly significant because the establishment of a flat rate removes the danger of changing values under an ad valorem tax.

3) Although rates on film imports into Finland were raised to 170 marks per kilo (less than ½ cent per foot) from 34 marks, rates were maintained on a specific duty basis, while those on most U. S. products were changed to an ad valorem basis, Golden pointed out. He said Finnish duties were expected to rise because of extremely low prewar rates. Raw motion picture film will continue to be admitted duty-free.

Minor concessions were granted to American distributors by the Dominican Republic, Greece, Haiti, Nicaragua, Sweden and Uruguay.

The Economic Cooperation Administration is planning the establishment of a three-man "advisory committee on motion pictures" to advise ECA on application by film companies for guarantees under the informational media provisions for out-of-pocket expenses.

Claim Conspiracy, Want $185,000

Suit for triple damages amounting to $184,800 was filed in federal court at Los Angeles this week against National Theatres and eight major distributors by Mr. and Mrs. Clare Allison and Mr. and Mrs. William Kaye, former owners of the Wilshire at Fullerton, Calif.

The complaint charges that the defendants entered into a conspiracy which had as a result the giving of all first-run pictures to Fox West Coast Theatres in Santa Ana, Anaheim and

Blue Law Vote

Toronto taxpayers will cast their ballots at the forthcoming civic elections to decide the issue of Sunday sports and amusements for which there has been a steady demand for many weeks. The executives of theatre chains and other exhibitors have refrained from participating in the argument which has led to the granting of a plebiscite by the city council. Theatremen are not anxious to operate on Sundays, it is said.

World Series Proving Ground

Events Offers New Problems But Serve as Experiment For Large Screen Television

The World Series wound up its theatre playdates over large-screen television in five United States cities Sunday leaving the experimenting exhibitors who pioneered in this field with several problems upon whose solution will in large measure depend the success of such events in the future.

The exhibitors who tried it for the most part were enthusiastic and frank to state that it was an experiment. None would commit themselves as to future events though the Fabian Theatres, whose Fox in Brooklyn booked the series, declared that they would continue to experiment and "test this new medium of theatre television as an adjunct of the film business. As important events become available," the statement continued, "we will theatre televise them and get some more answers until we know finally how to utilize it best."

The event marked the first time that a group of theatres has participated in a pool with radio interests. All theatres received their video image from a pickup made by a pool of networks and television stations, in which the theatres participated and for whose support they paid.

How they worked can be illustrated by the Brooklyn Fox where the events at Yankee Stadium were sent by DuMont over microwave to the telephone company, where they were picked out of the air and transmitted to the Fox over specially treated telephone lines. The Ebbetts Field games were handled in the same way excepting that CBS handled the pickup.

Under Expectations

Careful opinion leaned to the view that the attendance in four of the five cities—Boston, Brooklyn, Chicago and Milwaukee—was under expectations but that still attendance in all towns but Milwaukee was good. The same opinion considered that several things had been learned technically about handling such events, especially that images could be picked up from remote points and displayed with good definition, even though the result was below the standards of motion picture projection. In Scranton, Penna., the signal was brought in from a distance of over 130 miles for showing at the Westside Theatre.

But at the same time two important points arose in connection with the showing of these large-scale events in theatres. The first was whether it would be in the future economically profitable for theatres to show such events when they could be seen at the corner bar and in the home, and whether if the event must not be exclusive, it is going to do anything big at the box-office.

'U' Out of Series

Universal this year turned up as the only major newsreels which did not carry the World Series. While the company had no official statement it is understood that the Baseball Commission banned Universal from the park because last year its subsidiary, United World, made the Universal clips of the classic available to home movies.

Looks Like Series Tickets So Chandler Squawks

The tickets printed by the Pilgrim Theatre, Boston, so nearly resembled actual World Series tickets that Baseball High Commissioner "Happy" Chandler telephoned from New York and told the theatre the tickets must be changed. The surprised management immediately complied with the "demand" and had new tickets printed.

The second problem was pricing.

Both of these questions are important. Neither was conclusively answered by the recent experiment. However, an indication of how the answer may come is again available in Scranton where Comerford's Westside, unable to advertise the event because of contractual regulations, found that after word got around, the house sold out. The Comerford house was the only public place in Scranton where the event could be seen. The admission was 30 cents for the event alone, compared to the $1.20 to $1.80 admissions charged in other cities.

"We didn't have a complaint," declared Comerford's J. J. O'Leary, over the reception of the signal. "We must have turned away 1,000 Sunday."

Over-Priced?

A little more support to the theory that the games may have been over-priced is seen in some scattered comment in Brooklyn and in the action taken by the American Theatres in Boston and the St. Cloud Amusement's Tower and Oriental in Milwaukee.

The ATC house in Boston started off with admissions of $1.25 and $1.80 but when business did not meet expectations it trimmed prices on 500 second balcony seats Friday to 85 cents. The Tower and the Oriental, Milwaukee, both of which were out of the way houses and both of which were limited to 9 x 12-foot screens on the RCA system, trimmed their prices Sunday from $1.25 to a total of $1, tax included, with children at 50 cents, tax included.

Fabian's Brooklyn Fox held its $1.20 price on week days and boosted it to $1.50 on the weekend. This compared with a week-day matinee of 55 cents and a weekend matinee of 85 and 95 cents. The Balaban and Katz State Lake at Chicago, charged $1.25 and used the Paramount intermediate system.

The attendance figures also tell a story. In Boston over 3,000 saw the telecasts at the Pilgrim during the first three days. The customers brought a baseball atmosphere into the theatre with them, as was also noted elsewhere and the house received no complaints over the show. The innovation of the house in serving box lunches proved what an observer called a "tremendous success." RCA was used.

Football?

In Chicago almost 10,000 saw the games through Saturday and the audience reaction is best judged by the fact that the customers were heard to ask if the pro football stampedes of the Bears and the Cardinals as well as the non-pro events of colleges like Notre Dame would be shown. The management has announced no definite football schedules, but there's a feeling that the pressure for them is on pretty strong.

The Chicago telecast which used Paramount's intermediate system lost part of the seventh and the opening eighth innings presumably because of the time it took to refill the film cabinets and trailed about 20 minutes all the way through due to the system. But it presented a clear picture which the audience liked.

In Milwaukee, the 21,110-seat Oriental and the 1,587-seat Tower, got off with its houses about two-thirds full. The attendance on the second day was poor, due to rain and the fear that television reception would be bad. There was also a rumor of a break in the television cable, which may have had an effect. The attendance on the third day was better at both houses. On the fifth day the receiver at the Tower went bad as the first inning was about to start and no images were available during the first one and a half stanzas, though the voice continued. On that day this house and the Oriental were about three-fourths full. Both houses are in the residential area.

Stopped

Several other Milwaukee theatres had planned to show the series on home receivers in the lobbies but reportedly stopped after the downtown Telenews was threatened with a law suit by the St. Cloud Amusement Company subsidiary—Orto—which threatened to defend its showing right at the Tower and the Oriental by law suit.

In Scranton Comerford's J. J. O'Leary found the results in the 1,800-seat Westside "very good."

"We were very agreeably surprised," O'Leary told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, emphasizing that the events had been experimental. He added that the house had no plans for the future but said the past telecasts "at most times were exceptionally clear."

In New York President Si Fabian, whose Fox in Brooklyn presented the series, and who is an enthusiastic pioneer, confined his remarks to a formal statement in which he said the matinee receipts during the series "added up to four or five times those we could have expected for the regular film features during this period, including a booming concession business." Fabian also found the image and the sound quality of the RCA system, good.

In Baseball Talk . . .

"Theatre television hit something between a double and a triple in the recent World Series," his statement opened. "Although we would have liked to hit a home-run, a complete sell-out, theatre television showed potent hitting power in the matinees. Without it we probably would not have had a chance to get to first base."

Also clothing his expressions in baseball terms was a citizen of Brooklyn who was dawdling

Franklin County, Ohio, officials this week halted construction of a drive-in by the F&Y Company and Academy Theatres on the Ackerman farm near Columbus on the ground that such an operation would violate the county's zoning laws. Voters had approved a zoning plan which would limit construction in the area to farming or residential purposes.

No Video Threat If Station Is 50 Miles Away

Theatres located at least 50 miles from main television station outlets will have little to bother about as far as video competition is concerned for some time to come, but those more closely located had better realize that television is here and here to stay, Victor Sholis, manager of WHAS told the fourth annual convention of the Kentucky Association of Theatre Owners last week in Louisville. Sholis advised managers to bear the new medium in mind in connection with their policies.

Arthur DeBra, community relations director of the Motion Picture Association of America, told the convention that both the Kentucky and the federal admission taxes had been passed as a war measure to be repealed after the conflict. DeBra termed the taxes discriminatory, stating that 85 per cent of the amount gathered under federal levy came from motion picture theatres.

Gael Sullivan, executive director of the Theatre Owners of America, also discussed the tax situation and warned exhibitors to be watchful of groups attempting to censor movies. The convention, which was presided over by President Guthrie Crowe, held several sessions.

over a pale version of that beer which every movie star seems to drink—for exploitation purposes.

The citizen, approached by the reporter, acknowledged that he had seen the series over television. No, he made it plain, he had not seen it over the large-screen system in the house across the street—the Brooklyn Fox.

Yes, he didn't doubt that the game looked a lot better on a large screen than it did over the small home receiver at the end of the bar. "But," he added, "many is the afternoon I paid that house over there 55 cents admission to see a show I didn't especially want to see. Sometimes the show was bad. But then when they get something I really want to see, they raise their damned price up to $1.20. I'll see my baseball from this bar and look at my movies at the Paramount."

Which brings up another question.

Video Too High Now, N. J. Allied Finds

The small theatre operator must either wait for a much cheaper system of theatre television or until some rental system for the equipment is available, members of New Jersey Allied, considering the question of video in their houses, agreed this week. Chance of equipment that will sell for much less than the present quotes of $25,000 was considered unlikely by technical experts who point to the amount of precision work needed in the equipment which must be done by hand.

Devotion and Guts—

Those who read the story recently about the handpicked 12 whom MGM is sending to Europe to confer with its foreign sales staff didn't know it and it's a 10-to-one shot that those who write what is called trade news for MGM didn't know it either, but in one of the 12—Publicist Louis Orlove—there's a genuine human interest story of devotion and guts.

Louis is the only publicist represented in the dozen. The telegram from MGM Vice-President William F. Rodgers, announcing his selections read: "Congratulations on a great job. You are the one chosen to go with the experts to Europe."

The fact of it is Louis did his "great job" from a hospital bed and from an invalid's chair as he recovered from an operation.

It started in Minneapolis when he keeled over while beating the MGM drum. At the hospital doctors used long words in lengthy discussions but Louis got the idea. None of that for him, not in Minneapolis anyway, when his operations base was located in Milwaukee. When their backs were turned he sneaked out to a limousine he had phoned for, drove to the airport and flew to Milwaukee where he was rushed to Mt. Sinai airport and the cut-and-carve artists got to work.

For 46 days he was between sheets but there was a telephone at his elbow and Louis kept plugging product. When he was able to walk he threw a party for the hospital staff at which MGM pictures were screened while a straight line was kept open into the screening room so the doctors could get their emergency calls.

When he was able to leave the hospital, he went back on the road through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and the upper peninsula of Michigan, talking MGM whenever he wasn't telling the city room those stories which city rooms have learned to look forward to from able exploiteers.

Finishes 40 Years, Gives Free Show

The Milwaukee Theatres rounded out 40 years of operation at Bardwell, Ky., with a free show last Thursday for everybody and a general tie-in of the town's merchants who celebrated the enterprise which J. A. Milwain set up after he decided there was something in "this new thing called movies" four decades ago.

Milwain had opened a photographic studio in the town but shifted to movies in the Opera House on the second floor of a commercial building in 1909. A few months later he built the 400-seat Red Moon Theatre on the site of the present Milwain. When a May, 1947 tornado damaged the building, he repaired it and kept it running till 1929 when he built the present Milwain.

Buying Power Abuse Charged in West Coast Suit

Charging deprivation of product in 1939 for their Rex at Bakersfield, Calif., Exhibitors S. Fouros and A. Simos this week filed suit for triple damages amounting to $510,000 in federal court at Los Angeles. The suit asserts that as a result of this alleged inability to get product, the plaintiffs had to lease their Rex to Fox West Coast and terms the asserted situation a misuse of "buying power" by an affiliated chain.

Defendants are National Theatres Corporation, its subsidiary, Fox West Coast, Fox Bakersfield Theatre Corporation, 20th Century-Fox, Warner Bros., and United Artists.

Bogeaus Trust Suit Asks $3,000,000 of Paramount

Producer Benedict Bogeaus this week filed suit for triple damages amounting to $3,000,000 against Paramount in Federal court at Los Angeles. The suit is part of a counterclaim to a suit by which Paramount seeks to foreclose a mortgage on a Bogeaus company which owns "Lulu Belle."

The Bogeaus suit asserts that through monopolistic power on the part of Paramount and others his various distributors could not get the right terms for "Lulu Belle," "On Our Merry Way," "Christmas Eve," and "The Girl From Manhattan." All but "Lulu Belle" were distributed by United Artists; Columbia handled "Lulu Belle."

SMPE Meets on Coast; Reelects Sponable

Earl I. Sponable was elected president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at its 66th semi-annual convention in Hollywood Monday, at a meeting which discussed television, color films and cost-cutting possibilities.

Fletcher Honored

The Annual Awards of the Society were made Wednesday night. The top award went to Dr. Harvey Fletcher of Bell Telephone Lab., N. Y., for outstanding research in recording and reproduction of speech. The Samuel L. Warner Memorial Award went to Ralph M. Evans of Eastman Co., Rochester, N. Y., for his research on color. F. G. Alvin received the SMPE Journal Award for the outstanding technical paper of 1948. The subject of his paper was Sensitrometric Aspects of Monitor Tube Photography.

Films at Trial

Motion pictures played a major role this week at the trial of a suit brought against the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad by Miss Isabell G. Sinclair who alleged she suffered permanent back and leg injuries as the result of a fall while working for the railroad in June, 1946. In a surprise move the railroad attorney introduced motion pictures which, he told the jury, were taken of Miss Sinclair last July, adding that they showed the plaintiff walking and moving without a limp while operating a concession stand. The jury returned a "no cause for action" verdict in Miss Sinclair's $85,472 damage suit.

Senator Downey Lauds Industry

The motion picture industry is making "vast sacrifices" at a cost of millions of dollars in spreading the "American message" throughout the world, Sen. Sheridan Downey (D. Calif.), told the Senate Wednesday in Washington.

Downey declared he was referring to exchange, quota restrictions and other barriers, in a speech lauding the industry and apparently aimed at influencing action against European restrictions on films.

"I doubt," he declared, "if any other private institution in all our history ever made such sacrifices for the good of our country and for the cause of democracy and freedom everywhere."

He told the solons that the American motion picture "has become the torch of freedom throughout the world," carrying "the American message" to all corners of the earth and carrying the story of democracy to ears beyond the reach of even the Government-sponsored "Voice of America."

Gloria Swanson Cheered By Boston Students

Students of Boston's Suffolk University and New England Art School cheered Gloria Swanson this week as she entered the first lap of her trip as a publicist for films generally and Paramount pictures.

Bay City reports indicated that the glamorous actress of silent screen days had clicked heavily with the populace where she aided in launching the Community Fund Campaign. At the New England Art School she praised the work done by students in Animated Cartoons, and later was in turn praised by John H. Bishop and W. Brownell Freeman of the Community Fund and Acting Gov. Jeff Sullivan, who referred to her as one who had done as much to advance motion pictures as any person.

Toddy Schedules Releases

Toddy Pictures, distributors of Negro pictures, this week announced that their 1949-50 release schedule would contain 28 features, 15 musicals, 6 one-reel action subjects and 11 two-reel comedies.

Gould Gets 'Villa'

Walter Gould, this week announced that he had acquired world-wide rights for "Pancho Villa Returns" and was negotiating for American distribution.

SIMPP, AFM Agree on Wages

The American Federation of Musicians and the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers this week agreed upon basic wages, for musicians recording music for productions of their members. This is the second such agreement reached, the first being with the Association of Motion Picture Producers, a branch of the Motion Picture Association of America.

The new SIMPP agreement provides a basic wage of $39.90 a man for a three-hour session in which the minimum number of musicians employed is 36. If fewer musicians are employed on the same picture where the 36-men are employed, the same rate will apply. For orchestras of 25 to 35 men the rate is $43.89 for three consecutive hours, for orchestra of 20 to 27 men it rises to $47.85. Combinations of less than 20 men, will receive $51.90.

British Variety Club To Be Inducted Oct. 20

Great Britain's new Variety Club will be formally inducted on Oct. 20 at festivities in the Savoy Hotel of London with International Chief Barker Robert J. O'Donnell officiating, it was announced this week.

The new tent—Tent 36—is headed by Chief Barker Bob Wolff, Assistant Chief Barker C. J. Latta, Charles L. Tucker; Dough Boy Bill Kupper, Property Master Lou Wilson. Canvasmen are Arthur Abeles, Fay Allport, David Coplan, Joseph Friedman, Ben Goetz and James Perkins. In addition there are the following charter members: Caroll Gibbons, Miles Goldrick, John Hunter, Lawrence R. Kent, Ben Lyon General Lyman Munson, James Murphy, Jimmy McHugh, Jr., J. Andrew Neatrour, Val Parnell.

To Visit Hospital

Tent delegates to the Mid-Year Conference of the Variety Clubs International which opens Oct. 25 at the Hotel Astor, New York, were scheduled to arrive on Oct. 23 to make an inspection trip of the Variety Clubs-Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake. The delegates will leave and return by special train for the one-day trip.

Discrimination Ban Up in St. Louis

Eugene H. Buder, attorney for the St. Louis Civil Rights Committee, this week presented a provision for the city's new contemplated city charter which would prevent any public place from discriminating against the admittance or employment of persons because of race, color or creed. A bill to the same effect is now before the aldermanic board.

Four-Screen Drive-In

Efforts to have the Overland, Mo., Aldermen's Board reconsider a zoning ordinance that would enable it to build a four-screen drive-in costing $100,000, are to be made shortly by the St. Louis Amusement Company. If the application is successful, the job would mark what is said to be the nation's first four-screen under-skyer.

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

'Intruder in Dust' Bows in Oxford, Locale of Filming

Attended by local celebrities, 34 editors and correspondents from papers in seven Southern states, and a group of personalities from the MGM studio at Culver City Calif., the world premiere of "Intruder in the Dust" took place Tuesday night at the Lyric Theatre in Oxford, Miss., where much of the film was made.

The opening climaxed two days of intensive activities in which Producer-Director Clarence Brown, Author William Faulkner, and two of the film's players, Porter Hall and Elizabeth Patterson, participated.

Last Monday Brown was presented with a special football autographed by the Mississippi University team at Athletic Field House. Later he was honored by a scroll presented by Chancellor John D. Williams, who extolled his contributions to films. He likewise was made honorary member of the University Players.

A mile-and-a-half-long parade from the University campus with 27 floats built especially by the merchants for the occasion, with Army and Navy air corps and band units, preceded the dinner at the University hosted by Chancellor Williams. In the evening a gigantic street dance was held at Court House Square, and this was followed by a World Premiere Ball at the University gymnasium, attended by 1,200.

Mayor Hosts Luncheon

A luncheon was held Tuesday at Mayor R. X. Williams' mansion. In attendance were Thomas Webb Avent, president of the Chamber of Commerce; E. H. Walker, head of Rotary; Sam Friedman, president of the Lions; Mrs. Hazel Shelton, president of the B.P.W. Club; Miss Jeanne Lowry, president of the Pilot Club; George Fenger, head of the Junior C of C; A. H. Russell, American Legion commander, and Robert Hickey, VFW commander. The local and visiting press, Chancellor Williams and the MGM contingent were also on hand.

As a concluding gesture, Brown presented a plaque to be posted on City Hall.

The Oxford Eagle, local newspaper, published a special World Premiere Edition last week. Most of the 18-page newspaper was devoted to news and activities in connection with the premiere, stories and pictures of the "on location" aspects of the film's making, human interest accounts of the principal players, and other material which local citizens will undoubtedly preserve as souvenirs of an unusual occasion in their lives—the filming of a picture in their own town, with many of them as actors.

Ties-in the Weather With 'Hurricane'

With storms and winds of near hurricane proportions prevailing, Manager Sidney H. Kleper of Loew's Poli College Theatre in New Haven promoted an advance article in a local newspaper tieing-in the weather conditions with the storm depicted in "Slattery's Hurricane," right-up-to-the-minute promotion stunt that got wide attention.—HFD.

DEADLY AIM of Kenneth Elmore was revealed when he sighted the kids of New Castle, Ind. Four harmless air-fire sub-machine guns like the one pointed at Elmore above were given away at the Royal Theatre, which he manages, in connection with Saturday matinee showings of the "Batman and Robin" and "King of the Rocketmen" serials. Elmore promoted the rods from local merchants, whom he mentioned in an ad.

'Fighting Man' in Midwest Premiere

With Producer Nat Holt heading a Hollywood contingent including Victor Jory, George "Gabby" Hayes, Bill Williams, Jane Nigh and Barbara Hale, the gala world premiere of "Fighting Man of the Plains," which 20th Century-Fox releases, was held Thursday at the Grand Theatre in Topeka, Kans.

Following the Kansas opening, which was selected because the film's story takes place during the state's early history after the Civil War, the picture was slated for a huge saturation opening in the far west during the next two weeks in several hundred theatres in the San Francisco, Denver, Salt Lake City, Portland and Seattle areas.

On Friday the stars were to be guests at the famed Royal American Stock Show in Kansas City, where the picture opened at the Uptown, Tower and Fairway theatres.

A large regional ad campaign was scheduled for each of the saturation areas, in addition to strong radio promotion.

Kansas's Governor Frank Carlson made a flying trip to Hollywood last week to confer commissions and badges on Star Randolph Scott and Holt as honorary Kansas peace officers.

'Kiss for Corliss' May Premiere in Des Moines

Before his departure on Friday (14), Colin Miller, producer of "A Kiss for Corliss," which United Artists will release, indicated that the world premiere of the film might be held in Des Moines, scene of his newspaper syndicate activities before entering motion pictures as a former executive of Enterprise Productions. Miller considered that city the film's locale during production he said. He plans to stop off there and discuss premiere possibilities, after which he hopes to visit other cities on the film's behalf.

Treasury, Youth Support Assured For EL 'Trapped'

Full-scale cooperation of the Treasury Department in all situations and cooperation from Youth Organizations with a national membership running into millions, has been assured for "Trapped," melodrama of the Secret Service, according to Leon Brandt, Eagle Lion director of advertising, publicity and exploitation. The tieup was set with the assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, the chief coordinator, and members of their staffs, with EL Publicity Manager Leo Brody representing the film's producers.

Details of the Treasury Department tieup, which will extend to all phases of publicity and public relations include screenings in all key centers, with Treasury agents, civic officials and local club association heads present with newspaper and radio representatives; full permission for all Treasury representatives to comment on the film for publication; and letters from the Treasury Department to all local offices approving cooperation in every phase of the "Trapped" campaign.

In addition, EL has been given permission to use the seal of the Treasury Department in all advertising for the picture, and to insert in all ads a line reading: "Produced in cooperation with the Treasury Department." As heralds, the company may use the Treasury's four-page booklet, "Know Your Money," imprinted with credits for the film. The Treasury has also approved a poster tied-up with its war on counterfeiting, slanted to the program and membership of the Youth Organizations of America; and has accepted a print of "Trapped" for its own archives.

On the Youth Organization tieup, the Boys' Clubs of America, Boy Scouts of America and Girl Scouts of America, with a total combined membership of millions, will cooperate with displays of posters plugging the fight on counterfeiting and carrying full picture credits; and distribution of the Treasury's "Know Your Money" heralds, also imprinted with picture credits.

Hollywood Premiere Set for 'Heiress'

Paramount has completed arrangements for a gala Hollywood premiere of "The Heiress" to be held Oct. 20 at the Carthay Circle Theatre. The invitational event will be attended by stars and other celebrities.

Following the premiere, the picture will open its regular run at the Carthay Circle for an unlimited engagement.

Milk-Drinking Contest

A recent Saturday matinee for children at the Crown Theatre, Hartford, Conn., received wide pre-showing publicity when Manager Joe Giobbia induced a local dairy to sponsor a milk-drinking contest on the theatre's stage, insuring that advance information got directly into the homes of all of its customers.—HFD.

Capitol Campaign On 'Midnight Kiss' Is One Long Kiss

Just one long kiss.

That seems to sum up the Capitol Theatre's campaign on "That Midnight Kiss" in New York.

Let the kiss begin.

Well, a far-reaching and effective tieup was made with the Barton Candy Shops. For three days before the opening, two pretty models in specially designed "kiss"-pattern dresses, distributed upwards of 30,000 Barton's almond kisses (they sell for a buck-forty per pound, were supplied gratis to the Capitol) in the neighborhoods of Barton's 24 shops in the busiest sections of Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn. The girls wore 18-inch "kisses" at the neck reading: "'That Midnight Kiss' Capitol Theatre, Thursday." Posters on baskets carried "Kiss" and Capitol copy. The kisses, in special wrappers, were inserted in specially-printed envelopes.

Barton's also placed 22x28 posters on the picture in 24 windows and interiors during its run.

A third model, dressed in midnight-blue clothes with nine-inch "kiss" at throat, paraded

Rode a Bicycle

A boy-and-girl team, dressed like Cary Grant and Ann Sheridan, rode a bicycle through downtown traffic as a stunt for "I Was a Male War Bride" at Loew's Poli, Hartford, Conn.—HFD.

TABLOID-STYLE layouts, marking a new and experimental advertising approach, are being offered to key city exhibitors by the Samuel Goldwyn office and RKO Radio on "Roseanna McCoy." Shock headlines and an editorial teaser approach are features of the campaign, as noted in the ad reproduced above.

HAVE A KISS. Model, dressed in specially-designed "kiss" gown, distributes almond kisses in Capitol Theatre-Barton Candy Shops tieup on MGM's "That Midnight Kiss." Upwards of 30,000 almond kisses were distributed by two models in Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn.

Kemp, Westbrooke Win Fabian Prizes

Grand prize of $700 in Fabian Theatres' 35th Anniversary Showmanship Drive was shared by George Kemp, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Staten Island, and Earl Westbrooke, Norva Theatre, Norfolk, Va. it was announced last week by S. H. Fabian and Samuel Rosen, circuit heads. Both Kemp and Westbrooke also captured $350 first prize award in their respective groups—the New York area division and the Wilmer & Vincent division, thus making $700 the total winnings for each.

Second prize of $175 went to Spencer Bregoff, Palace, Staten Island, in the New York area, while William Hamborsky, Capitol, Staten Island, garnered $100 third prize money. In the W & V division, second prize went to Ward Kreag, State, Altoona, Pa.; third was won by Paul Glase, Embassy, Reading, Pa., and fourth prize by Gerry Wollaston, State, Harrisburg, Pa.

First prize in the upstate New York division went to Alec Sayles, Palace, Albany; second prize to Phil Rapp, State, Schnectady, and third to Dick Murphy, Plaza, Schnectady.

Prize winners in the New Jersey district were Sal Zanca, Ritz, Garfield, and Al Buist, Rialto, Westfield.

The Monroe Greenthal prize for the campaign that "did the most for the motion picture industry and Fabian Theatres" was won by Alec Sayles, while the Warner Bros. prize for the best campaign on behalf of that company's product went to Phil Rapp for his exploitation on "The Girl from Jones Beach."

Columbus Bows in N. Y. With Benefit Premiere

A large audience of civic officials, leaders in the social world and entertainment industry executives converged on New York's Victoria Theatre Tuesday evening for the invitational premiere of J. Arthur Rank's "Christopher Columbus," being released by Universal-International.

The special performance was for the benefit of the Seamen's Church Institute of New York and preceded Columbus Day openings in more than 160 cities and towns from coast to coast.

Fredric March, Florence Eldridge, Francis Sullivan and David Cole of the film's cast were on hand for the invitational opening.

Gould Is Durwood Theatre-of-Month Winner for July

Arnold Gould, veteran manager of the Durwood Capitol in Jefferson City, Mo., emerged as the winner of the circuit's Theatre-of-the-Month award for July. While he played powerful product during the month, Gould put through what he terms a program of "conservative campaigns."

The essence of his strategy is to give consistent ballyhoo to all pictures, rather than a huge build-up for one and a sliding off on another. This method is a builder of steady patronage, he claims, and it paid off for him in July when he was top man over quota two weeks and in second place two other weeks.

There is also a good bit of ingenuity tied-up in his campaign, as illustrated by his work on "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College." Making up some of his own art work, Gould had a special display of 11x14s for lobby use, as well as a full-length cut-out of Belvedere in raccoon coat and with the typical caustic remark.

Taking a cue from the college theme of the picture, Gould tied in with a copy of Life, which just previously had featured a story of girls' colleges versus co-educational schools, highlighted by a cover picture of Miss Jane Stone, Jefferson City co-ed at the University of Missouri and later "Miss Missouri" in the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant. Gould had a special display of the article and embellished it with other items of interest about Miss Stone. The whole thing was one of the season's most unusual tieups and gathered attention of unusual magnitude.

The award to Gould was announced by Stan Durwood, circuit general manager, in the recent issue of the circuit house organ, Circuit Chatter.

Red Jeep Ballyhoo For 'Come to Stable'

A stunt that got much out-of-town attention for the showing of "Come to the Stable" at Schine's Rialto, Glens Falls, N. Y., was a new red jeep that Manager George Puch promoted from a local garage and which covered nearby resorts and towns. Banner stated the jeep was the same kind as that driven by Loretta Young in the film.

GOOD ANY TIME. Assistant Manager Alton McHan of Loew's Colonial, Reading, Pa., used the jigsaw puzzle stunt to exploit MGM's "Any Number Can Play." Stunt attracted crowds on busy corners as girl assembled pieces to form one-sheet. This idea is good any time, but don't use it too frequently, or you will rob it of its effectiveness.

Money Dates for November

To keep your theatre in the limelight of community endeavor, November money dates offer some excellent opportunities. The most obvious dates, of course, are Thanksgiving Day and Armistice Day, with Thanksgiving standing out for its seasonal goodwill possibilities. But there are other special days, too, and also special weeks, of which the wise showman can take advantage. And, if the present trend continues, a strong lineup of box-office attractions seems assured. November should be a prosperous month for the alert, wideawake theatreman.

NOV. 1—NATIONAL AUTHORS' DAY. Communities having an author of standing as a resident should arrange for him to make a personal appearance on the stage and give a short reading from one of his books. Properly advertised this will attract many new customers, and libraries, book stores and schools, civic organizations and women's clubs, newspapers and radio would give it much publicity. A radio interview would help. Arrange for the author to autograph copies of his books brought in by patrons. If necessary buy several copies and have staff members present them so the stunt cannot fail. Book stores and libraries would spread the fact that copies will be autographed, the former to promote sales of any of his books in stock. Publishers of his books might donate a number of copies.

NOV. 1-7—AMERICAN ART WEEK. Display in lobby originals, if obtainable, or reproductions of paintings by an artist of standing in the community or the state. Local library, art museum or private collector might loan originals or reproductions if theatre guards them carefully. Or, display painting and drawings by art students in any art or high school. Try for a school essay contest on outstanding painters of today or on America's greatest painters, with reproductions of famous paintings and guest tickets as prizes. Perhaps local newspaper cartoonist would draw caricatures of feature picture's players for lobby display along with other of his drawings. This would get newspaper and radio publicity.

NOV. 6-12—AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK. Management's friendly relations with schools and libraries will prove profitable here. Get a locally prominent (or state) educator to talk briefly on "How films have helped advance American education" (which might well be used for a high school essay contest) or on "Outstanding American Educators." Any near-by normal school would cooperate on the latter subject. Also good for school essay-writing contest: "Why I want an education" and "How libraries have helped advance education." Libraries and newspapers will publicize the latter.

NOV. 8—ELECTION DAY. Arrange to give election returns of any local, state or national contest of interest to patrons. Results can be announced from the stage, over a public address system or over borrowed TV viewer if results are telecast. Advertise the giving of returns well in advance to keep interested patrons from remaining at home to learn the election returns.

NOV. 11—ARMISTICE DAY, World War I 1918. If American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars or other ex-servicemen's organization observes the day, arrange to get in on it. If no observance is scheduled, try to get one organized. Urge a parade to the theatre with fife-and-drum corps. Arrange for soloists, choruses, or both, to sing World War I songs; invite audience to join in. Cooperate in any civic activity bearing upon Armistice Day. For possible school essays: "The part played by the U. S. Army in World War I; "Was the peace following World War I a just peace?"

NOV. 13-19—CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK. Book for this week films based on current or standard books of fiction, being sure that some are from books widely read by teen-age children; this will assure cooperative publicity from libraries, book stores and quite likely public schools and from any local book publisher. Get any local author who may have written for children to autograph any of his books brought in for that purpose. Buy several copies if necessary, and after being autographed present them to an orphanage. The author might appear on the stage and give a brief reading from one of his stories. Arrange for him to be interviewed on the radio, and get a newspaper story.

NOV. 14-20—AMERICAN KNIT GLOVE WEEK. About the only thing on this that would net publicity to the theatre would be a glove-knitting contest sponsored by a dealer in yarns, who should donate valuable prizes, in addition to guest tickets to runners-up. Might get a co-op ad from dealers.

NOV. 18—STANDARD TIME, adopted by Congress in 1883. Try for a school essay contest on the various kinds of time: Greenwich, siderial, standard, daylight saving, how time changes with the degrees of longitude, the gain or loss of a day in crossing the Pacific. Dealer in watches and clocks might sponsor it and contribute a watch as first prize.

NOV. 24—THANKSGIVING DAY. Decorate theatre front and lobby with pumpkins, pumpkin lanterns, corn ears, stalks and husks, vines, etc. Place a large pumpkin lantern atop the marquee, dousing other top-o-marquee lighting every now and then. Have the President's proclamation read from the stage by prominent citizen, or good reader from high school.

Cement, or build up, goodwill by advertising in herald, trailer, etc., any church observance of the day. Contact book stores and libraries for the display of books on Thanksgiving and other early New England customs, along with theatre credit card.

Being the season of football, basketball and hockey, invite local teams as theatre guests, and advertise it. Ask the teams to parade to the theatre with banners on the current feature. Have sports stars appear on stage and be introduced by sports writer or radio sports commentator. Have songs appropriate to the season rendered by soloists and/or chorus, inviting audience to join in.

Contact women's clubs, civic organizations, fraternal societies to sponsor theatre parties for orphans and inmates of homes for the aged. Admit gratis women bringing pies, cakes, jams, jellies., etc., the whole collection to be donated to some charity.

There are a number of contests suitable for the day, none of which should be overlooked.

For girls and boys, separately or together: apple ducking; mince or pumpkin pie-eating contests; costume contest, with prizes for the best or most outlandish costumes (a promoted turkey might be the first prize); a false face contest; a parade of bearers of pumpkin lanterns.

For the women: pie or cake-baking contest, entries to be donated directly to some charity or sold and the proceeds donated; contest to find the oldest married pair, or the couple longest married, with a turkey or a restaurant dinner for the winner. Then there is a guessing contest based on the number of grains of corn a live turkey in the lobby will devour in a certain period of time; or guessing the weight of the turkey at evening performance, turkey going to guesser coming nearest to actual number of grains of corn or weight.

In rural areas: contest to find the best turkey, best pumpkin, squash, pies, cakes, canned fruit, etc., with suitable promoted prizes. This may take the form of a country fair in the lobby, or near the theatre. Newspaper with a rural circulation might co-sponsor such a fair with the theatre.

NOV. 28-DEC. 3—PROSPERITY WEEK. Banks, savings banks in particular, and life insurance companies should be interested in this. If exhibitor knows of no scheduled observance, he should approach his bank and suggest a campaign to promote the saving habit; give the bank at regular or reduced rate, tickets to be awarded any new account of not less than $3 (might be less for children). Insurance company angle: Take out life insurance; it protects your family; is collateral for a loan in a financial pinch. Get merchants to take a co-op ad explaining how customers can become more prosperous by buying its wares at special reduced prices (of course with theatre's ad included). Suggestions for school essays: "On what does prosperity depend—character, industry or savings?"; "Is agriculture, labor or savings the basis of prosperity?" Banks and insurance companies cooperating should carry theatre display cards in windows and at desks.

NOV. 29—LOUISA M. ALCOTT, born, 1832. There are two current releases of films based on her books: MGM's "Little Women" and Eagle Lion's "An Old-Fashioned Girl." It may pay to book or rebook either one for the publicity to accrue from public libraries and book shops, which should display the books with picture and theatre credit cards.

NOV. 30—U. S. PATENT SYSTEM, established 1836. Suggest to merchants that they make a display of patented goods they handle and take a co-op ad. School contests: history of the U. S. patent office; how the patent system works; for the longest list of patented names in any specified line. For drawing classes: contest for best drawing for a new drawing or design for some standard patented article with guest tickets as prizes.

Anniversaries

Nov. 2—James K. Polk, born, 1795.
Nov. 2—Warren G. Harding, born, 1865.
Nov. 19—James A. Garfield, born, 1831.
Nov. 23—Franklin Pearce, born, 1804.
Nov. 24—Zachary Taylor, born, 1784.

Sectional Observances

Nov. 2—North and South Dakota admitted into the Union, 1889.
Nov. 8—Montana entered Union, 1889.
Nov. 11—Washington became a state, 1889.
Nov. 16—Oklahoma entered the Union, 1907.
Nov. 21—North Carolina admitted as a state, 1789.

'Abandoned' Bow Campaign Praised

Universal-International's world premiere last week of "Abandoned" at the Downtown Theatre in Detroit for the benefit of the Salvation Army's Booth Memorial Hospital was hailed by Downtown General Manager Charles Perry as an "exploitation-wise approach to the industry's return to better showmanship."

In a telegram to U-I Vice-President and General Sales Manager W. A. Scully, Perry said the promotion campaign was "the most thorough ever seen in Detroit" and that it "will reflect in extra business at the box-office not only in Detroit but throughout the country."

In presenting to Major George R. Hunt of the Salvation Army the check representing the proceeds from the premiere, Gale Storm emphasized the motion picture industry's endless effort to help all types of worthy charities regardless of race, creed or color.

Miss Storm, star of the picture, and Meg Randall, featured player, visited hospitals, spoke before women's groups, participated in numerous radio and press interviews and met exhibitors who were in town for the Allied Theatre Owners of Michigan Convention.

Thames Promotes Fur Co-Op on 'Big Steal'

Jimmie Thames, now assistant city manager in charge of advertising for Robb & Rowley Theatres in Little Rock, Ark., promoted a co-operative ad from Bensky's, local furrier, on "The Big Steal."

The large display, which measured three columns wide and twelve inches deep, showed a silhouette figure of Jane Greer attired in a fur cape and contained this tie-in copy: "This luxurious Himalayan Cape, worn by Miss Jane Greer, appearing today at the Center Theatre in 'The Big Steal'."

The ad stood out prominently and proved a mutual benefit for both theatre and furrier.

Full Page on 'Chris'

Manager Lou Cohen, Loew's Poli, Hartford, Conn., landed a full page on "Christopher Columbus" in an issue of the local Knights of Columbus publication.—HFD.

FROM HORSE'S MOUTH. The news came straight from the horse's mouth when Paramount's "Sorrowful Jones" came to Reade's Strand Theatre in Plainfield, N. J. City Manager Julius Daniels and House Manager Ann DeRagon built this lobby display from a borrowed merry-go-round horse and a piece of beaverboard painted to resemble a barn door, to herald the Bob Hope picture.

Showmanship Parade

Ever try to get editorial mention in your local newspaper? Maybe you were successful and maybe you weren't. Well, in Long Branch, N. J., the local Walter Reade theatres were recently accorded editorial comment on the high entertainment value of their motion picture programs. The editorial ran in the Monmouth American, ane of the oldest and most respected weeklies in the Monmouth County New Jersey Shore Area. Most unusual thing about the editorial, which appeared under the heading, "Best and Cheapest Entertainment," was that it came as a complete and very pleasant surprise to the theatre organization. It's an achievement to promote an editorial, but what a grand and glorious feeling it is when you are surprised with one.

Up in Syracuse, N. Y., Sol Sorkin must have felt like the top o' the morning when he staged his campaign for "Top O' the Morning" at RKO Keith's. Sorkin, who is an I.M.P.S. member, tied-in with all the record shops in town—naturally. And he also tied-in with the five local radio stations—naturally. But his most important tieup was with a local dairy which placed "collars" on the 5,000 bottles of milk it delivered to customers. Copy on the "collars": "Top o' the morning from the company that brings you the richest and purest milk." Below was the layout of a regular ad, with the theatre and playdate listed.

Jumping across the continent to California, we come upon a group of theatremen who were undaunted by the fact that there was only one Friday the Thirteenth in 1949—last May. Ben Corbin, northern California district manager for George W. Mann's Redwood Circuit, had put on a midnight horror show on that date at the Eureka Theatre in Eureka. The house was completely sold out. His managers wanted to do another as soon as possible, but they discovered there were no more Friday the Thirteenths in 1949. Did that stop them? Not at all. They discovered a Friday the Twelfth in August, and after a little brain work, came up with a "Friday (the almost) Thirteenths" Midnight Show. Well, even bigger crowds were on hand. Now they are looking forward to November when they will do a "Friday (the nowhere near) Thirteenth" Midnight Show.

Kisses by the thousand were handed out by Usher Thomas Rook of the Warner Theatre, Memphis, Tenn., as a front-of-the- theatre ballyhoo for "The Black Book." The kisses, naturally, were of the candy variety and attached to a card reading: "Here's a kiss from lovely Arlene Dahl . . . " etc. Manager James McCarthy, in a photo of the stunt, stood beside the usher—perhaps to be sure that only candy kisses were handed out to members of the fair sex.

Richard E. Eason, city manager for the Carolinia and Rivoli theatres, Hickory, N. C., promoted a swell half-page cooperative ad on "Task Force." Ad urged readers to "join the Naval Reserve," and explained the importance of preparedness. Then, guest tickets were offered to persons who found the most misspelled words in the eight merchant ads comprising the balance of the layout.

Hatfield Descendants Used to Boost 'McCoy'

A stunt pulled by Manager Vic Wintle of the Manring at Middlesboro, Ky., obtained much newspaper, radio and word-of-mouth publicity for "Roseanna McCoy." He ran personal notices in a local newspaper for 10 days in advance in an effort to locate and bring out descendants of the feudin' Hatfields and McCoys. Five Hatfields responded. They were photographed and press and radio interviews arranged. The interviewing took place in front of the theatre on opening night, the five Hatfields being brought to the theatre by an auto dealer in a brand-new 1949 car. A thousand heralds announcing the mass interview, paid for by the auto dealer, had previously been distributed and a great throng turned out to see them.

'Kiss' Campaign Is One Long Kiss

on busy thoroughfares three days before opening. First person each day who identified her as "That Midnight Kiss" girl received a subscription to Barton's "Sweets of the Month" Club. Runners-up received Capitol passes. Identification was made via new releases in papers and radio announcements.

Hold that kiss!

Three-hundred "Kisskerchiefs" (a man's white handkerchief with a red center to hide tell-tale lipstick) were sent to newspaper and trade paper editors and disc jockeys. Also, they were presented to the first 100 couples leaving the Capitol on opening day.

A letter-writing contest brought excellent response. The subject: "When is a kiss most romantic, in the morning, afternoon or midnight?" The 25 best letters received passes and "Kisskerchiefs."

A special screening was held for music critics. Some kiss, eh? Hold on just a little longer.

Disc jockeys played "kiss" records on special "kiss" programs. They also used recordings of a Kathryn Grayson interview.

Photographs of Miss Grayson and Mario Lanza taken in the "Kiss Room" of El Borracho were planted in the newspapers; also pictures of President of the City Council Vincent Impelliterri greeting Grayson and Lanza during their personal appearance at the Capitol.

Okay, break it up!

And wipe off that lipstick!

Pulled in Ruralites

With "Ma and Pa Kettle" booked, Charles Dulin, assistant to Manager Lou Marcks at the Strand, Delaware, O., postcarded all rural route mailbox holders, and got a merchant ad which paid the entire cost.

Right Kind of Campaign Puts Across 'Quartet' at the Downer in Milwaukee

What is the best way to advertise and exploit a "class" offering such as J. Arthur Rank's "Quartet"?

Street ballyhoo? Well, maybe. But suppose you rigged something up on that order. Do you think it would impress the type of patronage that would best appreciate this picture?

Well, so you'd use posters and window cards. All right. Now don't misunderstand us—we have nothing against posters and window cards, and there's no reason why you can't use them here. But you can't make them the be-all and end-all of your campaign.

You're not campaigning to get just the people who usually go to the movies. You're angling for that special group which attends only when it feels it will see a picture that will satisfy its discriminating taste.

Well then, what to do?

There could be no better guide than the procedure followed in Milwaukee at the Downer Theatre by Manager Stanley Constantine and Publicity Manager H. Brunner.

First, they held advance screenings for newspaper and radio critics and writers, city officials, school and college heads, department store executives, bookstore and library executives, and members of leading clubs and organizations.

Thus important people in various walks of like saw the picture, would cooperate in putting it over, and—best of all—tell others about it. That good old word-of-mouth comment working overtime.

Every public and lending library in the city and all bookstores were tied-up for elaborate displays of copies of "Quartet" and other works by W. Somerset Maugham. Of course still cards and full theatre and playdate credits were used.

To reach people interested in "class" films, postcards were sent to a special mailing list.

Cross-plugs included special teaser trailers in several leading suburban theatres, and special 30 x 40 signs in the lobbies of the Strand, Sherman, Shorewood, Paradise and Uptown theatres, all plugging "Quartet" and the Downer playdate.

Every radio station in town cooperated with liberal plugs and featured special programs written by Milt Overman, Eagle Lion exploiteer, and all local newspapers devoted special feature space to the film, as well as art and stories on the amusement pages.

This campaign, as you can well see, reached the general public. But at the same time, through the advance screenings for special groups, the displays in libraries and bookstores, and the postcards sent to a special mailing list, it also reached that discriminating body of moviegoers.

All well and good, but what about business?

It was excellent, and has been since the picture opened.

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

San Antone Ambush

Republic Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Another good action western in the Monte Hale series for the usual fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Combination of ingredients makes this one of the best in this series.

Cast: Monte Hale, Bette Daniels, Paul Hurst, Roy Barcroft, James Cardwell, Trevor Bardette, Lane Bradford, Francis Ford, Tommy Coats, Tom London, Edmund Cobb. Credits: Directed by Philip Ford. Written by Norman S. Hall. Photography, John MacBurnie. Associate Producer, Melville Tucker.

Plot: The Federal Commissioner of West Texas has an organized gang of crooks to aid him in riding roughshod over the people under his authority. But when he frames an Army lieutenant, he meets his equal and pays for his crimes when the lieutenant uncovers his activities.

Comment: A good sound story, written by Norman S. Hall, about an Army lieutenant who tries to clear his name of a federal crime, makes this latest Monte Hale western one of the best in the series. Hale, as the lieutenant, is up to his old tricks of foiling the villains by fast gunplay and fistic encounters and Paul Hurst pitches in by giving him intelligent assistance. All the popular ingredients have been well combined to give the film plenty of action, murder, crooked dealings and stagecoach holdups the followers need to keep them entertained. Good performances are turned in by Trevor Bardette, Roy Barcroft and James Cardwell, the first two the leaders of the gang who try to run the town. Direction was by Philip Ford.

Love Happy

United Artists Comedy 82 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This Marx Brothers film in which the brothers use the same characterizations that made them famous may prove amusing to their fans. Otherwise, it is a mediocre offering and has little entertainment for the average individual.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Popularity of the Groucho Marx radio show should be a good selling point in luring the customers to the ticket window, for this is Groucho's first film in several years.

Cast: Harpo Marx, Chico Marx, Ilona Massey, Vera-Ellen, Marion Hutton, Raymond Burr, Melville Cooper, Paul Valentine, Leon Belasco, Eric Blore, Bruce Gordon, Marilyn Monroe and Groucho Marx. Credits: Directed by David Miller. Screenplay by Frank Tashlin and Mac Benoff. Based on a story by Harpo Marx. Photography, William C. Mellor. Mary Pickford's Presentation of A Lester Cowan Production.

Plot: Much ado about a necklace that a beautiful jewel thief is trying to find. Being part of the rich Russian Romanoff collection, it has been sent into this country in a sardine can, and Harpo is the one who keeps it from getting into the hands of the thieves.

Comment: Unless one finds the Marx Brothers amusing, there is little entertainment in this film that heralds their return to the screen after an absence of several years. Mediocre script, plus a cast who turn in rather indifferent performances, doesn't add much to a picture that highlights the individual characterizations of Groucho, Harpo and Chico. Most of the footage is devoted to Harpo's antics and these end in a rather long and not too exciting chase. Chico comes in for several piano stints and one particular comic sequence in which he tries to interpret Harpo's sign language. Opening of the picture has Groucho narrating, with sly remarks, just what the story is about, and then he enters the plot for only two other scenes. Vera-Ellen and Paul Valentine get little chance to show their fine dancing ability and Marion Hutton sings one song number. Popularity of the Groucho Marx radio show should be a good selling point in luring customers.

Under the Sun of Rome

(Italian Dialog—English Titles)

United Artists Drama 100 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Teen agers of Rome. Individual sequences good. The whole has authenticity but is much too long and rambling.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Has no names, but should be able to capitalize in the foreign and art market on the postwar Italian successes.

Cast: Oscar Blando, Liliana Mancini, Francesco Golisano, Enno Fabeni, Gisella Monaldi. Credits: Producer, Sandro Ghenzi. Director, Renato Castellani. From a story by Renato Castellani and Fausto Tozzi.

Plot: The various irresponsible exploits of a teen-age Roman boy and his pals lead eventually to the sobering deaths of his parents.

Comment: This story of teen-agers in Rome is commendable in its individual sequences, but as a whole it is much too long and rambling. To counterbalance this and its lack of names, it should, with its subject matter and touch of authenticity, be able to capitalize on the success of other postwar Italian films. The colorful non-professional cast is capably handled and the photography, with its Roman background, is interesting. Among the exploits of ringleader Oscar Blando, with or without his gang, are swimming in a forbidden pool, losing his only shoes, stealing another pair, taking part in a grudge boxing match, posing as an Englishman and being captured by the Gestapo (which leads indirectly to his mother's death), carrying on a flirtation with a silly older woman and then trying to blackmail her, and participating in a hold-up in which his father (a watchman) is killed. Even more than this list indicates, the war element is not strong. Blando is also involved in a battle of the sexes with a girl much his superior in common sense. She triumphs.

The Fighting Redhead

(Cinecolor)

Eagle Lion Western 55 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) The third in the new Red Ryder series has the familiar characters and the quota of hand-to-hand fighting to satisfy the youngsters.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Seems to be aimed very much at the juvenile market.

Cast: Jim Bannon, Little Brown Jug, Emmett Lynn, Marin Sais, Peggy Stewart, John Hart, Lane Bradford, Forrest Taylor, Lee Roberts, Bob Duncan, Sandy Sanders, Bill Hammond, "Spooky" Reynolds. Credits: An Equity Pictures presentation. Producer, Jerry Thomas. Director, Lewis D. Collins. Original screenplay, Paul Franklin and Jerry Thomas. Based on the McNaught comic, Red Ryder, as drawn by Fred Harman, by special arrangement with Stephen Slesinger. Photography, Gilbert Warrenton.

Plot: A homesteader calls on Red Ryder for help against a rustler. Before the redhead gets things cleaned up, the villain kills the homesteader and one of his own henchmen and implicates the homesteader's spitfire daughter in the latter killing.

Comment: This is the third portrayal of Red Ryder by Jim Bannon in the Cinecolor series based on the famous comic strip cowboy, and like its predecessors it's a western that seems to be aimed very much at the juvenile market. In addition to Red Ryder and the color photography, it has fights and Red's well-known pals—Buckskin, the rambunctious little old comic played by Emmett Lynn; Little Beaver, the juvenile representation played by Little Brown Jug, and "the Duchess," the ranch woman played by Marin Sais. In the hand-to-hand conflicts Red conquers thug Lane Bradford, a familiar tough face doing well in a larger role than usual, and, in the inevitable finale, handsome villain John Hart. That about sums up the merits of the film. They should be enough for the youngsters.

Fighting Man of the Plains

(Cinecolor)

20th Century-Fox Western Drama 94 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Exciting, thrilling outdoor film that presents a colorful era in American history. Has all the entertainment necessary to satisfy all classes of audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: When word gets around that this is a swell action drama, the customers should start coming in thick and fast. Intensive exploitation should result in good business everywhere.

Cast: Randolph Scott, Bill Williams, Victor Jory, Jane Nigh, Douglas Kennedy, Joan Taylor, Berry Kroeger, Rhys Williams, Barry Kelley, James Todd, Paul Fix, James Millican, Burk Symon, Dale Robertson, Herbert Rawlinson, J. Farrell MacDonald, Harry Cheshire and others. Credits: Directed by Edwin L. Marin. Screenplay and original story by Frank Gruber. Photography, Fred Jackman, Jr. Associate Producer, Harry Howard. Producer, Nat Holt.

Plot: Badman Scott, a composite of many historical peace officers, brings law and justice to the brawling frontier town of Lanyard, Kansas. He has his moments of being recognized as a wanted outlaw, but most of the time he is assisted in his disguise by two people who are his closest friends, Victor

Jory and Jane Nigh, partners in a saloon.

Comment: Here is another of Producer Nat Holt's entertaining outdoor action films. Here again he proves that his know-how in picture-making pays off, for he has apparently allowed nothing to stand in the way of this production's entertainment worth, giving the film authentic-looking locations, Cinecolor photography and all-around production values that are in keeping with this colorful era in American history. The direction by Edwin Marin is fine, the acting convincing, the gunplay and action thrilling and exciting, and in several sequences the suspense is almost overpowering. Excellent performances are so numerous as to almost defy selection, without slighting others whose work is equally as good. But Randolph Scott, Victor Jory, Bill Williams and Jane Nigh, in particular, stand out in convincing, thoroughly satisfying jobs of acting, with Scott as the outlaw-turned-straight, giving strong evidence of why he is constantly increasing his stature on the star list. Another important asset to the picture, and one that the producer has been playing up, is the introduction of a newcomer, Dale Robertson. He makes quite an impression in the role of Jesse James and though he is only seen in two sequences, his looks and ability impress and he shows promise of being called on to do bigger and better things. "Fighting Man of the Plains" is excellent entertainment for all classes of audiences and should do better than average business if properly exploited.

Tokyo Joe

Columbia Drama 88 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Fine performances, top production values and the skilful direction of a theme that should interest most audiences, makes this absorbing, action-packed entertainment for everyone.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With the draw of the Bogart name and the quality of production, this has splendid box-office possibilities. So get behind it with showmanship.

Cast: Humphrey Bogart, Alexander Knox, Florence Marly, Sessue Hayakawa, Jerome Courtland, Gordon Jones, Teru Shimada, Hideo Mori, Charles Meredith, Rhys Williams, Lora Lee Michel, Kyoko Kamo, Gene Gondo, Harold Goodwin, James Cardwell, Frank Kumagai, Tetsu Komai, Otto Han, Yosan Tsuruta. Credits: Directed by Stuart Heisler. Screenplay by Cyril Hume and Bertram Millhauser. Adaptation by Walter Doniger. From a story by Steve Fisher. Photography, Charles Lawton. Produced by Robert Lord. Associate Producer, Henry S. Kesler. A Santana Production.

Plot: A young cafe owner in partnership with a Japanese deserts his wife to return to America, join the Air Force and fight for his country after the attack on Pearl Harbor. When the war ends he goes back to take up his old life again, but runs into a great deal of difficulty and is finally killed by subversive Japanese.

Comment: "Tokyo Joe," as its title imples, is a story about subversive activity in Japan. It is typical of the kind of entertainment the average moviegoer can expect to find in a Humphrey Bogart film: gangster stuff, with its associated killings and action-packed thrills, and a romance that has a man fighting to get back a wife won by another man. The double-dealings of the Japanese who still want to gain control of their country and the naive help given them by the innocent "little" man is convincingly told and gives the picture a tremendous amount of suspense. Production values are authentic and the direction of Stuart Heisler holds to a firm, steady pace as Bogart first a guy trying anything to win, and then working with American Military Intelligence eventually traps the operators. He does a capable, job as the American who returns to Japan after the war to take up his old life, and newcomer Florence Marly makes an attractive and realistic character of the young white Russian wife he deserted. Alexander Knox gives a forceful, smooth interpretation of the other husband, and Sessue Hayakawa and Teru Shimada are excellent as the double-dealing Japanese and the kindly friend, respectively. The strong supporting cast, consisting in a good part of Japanese, are all very effective. The theme is one that should interest most audiences, and with the expert handling of Director Heisler, has been turned into absorbing screenfare. Top production in all departments was given the picture by Producer Robert Lord.

'Christopher Columbus'

When this J. Arthur Rank Technicolor costume drama was reviewed from London (STR, June 18, p. 12), Jock MacGregor reported that while it was "heavy going in places," it was "gripping entertainment on the whole." "Inevitably, there are slow, deliberate passages," MacGregor wrote. "Producer Sydney Box and Director David MacDonald have successfully overcome these difficulties with spectacular settings and expert casting. Fredric March seems to live the title role and dominates the picture with his sincerity and enthusiasm. It is an impressive characterization. He is supported by his wife, Florence Eldridge, as Queen Isabella, and American audiences will have no difficulty recognizing the generously-proportioned Bodadilla as Francis L. Sullivan. Other important roles are played by Derek Bond, Nora Swinburne and Edward Rigby. The voyage to the New World has been enthrallingly staged. Here is a subject which obviously lends itself to the American market and offers many tieups for smart showmanship." (Of which the alert Universal-International advertising, publicity and exploitation departments have been taking full advantage—STR, Oct. 1, p. 16). Running time, 104 mins.

Intruder in the Dust

MGM Mystery-Drama 87 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult): A superior screen achievement that ranks with the best to come from Hollywood in a long time. It has a documentary quality that puts the stamp of super-reality on every scene, and it is tense, suspenseful and exciting. In a remarkable performance, Juano Hernandez brings to the screen one of the most sincere and impressive characters in years.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Because there is an absence of star values, the box-office possibilities of this picture are difficult to preduct. But it is so unusual in most respects that a great deal of controversial word-of-mouth is certain to be generated, and this should reflect itself at the box-office.

Cast: David Brian, Claude Jarman, Jr., Juano Hernandez, Porter Hall, Elizabeth Patterson, Charles Kemper, Will Geer, David Clarke, Elzie Emanuel, Lela Bliss, Harry Hayden, Harry Antrim. Credits: A Clarence Brown Production. Produced and directed by Clarence Brown. Screenplay by Ben Maddow. Based on the novel by William Faulkner. Photography, Robert Surtees. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons and Randall Duell.

Plot: A crowd around the jail is waiting for the arrest of Lucas Beauchamp, a free negro, for the murder of Vinson Gowrie, local lumber man, with whom he had been seen under suspicious circumstances. Lucas knows the identity of the real murderer but refuses to tell his name. Chick Mallison, a teen-ager who admires Lucas since the latter befriended him two years before, gets his uncle, John Stevens, to defend him. Lucas persuades Chick to dig up Vinson's body to prove he was shot by someone else's gun, and proves his innocence when the grave is found empty. But the sheriff refuses to let him leave the jail until the real murderer is caught. The sheriff spreads a rumor that Lucas has been freed, then sets a trap which catches the murderer.

Comment: Declared by those who have read the book to follow the William Faulkner novel closely, "Intruder in the Dust" is a superior screen achievement that ranks with the best to come from Hollywood in a long time. The production and direction of Clarence Brown have avoided the usual "slick" treatment and have endowed this film with a genuine realism that few manage to attain. Almost wholly photographed on location in Oxford, Miss., the picture has a documentary quality that puts the stamp of super-reality on every scene. It is fictional, of course, but it seems true to life. There is tension from the opening scene, wherein a crowd of poor whites and sensation seekers are gathered around the county jail to await the arrival of a negro suspected of murder while the solid citizenry go to church. And this tension continues throughout the suspenseful events that follow. Except for the opening titles and the conclusion, the picture is entirely without a score, which is all to the good, for a musical background would detract from its "real-life" realism. Unlike previous films dealing with the negro problem, "Intruder in the Dust" does not seem to propagandize or preach for tolerance. But the accusing finger, ever so subtle but effective, is still there as it points to a Southern community which turned out to make a holiday of a negro lynching only to return shamefacedly home when the guilty culprit had been apprehended. The performances of two of the picture's leading characters, Claude Jarman, Jr., and David Brian, suffer in contrast to the other members of the cast. Young Jarman seems to strive a little too much to make his role believable, succeeding only in making it theatrical, while Brian's characterization never seems sharply delineated. As a consequence, therefore, they are vastly overshadowed by the remarkable performance of Juano Hernandez. He is little short of magnificent. His Lucas Beauchamp is one of the most sincere and impressive characters the screen has presented in years; it is well nigh unforgettable. And the supporting players—including Porter Hall, Charles Kemper and Will Geer, to mention the most important—are splendid. "Intruder in the Dust" should hold any audience in its spell from beginning to end. Because there is an absence of so-called star values, the box-office possibilities of this picture

Theatre Management

Guide to Modern Methods in the Administrative and Executive Phases of Theatre Operation

Jack Jackson

Show Sense

Supervision, Not 'Stuporvision'

I was reposing in semi-slumber, scanning mind memos amid the tranquil fragrance of my own private Memory Meadows, with my head nestled in the gossamer softness of the dream robes that cover Reverie's lap and holding a perfectly good ticket to the Land of Morpheus, when the noisy myrmidons of reminiscence began shaking me to wakefulness. Seems like, since the first crocus discarded its 1949 overcoat to emblazon the hillside with news of the coming of spring, I've visited some 350 theatre managers in five states and two countries, who were finding the road to compliance with supervisory edict pretty rocky and that it might be smoothed out a bit for them if I'd oil up this word tractor and head it into the more formidable obstacles.

Guess it must have been the success of Paramount-Publix that spawned the departmentalization of theatre authority. Back in the middle and late '20s that outfit was going strong and acquiring theatres faster than bunnies multiply in a rabbit hutch. The need for quick training of an executive staff to instruct managers of newly acquired theatres in the rudiments of service, advertising, maintenance, operation, etc., as devised by the rapidly expanding company, was acute. In the interest of quick dissemination and assimilation of the new company policies and methods, various single functions of the theatre were broken into segments that were important and necessary only to the immediate essentials of rapid expansion.

It must be remembered that Paramount-Publix was international in scope with United States holdings well into the four-figure mark. An outfit of that size requires a lot of "top brass" and a considerable array of "tin" during its early maneuvering. When the growing pains ended the outfit was pretty top-heavy with supervisory executives, little and big, and there are many who attribute the chaos attendant on its lingering demise during '32 and '33 to this cause. However, during its years of affluence, the company was careful to swing its supervisors from one section to another and give them an extremely valuable cosmopolitan outlook and experience that accounted for a trading of ideas—one territory to another—reflecting favorably in gross receipts as well as other departments of their operation.

Most circuits born of Paramount-Publix took unto themselves many of the operational procedures which had proved of value in conducting the affairs of the mammoth outfit efficiently and proficiently. They also employed much of the "brass" and no small quantity of the "tin."

Having been trained in an "itemized" rather than "unitized" school of supervision, it was quite natural that a modicum of the company's sins should be adopted, along with the multitude of its virtues. Outstanding among the former was the brain-stifling, initiative-destroying, effort-corroding bane of excessive supervision.

Shrinkage of Reliable, Experienced, Dependable 'Brass'

Unfortunate though it be, it must be admitted that, through the years, there has been a consistent shrinking of available experienced, capable, reliable and dependable "brass" in the field of exhibition. Age, the Grim Reaper, lures to other fields and plain old jealousy have served to deplete the field to a point nearing extinction. In many instances the "tin" has acquired the status and polish but has, in most instances, proved to be sorely lacking in the array of mental molecules essential to competent and judicious exercise of administrative direction. With the genuine "brass" almost gone, the "tin" frequently assumes a Janus attitude—with one face portraying humble and polite servility to the salary source and the other depicting supercilious abstraction that discourages contribution or comment, to those he supervises. Like eunuchs strutting the halls of a sultan's harem, they wear the mantle of authority while being unable to mentally comprehend or physically comply with the wants, needs or desires of their charges.

There is and always has been need for capable, competent and sincere administration of supervisory edict over theatres. No manager, however experienced and efficient, is proof against error or, because of constant association and encounter as well as over-familiarity, guilty of condoning laxness or fault in behavior or conditions to a degree warranting correction. The well-trained "theatre sense" of a competent visiting supervisor detects such lapses instantly and—depending on the degree of competence—can, through constructive suggestion and adroitly presented criticism, effect necessary changes, repairs, replacements, etc., without detracting an atom from the aggressiveness, self-confidence or dignity of the manager. Such a supervisor is always careful to create an atmosphere of friendly personal interest that induces the manager to lay his entire bundle of business worries (and frequently those of a personal and domestic nature), indecisions and confusions on the table for advice. In such an atmosphere the supervisor is not only in position to analyze concisely, and intelligently present understandable advice, criticism or solution, but is enabled to accurately gauge the mettle, calibre and potential of managerial material.

Despite the skimpiness of remaining "brass," enough exists in the upper areas of executive authority to guide the effort of supervisory appointees along lines they themselves followed in building the industry's formerly unsurpassed structure of proud manpower: to make them capable of doing a bangup job of constructive supervision—or, at least, to erect such restrictive barriers as will make them incapable of public or private (family) display of their incompetence. With efficient manpower shriveling consistently, and other industries waving better wages and working conditions to lure the better men from our ranks, there is no requirement of greater importance facing owners and top-bracket executives. The maintenance of our position as leaders in the field of mass entertainment—and we MUST maintain it if we are to succeed, or even survive—is 100 per cent dependent on the type and character we hold at the helms of our little and big theatres. Now, more than ever before, we need the kind of supervisor who will visit every house under his jurisdiction; who will listen to the manager's problems attentively, analyze and consider carefully and provide with equal fervor, both constructive criticism of errors and praise and encouragement of effort and accomplishment.

Theatre Fundamentals

We need supervisory talent sufficiently backgrounded in theatre fundamentals to determine the actual cause for most of the errors, mistakes, omissions and oversights in theatre operation. Such men can transmit to even the neophyte managers the kind of knowledge that will effect correction at the source and thereby prevent recurrence.

By all means we should get away from the expensive and superfluous overlap of supervisory authority where contradictory decisions and conflicting advice and instruction confuse and stultify rather than explain and inspire. The evidence pointing to the foolhardiness of continuing the top-heavy supervisory structure—in today's comparably small circuit operations—is abundant. That the cost is tremendous, both in misspent dollars and discouraged and destroyed manpower, is brutally obvious and a cause for wonder about our survival by those with whom

Kids Observe Rules Of Safety, Get Tickets

Tom Grace, manager, Eastwood Theatre, East Hartford, Conn., has a new tie-up with his local chief of police, with a number of guest tickets given weekly to school children demonstrating public safety measures. Under the tieup, police officers on duty at various intersections near schools report the names of outstanding youngsters weekly, with the latter getting guest tickets and Grace receiving numerous newspaper breaks.

theatres do business. That petty jealousies, between factional heads of single departments, is responsible for the withholding of customer-attracting, money-making ideas, germinated in the minds of capable underlings, has been related to me times over by chaps who experience had taught to fear retaliation from "tin" authority for the slightest infraction of authoritative boundaries. Let me tell you of a few instances that give reason to dispute whether theatres of today are being blessed with supervision or cursed with "stuporvision":

In one circuit there have been three managers transferred to outlying theatres and one discharged because they had the temerity to discipline janitors who were not performing their work satisfactorily. The janitors were members of a Union and complained to the business agent who, inturn, took the matter up with some labor relations officer of the company. Instead of standing his ground and backing the authority of the manager, the labor department officer chose the easiest way—so far as his job was concerned—and arranged for punitive measures to be taken against the offended managers instead of the offending workers. The effect of the decisions on every one of the circuit's managers is obvious and certainly not conducive to the building of the self-confidence necessary to administrate the affairs of a well-operated theatre.

Another chap with a swell promotional idea had his ears banged down because he discussed it with a publiicty head before bringing it to the attention of the promotional executive. No, the idea was never put into effect, despite the fact that the company was, at the time, negotiating for a more expensive national deal that held far less promise of effective box-office results.

Departmental Rights

In another city two minor department heads encountered a situation that lent iself admirably to plans already under consideration for expansion. A phone call to a higher executive resulted in a bluntly administered rebuke for invading the departmental rights of still another executive. Eventually, the executive with the precisely correct title got around to caring for the matter but at a cost 150 per cent above that offered the first negotiators.

When the scheduling of three conflicting attractions—set to play concurrently—came to the attention of a city manager of a fairly large circuit, he considered it wiser to let the booking department discover its own error because a previous complaint had resulted in some unpleasant correspondence and unwarranted reprimand. He went ahead and spent company funds for necessary advance advertising, front, etc., and just waited for the correction that came a few days later.

Before me are many other similar instances garnered from the managers of theatres. But these come closest to leading the "stuporvision" league.

The field of managerial incumbents today is replete with fellows who never had the opportunity to school themselves—or to be schooled—in the fundamentals of precisely efficient theatre operation. They need the time and attention of some supervisor capable of intelligently explaining away some of their erroneous conceptions about the "right and wrong" of their jobs. Their entire vista of the theatre, and its social and economic functions is distorted and confused. They mean well and can do well if the powers that be will only see to it that they are given the right kind of basic instruction in the principals underlying a good job of theatre management.

It'll take time and patience and there'll be little time for gin rummy or golf for the fellows who undertake the task. They'll have to spend more time in those hot under-stairs offices than they do in the rug-covered, air-conditioned ones. They can't be had at a dime-a-dozen and they're not as plentiful as cherries at a cocktail bar.

But one of them can do—and do better—what three or four are doing now and they're worth their weight in gold to the present success and future growth of theatres anxious to hold leadership in the race for the vanishing dollars of America's amusement seekers.

are difficult to predict. But it is so unusual in most respects that a great deal of controversial word-of-mouth is certain to be generated, and this should reflect itself at the box-office. It clearly deserves to be a notable success. Whatever the outcome, one fact is irrevocable: It is a superb motion picture of which Producer-Director Clarence Brown and, incidentally, Hollywood—can well be proud.

Germany Year Zero

(German Dialog—English Titles)

Superfilm Documentary Drama 75 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A thorough, stark and dramatic documentation of postwar Germany, with the degradation of a boy of 12 as the plot focus.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The Rossellini name and its own quality make this a good bet for art houses and satisfactory for serious audiences elsewhere.

Cast: Ernst Pittschau, Ingetraude Hinze, Franz Gruber, Edmund Meschke, Erich Guhne. Credits: Produced, written and directed by Roberto Rossellini. Music, Renzo Rossellini. Photography, Robert Juillard. English titles, Charles Clement. Introduction by Quentin Reynolds.

Plot: Contributing heavily to the support of himself and his impoverished family by the legal and illegal devices of the street, a 12-year-old boy finally follows its cold dictates to the extent of poisoning his burdensome, bed-ridden father. Rebuffed by his adviser, he commits suicide by jumping from a high building.

Comment: Roberto Rossellini, producer-writer-director of the critically widely acclaimed Italian films, "Open City" and "Paisan" and of the much heralded forthcoming "Stromboli," took his cameras to Berlin two years ago for a picture about postwar Germany. That picture has been brought here now, not without a European festival prize of its own (Locarno), and is, due to its own quality as well as to such advance selling points, a very good bet for the art houses and satisfactory for serious audiences elsewhere. Using as a plot focus the degradation of a boy of 12, Rossellini documents thoroughly, starkly and dramatically Germany back at the beginning, civilization destroyed—at the year zero. Against a tremendous backdrop of devastated buildings he manipulates his characters through starvation, boredom, blackmarket, stealing, prostitution, perversion, juvenile delinquency. This documentation is somewhat at the expense of the immediate plot, which does not always progress clearly. Some strands seem to be forgotten—evidence, perhaps, of censorship—and some developments come unexpectedly. Robert Juillard's photography is excellent, aided at every turn by Renzo Rossellini's forceful musical score. The cast has been assembled by Roberto as usual from non-professionals of the locale, and they speak entirely in German. The boy, played with great poise by Edmund Meschke, is, according to Rossellini "the prototype of the German child who has survived the catastrophe of his native land. Whether he excites pity or horror I do not know. I simply reproduced the truth as I saw it."

TRI-STATES WINNERS IN HOLLYWOOD. Managers of Tri-States Theatres who won top honors in the A. H. Blank 70th Anniversary contest were entertained in Hollywood for a week, including a luncheon at Paramount. Among their hosts were Ray Evans and Jay Livingston, composers of Buttons and Bows, To Each His Own, Golden Earrings and other song hits, and William Demarest, comedian of "Riding High" and "Red, Hot and Blue." Left to right, above, are: Robert Leonard Paramount Theatre, Des Moines; Ira Crain, Bonham, Fairbury, Neb.; Betty Hensler, Uptown, Des Moines; Evans; Livingston; Demarest; William Miskell, Tri-States district manager, Omaha, and Mrs. Miskell.

NEW Hollywood Model 48

Cretor's Hollywood Model 48 has a new design, but that old time durability and efficiency! Beautifully constructed of striped stainless steel, with eye-catching lucite top of sky blue and cherry red. Transparency of colors when lit makes this the "hit of the show". Welded steel frame and sidewalls assembled by Cretors craftsmen assure you of life-time service. Easy-to-slide drawers, for raw and waste corn, a handy cash drawer and a large storing cabinet are added money savers that eliminate the need for other equipment. Modern heating element keeps corn appetizingly warm and the popping temperature is controlled by an automatic thermostat. The New Hollywood Model 48 has a surprising capacity of 18 oz. of raw corn per popping. Pops corn right before the customer's eyes . . . creates desire and stimulates sales.

News of the Locals and Men Who Put Shows on the Screen

Robert Burns and Ira Jacobsen, members of Local No. 110, Chicago, were singled out for thanks and praise by Barton Kreuzer, hea dof RCA's theatre television activities, in an address before the Tesma-Teda Convention in Chicago, for their cooperation with RCA engineers in installing a complete theatre television system in the Grand Ball Room of the Stevens Hotel during the 11½ hours between 2 A.M. and 1:30 P.M., September 28th. Kreuzer reminded his hearers that they had used the same ball room for their annual banquet and dance the night before, and had seen no video equipment in it. At the conclusion of his address a boxing match appeared by television on the 15x20-foot screen.

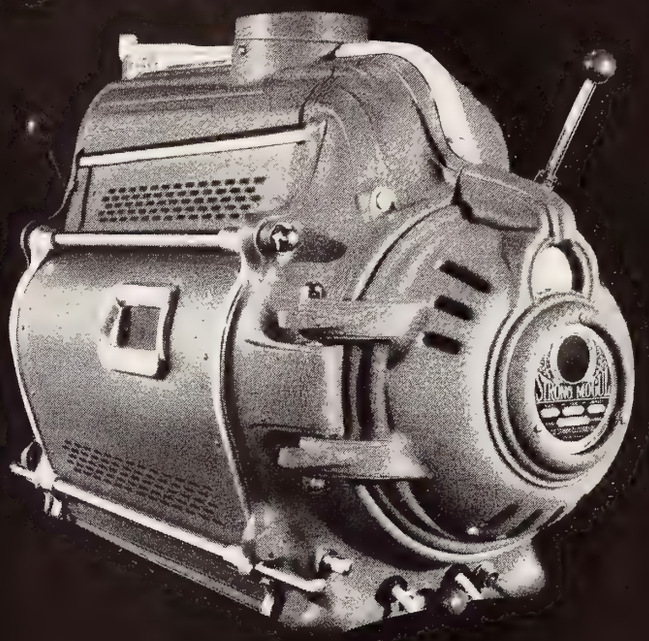
Frank H. Abbott, member of Local No. 307, Philadelphia, since 1938, is now a practicing attorney associated with Frank Murdock, the I. A.'s general counsel, with offices in Philadelphia. Abbott received his B. S. in Electrical Engineering from Villanova in 1941, and completed his legal training at Temple University in June of 1949.

When Clarence O. Fehling, member of Local No. 219, Minneapolis, and a practicing attorney in Minneapolis since 1925, decided to move to Arizona, he went back to work as a projectionist under the jurisdiction of Local No. 294, Phoenix. While thus employed he prepared for his Arizona bar examinations, and is now practicing law in that state.

In harness to the last, Leo Weiss, charter member and former secretary of Local No. 160, Cleveland, died of heart attack while on his way to work at the Loew's Stillman Theatre, where he had been projectionist for the past 19 years. He was 61 years old. His widow, Anna, survives him.

Local No. 244, Newark, New Jersey, has voted 54-51 to remain under IA administration. Because of disputes among the membership, the local has been operated directly by the IA national office for the past four years.

Local No. B-153 has been formed in Louisville, Kentucky, and has organized approximately 150 ushers, cashiers, and other house employees of Louisville's downtown theatres, according to Acting President Chester Demaree.



Local No. 171, Pittsburgh, celebrated its fortieth anniversary with a night club party. The two charter members present, Clyde Cain and Arthur Williams, are still active projectionists.

Wallace J. Yutzy, Robert N. Gretton and G. L. Hoover of Local No. 219, Minneapolis, took time out for a trip to Chicago to check on the latest television developments.

FORUM REPORT

Every Theatre Needs the Best In Projection and Sound

Even Smallest House Can Afford It and Will Profit By It, Council Insists

"In every theatre of every size the quality of the projection and sound equipment should be given first consideration, regardless of cost.

"No compromise with quality is permissible at any point. That has been one of the troubles with this business—putting a dollar ahead of the quality of the show.

"The smallest theatre can afford equipment of the best quality. It doesn't have to pay as much as the larger house. It doesn't need the same size light source to fill its screen, or equally large amplifiers to fill its auditorium.

"But people who go to the smallest theatre are entitled to see and hear as good a show as those who go to the largest.

"Even the smallest theatre can afford to give it to them, and will profit by doing so."

In these words one member of the Projection Advisory Council summed up the opinion of the overwhelming majority of the Council members, who this month discussed quality vs. cost of projection and sound equipment. This Councilor practices exactly what he preaches. He is Supervisor of Projection and Sound for a large circuit that includes both de luxe large-city show-cases and some exceedingly old shooting galleries. He follows a consistent policy of giving his audiences in every theatre the best show science can provide. His circuit is highly successful.

The majority of the Council members participating in this month's meeting agreed with him absolutely.

Price Difference Trivial

"The difference in price between the best equipment as compared with poorer apparatus is so small," added another member, "that we see no justification for not putting the best in all of our theatres.

"Furthermore, the best is not always the most expensive. There are instances where second-price equipment actually gives better performance. Sometimes the only difference between the second-price and the first-price item is in gadgets that we don't want anyhow.

"But we never buy on price. What we are looking for is the best performance regardless of price. We like to save money, but top performance comes first. If there are two or three different makes of apparatus that will all give top performance, naturally we pick the best buy for our money, but we do not compromise with the quality of our show in any theatre. For instance, we would not think of putting anything except the best projection lens in even our very smallest house."

The majority in support of these views was stronger than two-thirds of all the members participating.

The Council considered the question of what kind of projection equipment to install from the points of view of (a) most important theatres; (b) the less important and (c) least important theatres. They considered such detailed items as arc lamps, generators, rectifiers, projector heads, soundheads, amplifiers, loudspeakers, screens and lenses. The overwhelming majority of the members are agreed that there are no such things as less important or least important theatres when it comes to choosing equipment; and no such thing as less important or least important equipment items. On this last point some members offer a slight qualification with respect to screens only as will be noted further on.

Other typical majority comment:

"It is just as important to give good projection and sound in the smallest theatre we have as in the largest, and patrons are just as conscious of the quality of projection and sound in the one theatre as in the other. There is no substitute for quality. Regardless of the importance of the theatre, quality should be the first consideration. I do not feel that any theatre is more important or less important, but try to keep the standard of projection and sound the same regardless of size of the house or of what admission is charged.

"After selecting equipment on the basis of quality, naturally we are then interested in buying quality at the lowest possible cost.

"The only exception I make is screens. Rather than the most expensive screen I prefer to buy a good standard screen at less money and replace it more often. Cleaning and refinishing screens is expensive, never restores the screen to its original quality, and tends to lessen the size of the perforations and thus affect the higher frequencies of sound."

One Standard for All Theatres

Still another member of the majority adds:

"Our circuit has one standard for all theatres and we endeavor to maintain them all accordingly. No matter what projection or sound equipment we buy for any of our houses, we consider quality only and cost no object."

On the other side of the question, there is a small minority view summed up by one Councilor as follows:

"In the most important theatres, top quality equipment only on all items, as long as the price asked is the normal market price for it. 'A' houses must present pictures in the best possible manner and quality should not be sacrificed in any respect. In less important theatres I use top quality lamps and screens to assure a good picture, but can get by if necessary with rebuilt projectors, lenses, soundheads, amplifiers, and loudspeakers. In the least important theatres I use the cheapest equipment throughout, except for a screen of best quality."

And roughly intermediate in opinion between the majority and the minority is the Councilor who explains his system as follows:

"All equipment is bought on a quality basis with attention to reliability, expected span of use, interchangeability and good

The DRIVE-IN THEATRE

Centrally Placed Refreshment House Forms Focus of Drive-In Design

They crowd in long before dark to wait for the show, to get a snack at the centrally-located "patio" or to let their kiddies play with the slides, teeter-totters and swings. The stockade fence in the picture entirely surrounds the theatre site.

Capacity business on opening night. Theatre is illuminated and screen blank because opening festivities, including fireworks, are still under way. Refreshment-and-rest-room building, called the "patio," can be seen brilliantly lit up to right of the screen.

Up to 10 attendants are needed at this island snack bar, which serves from all four sides. Bar is closed after hours by letting down windows here seen hinged up to ceiling. Car-to-car refreshment service is also available for those patrons who prefer it.

Durwood Theatres' 1949 drive-ins are centered around the refreshment building, called the "patio." In order to locate this building in the exact middle of the parking area, and still keep the most desirable projection arrangements, a separate projection building is provided several ramps nearer the screen. This arrangement proved so successful in the company's new Skylark at St. Joseph, Missouri, here pictured, that it is being copied in Durwood's two other new open air theatres, at Leavenworth, Kansas, and Jefferson City, Missouri.

Further to facilitate access to the refreshment building a central "aisle," six feet wide, extends down the whole center of the theatre, with the patio placed midway along its length.

The St. Joseph Skylark occupies 15 acres and accommodates 500 cars. Its twin box offices are set far back from the highway to provide an adequate hold-out area. Entrance and exit are completely separate. A stockade-type fence surrounds the entire site.

The front sign structure, refreshment patio, projection building, twin box offices and storage building are all of steel and concrete construction. The screen presents a picture 60 feet wide. A large play area in front of the screen is equipped with slides, swings and teeter-totters. Chairs and loudspeakers are provided at the rear of this area so parents can watch their children and the show at the same time.

The heart of the theatre, the patio, is permanently open on the side facing the screen. Here the flat roof extends out several feet to provide protection against weather. Patrons coming for refreshments can continue to watch the picture through the wide opening and hear the sound through conveniently placed speakers. The counter is a four-sided island that serves from all four sides, and is staffed by as many as ten attendants, to eliminate any waiting in line for refreshments. Baby bottles are warmed. Windows stretching from counter-top to ceiling are hinged outward to the ceiling when the counter is in use; and hinged down and locked to the outer edge of the counter when the theatre is closed. The patio cannot be closed in any other way. Rest rooms are located in the patio, not in the projection building, and a telephone booth has been put there for patron convenience. Additionally, car-side refreshment sales service is provided.

There are four changes of program each week and two shows a night—three on Saturday night. Admission is fifty cents each for adults. Children under 12 accompanied by adults are admitted free, regardless of whether they come in cars or afoot.

Ed Durwood is President and Stanley Durwood Vice President of the company, which operates 16 indoor theatres in Kansas and Missouri. Kenneth Malchose, former manager of the Durwood Orpheum Theatre in St. Joseph, has been transferred to manage the St. Joseph Skylark.

Compartmented Storage Bins

A new line of compartmented metal bins suited to storing marquee changeable letters, or refreshments, or projection room and janitor room supplies, and for general storage purposes, has been brought out by Lyon Metal Products, Inc. Bins measure 6½" high by 3' wide by 1' deep. They are provided with 8 shelves, all of which except the bottom one can be adjusted up or down at 1½" intervals provided shelf dividers are not used. Dividers, if used can be adjusted horizontally along the width of each shelf at 1" intervals. Other available accessories include shelf boxes and sloping bins and dividers. Finish consists of baked-on green enamel.

Washable Plastic Wallpaper

Stain-resistant wallpaper of washable plastic, available in a wide range of designs, is a product of United Wallpaper Inc. Twenty-four new varieties have just been added to the line, including 15 patterns and 9 plain tints. The material is said to resist almost every known stain, and to have been tested with thousands of soap-and-water washings without showing any trace of deterioration.

Black Light Lamps

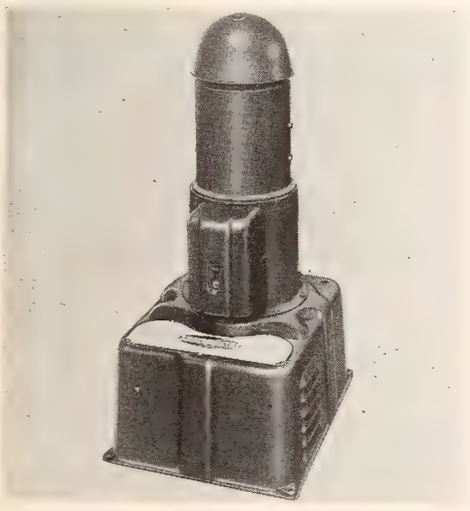
Ultra-violet lamps for illuminating fluorescent murals and signs, and for other black light applications, have been announced by George W. Gates and Co. They are essentially low pressure mercury arcs, delivering long-wave ultra-violet through filters that eliminate almost all visible radiation.

Aluminum Ladders

Lightweight aluminum ladders in several models, including extension ladders reaching to 40 feet, have been put on the market, at $2.42 per foot for straight types and $2.52 per foot for extension types, by Zero-Lite Products. Ladders are made of aluminum throughout, have heavy rubber feet and ribbed rungs.

Flood of New Projection Aids Presented at TESMA Exhibit

Arc Lamps, Screens and Drive-In Speakers Lead Parade of Improved Equipment for Presenting Better Pictures and Sound



New equipment for projection and sound constituted the star exhibits at the Chicago Tesma-Teda convention of September 28th-30th. An account of that convention, and of the many other items of theatre supply and equipment displayed there, will be found elsewhere in this issue of Showmen's. New projection and sound items, described here, accounted for nearly half of all the displays unveiled—a surprising number of new and original items.

New lamps, new screens and new drive-in speakers led the parade of projection and sound displays.

New Kinds of Screens

A wide variety of news screens was exhibited; some of the conventional perforated type, but made of new and superior plastics whereby they can be shipped folded instead of rolled (they will not crease); and some of entirely new materials. Among the latter were the Starke Cycloramic, woven of three plies of chemically-impregnated cotton (STR for September 17th, Page E-28) and the Nu-Screen Corporation's Glascreen of woven glass fabric (STR for August 20th, Page E-20). Williams Screen Company was represented at the Ballantyne booth by a new seamless screen (distributed by Ballantyne) claimed to be practically tear-proof and rupture-proof, to recover automatically from dents and depressions, and to be immune to expansion or contraction caused by moisture. RCA showed a new Snowhite with an entirely different perforation pattern and heavier weave; Da-lite Screen Co., Radiant Manufacturing Corp. and Raytone Screen Corp. were all represented by new and superior products. The whole trend in screen development appeared to be (a) toward the use of new and different materials, such as woven glass or chemically-impregnated cotton or (b) toward the use of conventional materials of superior quality, that is, the newer and better plastics.

One of the new motor-generators displayed by Motiograph. It is rated at 70-140 amperes and vertically mounted to minimize floor space required. A 115/230 ampere model, horizontally built, was also displayed.

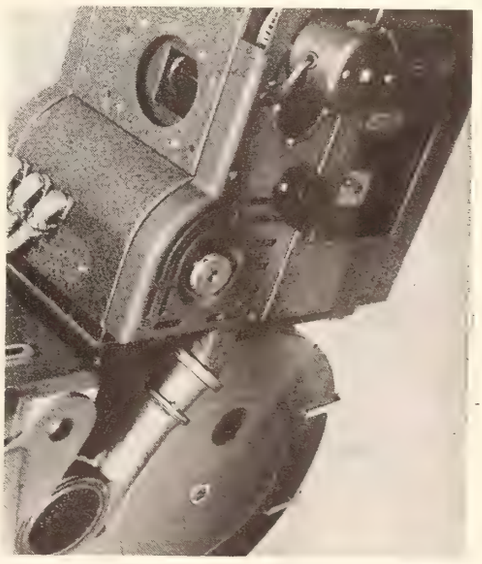
Drive-In Equipment Items

Continued expansion of drive-in projection and sound equipment was also a prominent feature among the Tesma exhibits. The popularity of drive-ins as a new and prospering factor in show business is doubtless one reason why so many of the new lamps shown this year have either water cooled or specially air-cooled positive carbon holders (The Huff positive carbon cooler was also on display; DeVry Corporation, as will be noted later, demonstrated a projector mechanism with forced air cooling of the aperture; and Century Projector Co. had a new water-cooled aperture.)

Numbers of new in-car speakers were shown: among others, Autocrat, Inc., Die-cast Aluminum Speakers, Inc., Drive-In Theatre Equipment Co., Drive-In Theatre Manufacturing Co., and DX Radio Products Co., offered models not previously introduced. A trend was evident in direction of using larger speaker cones, for better sound quality, in the later models of in-car speakers.



Whitney Blake Company showed a number of moisture-proof underground wires and cables for the most economical wiring of drive-ins, and coiled cords for connection to in-car speakers.

The blower-equipped projection port for drive-ins, (STR for August 20th, Page E-24), designed to keep dust, rain, flies and bugs away from the projection lens, was displayed by Drive-In Theatre Manufacturing Co.

Air-Cooled Projector Mechanism

DeVry Corporation showed their new "Koolite" system in which the DeVry Model 12,000 combination projector-soundhead is fitted with two small, motor-driven fans. An air blast is directed over the aperture rails and past the film face, while the exhaust unit both removes heated air from the projector and additionally cools the shutter blades. The tested result, according to the manufac-

Circuit Heads Use Lobby Television To Cultivate Future Patronage

Often heard in motion picture exhibitor circles is the question "What can television do for me?" An interesting answer comes from the Walter Reade Theatre circuit—one of the pioneers in lobby television. Their answer, in essence, is:

"Very little from an immediate box-office dollar and cents return; tremendous from the more important aspects of prestige, establishing a reputation among patrons of progressiveness, and most importantly, getting patrons used to the idea of coming to their neighborhood motion picture theatre for the best in current television."

This latter point, according to the Walter Reade organization, is where the eventual payoff will be. In the not too distant future when full theatre screen television will become an actuality for the average movie house, the average patron will accept it as a matter of logical development.

It was with this long-range thought in mind that the Walter Reade circuit installed a television set in its Park Avenue Theatre, New York City, back in 1946—the first time a television set had been installed in a modern American theatre as a day-in and day-out lobby service for patrons. This same thought was behind the quick installation of additional 20-inch screen sets (at that time the largest on the market and a novelty to most patrons) in circuit houses in New Jersey—even in such small towns as Freehold, with a population of only a few thousand.

It was also the motivating thought when the Reade circuit remodeled its Majestic Theatre in Perth Amboy last winter, and built a television room into the theatre at great cost. A set projecting onto a six by eight foot screen was used and the area furnished with living-room comfort—again the first time such a lounge designed solely and specifically for television had ever been built into an American Theatre.

A second such installation has been made in the circuit's St. James Theatre in Asbury Park, N. J. Smaller, twenty-inch-screen sets in special lobby installations are also operating in nine other theatres—the Mayfair and Paramount in Asbury Park; the Strand in Freehold, the Carlton in Red Bank, Paramount in Long Branch, Community in Morristown, Strand in Plainfield, and the circuit's two drive-in Theatres in Woodbridge, N. J., and Kingston, N. Y.

Mounting television set above exit door is one way used by Reade circuit to provide lobby video when other space is not available. Folding chairs were placed along one side of lobby to accommodate patrons. Installation here shown was in the Majestic Theatre, Perth Amboy, N. J. It was subsequently replaced by a specially-built, de luxe television lounge.

This television lounge at the Paramount Theatre, Asbury Park, N. J., has SRO during many broadcasts of special interest. Walter Reade circuit officials say such lounges help educate patrons to look to their motion picture theatre for video entertainment, and prepare them to expect large-screen programs in the auditorium when those become available.

The circuit's progressive television interest reflects the personal interest in theatre television of Walter Reade, Jr., who is co-chairman of the national Theatre Owners of America committee on television, and who has been prominent in the industry's activities furthering the development of theatre television. It is his opinion that installation of large screen television in the average motion picture theatre in television reception areas is only a matter of developing equipment that is within the price range of the average theatre, and developing programs that will be suitable for theatre presentation.

Therefore, according to the Reade organization, lobby television is the only available means of preparing theatre patrons for this development—in effect bridging the gap until full-screen television becomes an everyday reality.

TV Free to Non-Patrons

The Reade organization has been making its television facilities free to the public—not patrons alone, but open to everyone—for special attractions like world series, and public events such as the Presidential inauguration. It has also, particularly in the case of its six by eight foot installations, been using lobby displays to list the programs to be shown in the big lounges.

The circuit's officials say it is impossible to determine the effect of television on the boxoffice. While the lounge in Perth Amboy might be full to its 200 person capacity on a night fights are telecast, there is no sure way of knowing whether the patrons came to the theatre because of the movie, the television facilities, or the combination of both. Only one thing is clear—there are 200 persons in the lounge watching a fight who might not otherwise have been at the theatre.

Several types of television patrons have identified themselves. There are husbands who bring their wives to the theatre to see the movie while they themselves watch sports events. There are others who come early to watch such variety programs as the Milton Berle Star Theatre and then go in to see the picture. There are still others who like to catch a few minutes of television while waiting for the "break" that will enable them to get seats in the theatre auditorium and see the film from the beginning. And there are also children who count on the late Saturday afternoon kiddie shows as a definite part of their Saturday movie and video entertainment.

There are too, of course, occasional patrons who ask at the boxoffice when a certain television program will be shown, or whether the program will be on the theatre's set. However, these are very few. All in all, Reade executives have concluded that figuring an actual boxoffice return on a television investment is—as was stated—practically impossible.

Actually, a lobby television installation is summed up by them as an investment for the future plus the fact that it provides an additional exploitable service for patrons. In that way, they believe, it very definitely pays off.

Link Between Still and Moving Pictures on View at Rochester

George Eastman House, Rochester, New York, which will be opened to the public this fall as a photographic museum, will display among other exhibits a set of still photographs projected in sequence by Eadweard Muybridge in 1880 to constitute a motion picture. The photographs, showing a horse race, were made by lining up a number of cameras alongside a racetrack, and stretching strings across the track. When a horse galloped past, it broke the strings one after another, causing the cameras to take a succession of still pictures. Muybridge's "projected pictures of horses in motion amazed audiences," Eastman Kodak Company reports in announcing the exhibit.

Protective Varnish

A new plastic-base varnish for lounge furniture that is said to be totally resistant to burning cigarettes and even to naked flame has been put on the market by L. Sonneborn Sons, Inc. The material is further rated as acid- and stain-resistant. It can be applied over wood, masonite, metal, tile and composition materials; and with the help of priming coat to such non-porous surfaces as glass.

Emergency Power Plant

A 5-KW diesel-driven electric generator, so quiet and vibration-free that it can be operated without bolting down, according to its manufacturer, has been brought out by D. W. Onan & Sons. The smooth operation is the result of opposed-cylinder design and integral shock mountings, the maker explains. Either 50 or 60 cycle output, in all standard voltages, can be supplied.

Custom-Built Refreshment Stand For Medium-Sized City Theatre

Custom-built refreshment stand specially designed for a suburban theatre of 1,850 capacity with patronage consisting largely of industrial workers and their families.

Pictured here is a specially designed, custom-built refreshment stand recently installed in the Walter Reade Majestic Theatre, Perth Amboy, New Jersey. It embodies novel and original features, notably the rotary plastic covers over the candy display. These can be revolved back and out of sight under the display, leaving the candy open to the patrons to serve themselves, or, rotated forward in their metal grooves, they cover the display with clear transparent plastic when it is desired to have attendants hand out the merchandise.

The Majestic is a theatre of 1,850 capacity, located on the main street of a municipality suburban to New York. Patronage is drawn largely from industrial workers and their families. The house recently was remodeled to the extent of a new facade, a rebuilt lobby and mezzanine, and a redecorated auditorium ceiling. The new stand was designed for the remodeling by Edwin Gage, company Secretary; LeRoy Blumenhein, Director of the Concession Department, and William I. Hohauser, Inc., Architect.

It Compels Attention

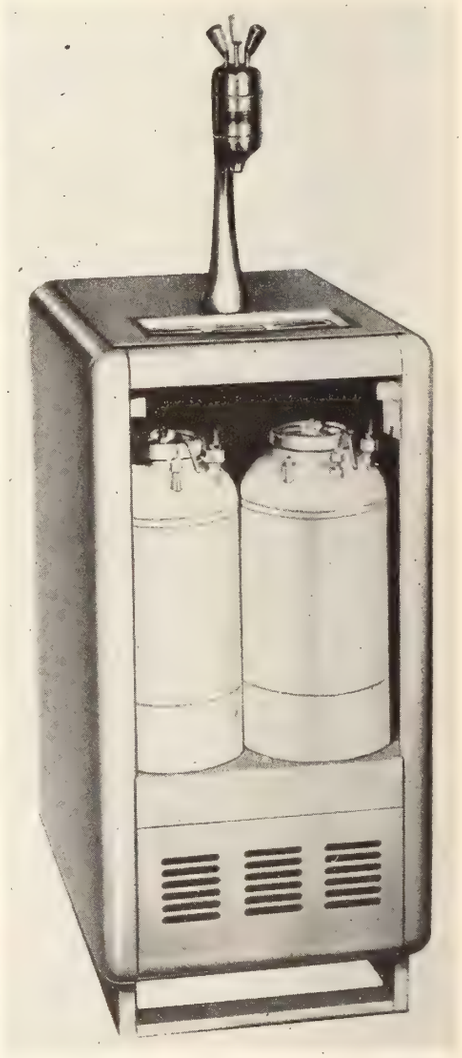
The most brilliantly lighted, decorative and ornate object that greets the eye of the entering patron, the refreshment stand is located where it directly faces the entrance doors. Its length is 18 feet 6 inches, but the fact that the ends are curved results in an overall counter space of approximately 21 feet. Popcorn is sold from a Manley machine at one end; and cola drinks, root beer, orange crush and ice cream from the other end. The nut counter is adjacent to the popcorn machine; the center of the counter, which has the roll-back plastic covers, is devoted to candy bars. Distance from the floor level to the top of the counter is 2 feet 5 inches, and to the tops of the glass cases 3 feet 6 inches. Both are lower than customary, so that patrons will reach down and not up for their merchandise.

Wood, Metal and Plastic Used

The stand itself and its large backboard are bleached wood veneer. The base of the stand is protected against scuffing by being formed of a 4-inch strip of black formica ¾-inch thick. The canopy above the stand is made of flexmetal and studded with downlights that spot the merchandise. This canopy is supported in part by poles which stretch up from the counter top and are painted to match the bleached wood veneer.

Two spacious cabinets are built into the backboard for storage, and there is additional storage space under the counter. The two glass-windowed display spaces built into the upper rear wall are used for advertising, display of unusual merchandise; or for decoration, as with flowers.

Trouble-Free Popcorn Bag



A popcorn bag that does not rustle or rattle, cannot be blown up and exploded, and cannot be filled with water and dropped from a balcony, has been put on the market by Hi-Land Paper Products Division of Grand Bag and Paper Company. A sample sent to STR is of soft, cloth-like texture, with advertising printed on it. Its porosity is such that although it can be blown up it cannot be made to explode; when the expanded bag was struck it collapsed noiselessly. It would not hold water, which sieved through it instantly. The bag is marketed under the trade-name "Blow-Pruf".

Apple Juice Machine

A novel beverage can be dispensed to your patrons—real apple juice squeezed out before their eyes—by means of a juicer perfected by Southern Cross Manufacturing Corp. It is rated to supply 110 five-ounce drinks from each bushel of good quality juicing apples.

New Carbonic Dispenser Offers Three Beverages

J. H. Rasmussen and Company's new carbonic dispenser offers choice of plain soda water and two flavors at a dispensing rate of 10 to 20 gallons per hour (depending on incoming water temperature). A jet type carbonator produces a drink of exceptionally high carbonation and eliminates need for positive water pressure. The mixing faucet is self-cleaning. Height of the unit is 36″ and its other dimensions are 25½″ deep and 18″ wide. It contains a ¼ h.p. compressor, a heat exchanger, a carbonator and two 2¼ gallon syrup tanks.

Tesma Presents Parade of New Aids to Showmen

Equipment Stressed as Never Before; S. H. Fabian Praises Manufacturers and Dealers for Helping Theatre Industry

A striking testimonial to the vastly increased interest of equipment manufacturers in the theatre field, as well as of theatre owners in equipment and furnishings for their operations, the Joint Tesma-Teda Trade Show and Convention this year easily surpassed all former records. In fact, in number and still more in variety of exhibits, the motion picture equipment industry trade show in 1949 began to take on some of the aspects of the really large industry trade shows, such as the chemical industry or the radio industry customarily stage at Grand Central Palace in New York. If still not as large in actual number of companies represented, Tesma-Teda displays this year were at least as varied, and possibly even more so.

Exhibits Overflowed Booths

Tesma-Teda presented about 110 exhibits, overflowing from the 90 booths available to tables set in odd corners. More than one booth was (by courtesy of the company renting it) used also by other manufacturers who applied too late and could not obtain one of their own. Since almost all the exhibits included at least several items, and some of them dozens of items, it is safe to estimate that from 1,000 to 2,000 different articles for theatre and drive-in use were put on exhibition at the Stevens Hotel during September 26th-28th.

A striking number of these items were entirely new, while a still larger number incorporated novel improvements not previously shown to the public—a further testimonial to the interest of manufacturers in developing and improving practical aids to successful theatre operation.

The Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association elected new officers. Their names, and the pictures of most of them, appear elsewhere on this page.

The Theatre Equipment Dealers Association again chose Ray G. Colvin of St. Louis to head their organization, but altered his former title of President and substituted the designation Managing Director. Mr. Colvin also serves as Secretary and Treasurer. Directors chosen by Teda to serve during the coming year are: Tom Shearer, of B. F. Shearer and Co., Chairman; K. R. Douglas of Capitol Theatre Supply Co.; H. J. Ringold of Ringold Theatre Equipment Co.; Jack L. Rice of J. M. Rice Co.; Ray Busler of United Theatre Supply Co.; John P. Filbert of John P. Filbert Co.; Harry Sorenson, Modern Theatre Equipment Co.; Ernie Forbes, Ernie Forbes Theatre Supply Co.; Joe Hornstein, Joe Hornstein, Inc.; F. A. Van Husen, Western Theatre Supply Co.; J. Eldon Peek, Oklahoma Theatre Supply Co.; Nash Weil, Wil-Kin Theatre Supply, Inc., and W. E. Carrell of Falls City Equipment Co.

Gael Sullivan told a huge audience gathered in the Stevens Hotel's Grand Ball Room that the theatre industry has four important problems, the most important being its own internal public relations.

"Most of our troubles are due to ourselves; we have washed our linen in the front yard," Sullivan declared. "We've got to start from inside before we can do a good job outside."

The industry's second problem is taxation and its third censorship—"we can be censored into weakness," he asserted, if held up to ridicule by any local authority that chooses to take such a stand.

As to television, it could be "good competition," Sullivan believed, if this industry faces up to it and grows with it.

Showman Praises Manufacturers

S. H. Fabian, who addressed the gathering on the subject of television, agreed.

"Television will enhance the value of the theatre to the community," he contended. "The theatre now will bring people not only great pictures, but great events the moment they happen. Television and motion pictures can produce, in the theatre, the finest entertainment and information available anywhere."

Fabian told the assembled equipment manufacturers and theatre dealers that when they urge showmen to keep theatres up to date and in perfect condition, they are not only serving themselves but rendering a genuine service to the industry.

Average of 47 New Theatres a Month Attained by Industry This Summer

New theatre projects reported by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW during the months of July, August and September, 1949, totaled 142, or an average of slightly more than 47 per month. The new projects were not evenly distributed through the summer, however. To the contrary, the total figure was dragged down by a severe slump in August, when only 21 new projects were reported, as against 67 in July. September marked a sharp recovery, with 54 new projects, almost touching the July level.

Throughout the summer, drive-ins led indoor projects in the ratio of better than 2 to 1, for a three-month total of 45 new indoor theatres and 97 new drive-ins. The approach of the winter season did not change the ratio. In the month of September, STR reported 17 new conventional theatre projects and 37 new drive-in projects.

The approach of the winter season did not even adversely affect drive-in projects in Northern states. September's reports include 1 in Canada, and not less than 4 in Wisconsin. In fact, Wisconsin's September drive-in total equalled Florida's—4 in both states; and was exceeded nowhere except by Texas with 7.

Drive-in projects reported during September had an average capacity of 607 cars—apparently showing a trend toward reduced size, since July's average capacity was 693 and August's 636. There is no discernible trend with respect to total costs —September's drive-ins were built or planned to an average cost of $94,300 per theatre, as against $82,608 for July and $168,000 for August. There seems to be a definite trend, however, in the direction of lower cost per car. So far as both capacity and cost figures for the same theatres are available, they are: July, $210 per car; August $264 per car and September, $180 per car. Two of September's outdoor projects—in Arkansas and in Florida, check in at average costs of only $100 per car.

Indoor theatre projects reported in September show a declining average in both number of seats and cost per seat. Seating capacities are down from 1,042 in July to 1,000 in August and 687 in September, and so far as detailed figures are available, in average cost per seat from $286 in July to $140 in September. It would appear that the overall summer trend, both for drive-ins and for indoor houses, is in the direction of lower costs per patron unit. Some part of this trend may well be accounted for by the current slight easing in the supply of building materials and of labor.

September Projects Widespread

September's new drive-ins are distributed throughout the country as follows: Texas, 7; Florida and Wisconsin, 4 each; New York, 3; Alabama, Missouri and New Mexico, 2 each; and one each in Arkansas, California, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, Mississippi, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Vancouver.

September's new indoor theatre projects are distributed as follows: 2 each in Illinois, Kansas, Utah and Wisconsin; one each in Arkansas, California, Georgia, Indiana, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina and Texas.

Two new remodeling projects were reported in September—in Connecticut and Vermont.

Air Devices Sues Competitor, Alleging False Advertising

Air Devices, Inc., New York, has filed a complaint against Anemostat Corporation of America in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. The complaint, filed September 29, 1949, alleges that defendant has resorted to false and misleading advertising, as well as other unfair trade practices, in connection with the defendant's manufacture of air diffusers. Air Devices, Inc., seeks damages in excess of $100,000, as well as injunctive and other relief.

W. E. Sound Activities Turned Over to Altec

Users of Western Electric Company loudspeakers, microphones and disc reproducing equipment henceforward can obtain maintenance parts and service through Altec Lansing Corporation, and through Graybar Electric Company, which will act as distributor for Altec in sales and service, as formerly for W. E. Western Electric Vice President F. R. Lack announces that his company has withdrawn entirely from commercial activities in those fields; and has concluded an agreement with Altec Lansing as of October 1st for the protection of present and future users of equipment of W. E. design.

Commenting on the announcement, Altec President G. L. Carrington says:

"This development will enable both Altec Service and Altec Lansing to round out and expand their interacting activities, not only in the motion picture field but in the audio industry generally. The addition of these splendid Western Electric products to our present line of sound apparatus enables Altec to supply all branches of the audio industry with their essential technical equipment."

Industrial Product Short Good Show for Workers Who Make It

Shorts featuring industrial products can be good entertainment in communities where such products are made.

MOVIES ARE ADVENTURE, one of a series of public relations shorts put out by the motion picture industry, ran for a full week at the Orpheum Theatre in Gardner, Mass., instead of the three days originally planned. The "magic theatre chair" referred to throughout the picture was made by the Heywood-Wakefield Company which has its headquarters in Gardner.

Manager Dana Kennon exploited the short (which ran with Come To The Stable) by featuring it in his local newspaper advertising and through the editorial columns under the heading, "Hollywood Salutes Heywood-Wakefield." The Heywood-Wakefield house organ, SHOP NEWS, ran an editorial article in the issue that went on the streets the day before the short opened.

Added Drive-In Revenue from Children's Miniature Trains

Miniature trains, some of them with capacities of as many as 48 paying customers per ride, are now offered to drive-ins in a variety of types by Miniature Train and Railroad Company. Track gauges are 12, 14, 15, and 16 inches, according to the type of train ordered and the choice of the user. Designs are ultra-modern; one locomotive is an exact scale model of one of the latest G. E. diesel locos; all locomotives and coaches are of the streamliner type. Drive is by gasoline motors through fluid clutches and some models have air brakes on every wheel, making for faster and smoother starting and stopping and therefore more rides per hour. Track comes in 10-foot straight sections and in curved sections, allowing ample latitude in laying out the route of the "railroad."

Every Theatre Needs the Best In Projection and Sound

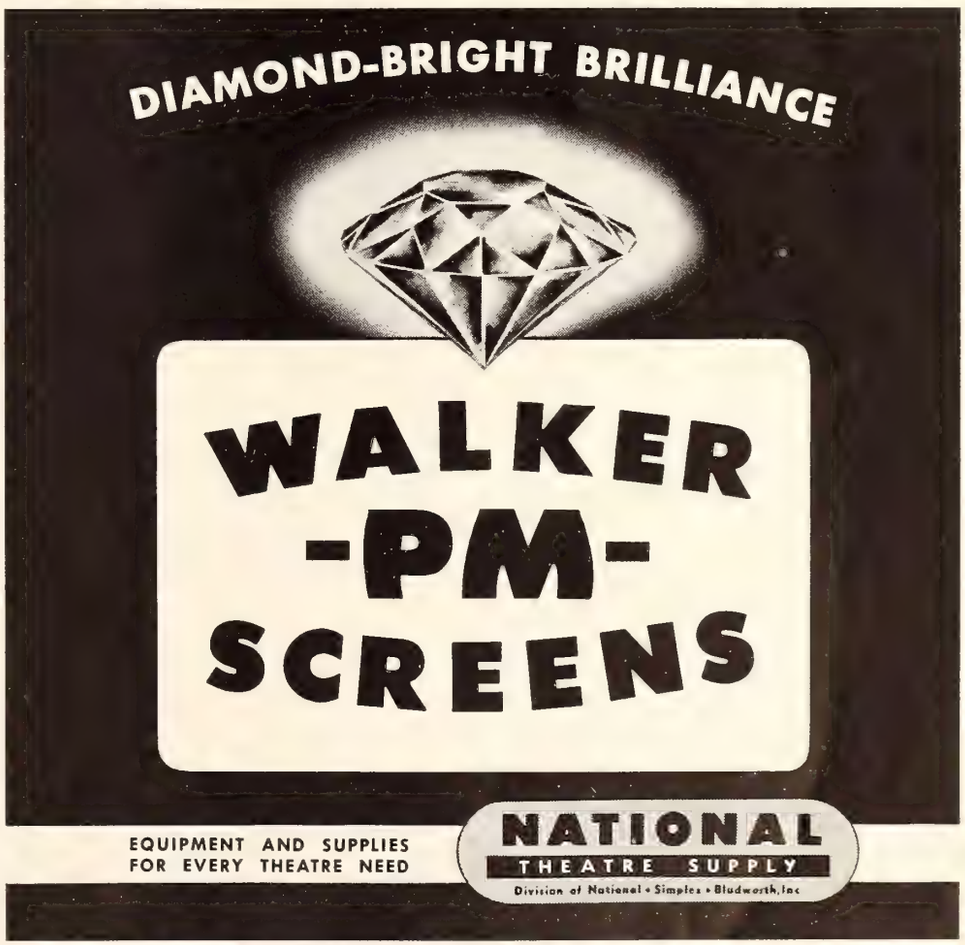
design. Unhandy, small, hard to clean, cluttered-up, flimsy units are not even considered. We do not believe in cheap bargains of assembled units of various makes that cannot be properly matched without use of shims, etc.

Span-of-Use Principle



"We have an expected-span-of-use for each item. It is figured on hours of operation, not on so many years. Our theatres are considered as falling into three classes: first run, grind houses and night houses. Mechanisms are all the same type, so they can be interchanged. After one-half its useful life on the first run, a mechanism is thoroughly reconditioned and sent either to a grind house or a night house. This keeps the first run theatres in tip-top shape, and the grind houses and night houses receive frequent change of mechanisms, so that none operates with obsolete models. As older equipment nears the end of its useful life, it is traded in.

"Sound is bought as a unit. We do not shift this equipment to other theatres, but replace it after its expected span of use.

"Screens are bought according to situation—some cheap, some expensive. Our greatest problem is puncture. Usually the screen is damaged before its span-of-use is reached."

Eastman Kodak Co. to Build 600-Seat, $200,000 Theatre

Eastman Kodak Company will build a 600-seat, $200,000 theatre at Rochester, New York, adjoining George Eastman House. Its facade will match the Georgian architecture of the photographic center. Seating will be of the stadium type. The theatre will be used for showing motion pictures, teaching special phases of photography, and for lectures.

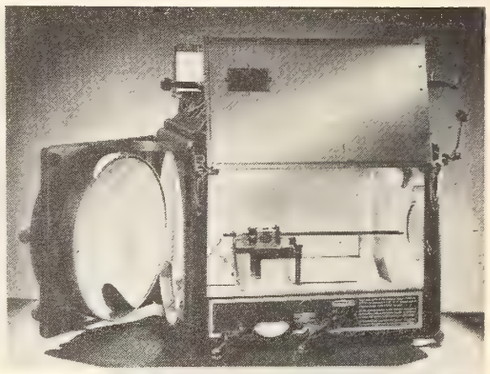
New Strong Lamp for More Screen Light



LATEST 90-AMPERE MODEL HAS FORCED-AIR COOLING OF POSITIVE MECHANISM, AUTOMATIC CONTROL OF CRATER POSITION, AND RATED OUTPUT BEGINNING AT 21,000 LUMENS

Latest of the new lamps designed to meet the ever-increasing necessity for more screen light—and latest product of Strong Electric Corporation—the new arc lamp pictured here is built around a design that incorporates forced-air cooling of the positive carbon feeding mechanism, an exceptionally large enclosure making for cooler operation, automatic and independent feed of both carbons with automatic positioning of the crater, and an f/1.9 optical system to match the latest and most efficient projection lenses.

The lamp was placed on public view for the first time on September 26th, at the Tesma-Teda convention in Chicago.

Designated the "Strong Mighty Ninety," the new lamp normally burns 90 amperes with a 9-mm. x 20" plain high intensity rotating positive and a 5/16" x 9" copper-coated negative. It is designed, however, to take an 11-mm. negative and ⅜" copper-coated positive and burn at 115 amperes; and, additionally, to utilize up to 130 amperes whenever certain very recently developed carbons become commercially available.

Forced air cooling of positive carbon feeding mechanism, controlled air flow stabilization of the arc, and operation in a chamber measuring 20,000 cu. in., enable this lamp to deliver 21,000 lumens at 90 amperes, according to the manufacturer; and up to 26,000 lumens at 130 amperes. Reflector is 16½" in diameter, f/1.9 in speed. Component subassemblies are readily removable as units, facilitating cleaning and maintenance.

Rated Output 21-26,000 Lumens

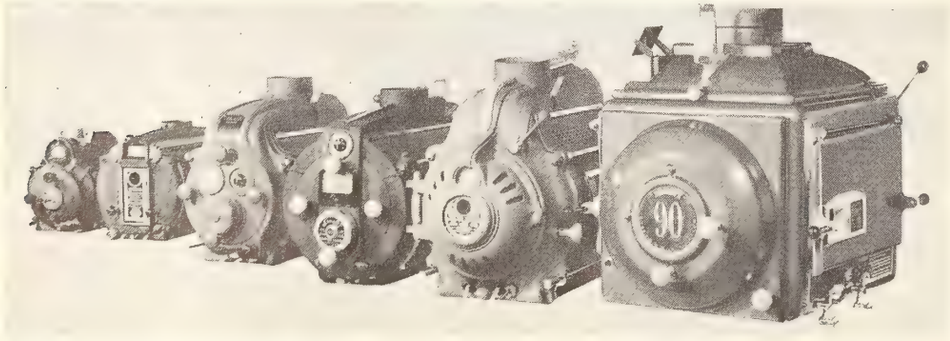
Rated output, according to the manufacturer, is 21,000 lumens at the standard 90-ampere trim, up to 26,000 lumens at 130 amperes.

Feeding of both carbons, and positioning of the arc crater, is automatic; controlled by a bi-metal tube, sensitive to radiant energy, which was specially developed for Strong Electric Corporation. The tube is out of sight in these illustrations. Also out of sight—located outside the lamp along its left-hand side—are the two small carbon feed motors. Although the action of each of these motors is independent of the other, both are controlled reciprocally by the feed-governing circuit in such way that when one carbon speeds up the other slows down and the crater is therefore always maintained in optimum location with reference to the reflector.

Cooler operation, and therefore more light within the limits of the heat-tolerance of the film, is promoted by two innovations. The first is the enlarged size and emptiness of the enclosure, which has an air content of 20,000 cu. in. The second is the controlled, forced blast air cooling. Each of the two carbon drive motors is fitted with a blower. Channels in the lamp casting conduct forced-draft air from these blowers to a nozzel which in these pictures is concealed behind the right rear corner post of the lamphouse. The air stream initially cools the positive carbon feeding mechanism and thus assures lower operating temperature. It also and further serves to stabilize the burning of the arc, to assure complete combustion of any black soot, and to carry white smoke away from the reflector where it might otherwise be deposited to the detriment of optical efficiency.

Optics Match Fastest Lenses

The reflector is eliptical, 16½ inches in diameter, and has a rated optical speed of f/1.9. Thus the latest and most highly developed projection lenses can be used with the "Mighty Ninety" lamp without the loss of light that is unavoidable when the best lenses are used with older lamp optics of lower speed. The reflector and its tilting mechanism are integrally mounted to the back door, providing maximum accessibility for cleaning.



Operating Details

A sloping chute, which can be seen just under the negative carbon and running parallel with it, collects copper drippings. The arc imager can be seen just behind the chimney. A 0-150 scale ammeter is located below dark-glass window. Manual controls for the two carbons are mounted on either side of it, but normally will not need adjustment.

To the right of the positive control there is a current selector which is set to the number of amperes at which it is desired to burn the arc. With this selector switch in the desired position, the rectifier or motor-generator power supply is adjusted up or down to attain the desired gap length, normally 5/16th inch. To lengthen or shorten the gap, when desired, adjustment is normally made at the power supply and not at the lamp.

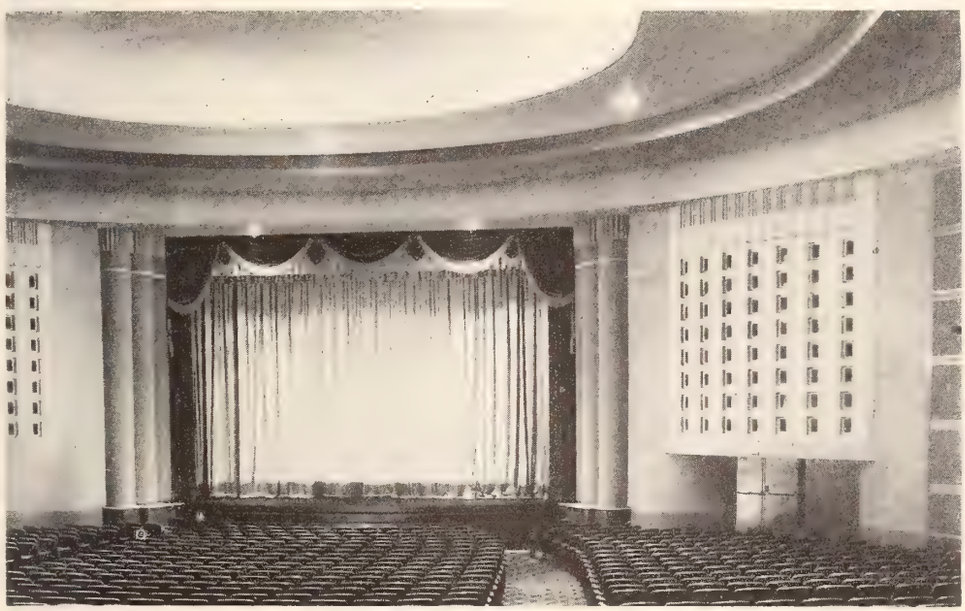
Unit Design Aids Maintenance

Cleaning and servicing are greatly simplified by the unit-type construction used throughout the lamp. One of these pictures shows removal of the positive carbon holder. This can be done in a few seconds, without tools, by turning three wing screws a quarter turn each. Other component parts are similarly removable as units. An automatic trimming light further facilitates trimming, cleaning and maintenance. Normal burning is, as already noted, completely automatic once the arc has been struck, by means of controls needing very little maintenance.

Parade of progress of Strong lamps through the years, with the "Mighty Ninety," the latest and most advanced model, at the extreme right of the line.

Modulated Modernism in Design For A New England Theatre

Neo-Classical Trimming, Living Flowers, Modulate Severity of Style's Demands



Although ultra-modern both in basic design and in abundant use of such materials as glass and chrome, Loew's newest theatre, the Poli, Norwich, Connecticut, is softened and made more gracious and homelike by means of occasional wooden panels, live flowers, draperies, and domestic type furniture and lamps; and given a touch of the less austere and more familiar through addition of neo-classical pilasters at the screen opening and in the foyer. Soft tapestry is used over much of the acoustical plaster. The foyer is brightened with tapestry in green and gold, and the lounge with tapestry in red and green.

The house is named for the late S. Z. Poli, pioneer New England theatre builder and one-time owner of the Poli circuit. Elaborate ceremonies featuring the opening of the new theatre were attended by his widow; by his daughter, who is now the Marchioness de Gerine; by the Lieutenant Governor of the State of Connecticut, and by outstanding celebrities including Frank Sinatra. At least 35,000 persons are estimated to have attended the well-advertised opening display, although the total population of Norwich itself is only 23,000. However, the city is located in a closely-populated area, with many surrounding towns and suburbs to help supply patronage for the new house.

The facade of the Poli, not pictured here, presents mosaic tile pilasters at either side of the entrance. Recessed into the tile of these pilasters are large, aluminum-frame attraction boards. The ticket window is at the right as the patron enters. Marquee and its changeable letter attraction board are curved outward and arc as far as the curb line; while the marquee soffit and its incandescent lighting sweep inward to all-glass entrance doors located approximately ten feet inside the building line. The arrangement creates the effect of an outer lobby of which the street itself forms part.

The very spacious inner lobby (completely visible over its full length through the plate-glass entrance doors) is walled with marble, with bevelled mirrors carrying modernistic chrome and crystal appliques, with relieving panels of walnut and ebony wood, and with banks of green plants and living flowers. There is no advertising of any kind along these lobby walls. Flooring is non-slip tile set in geometric designs. Lighting is indirect, from coves at either side of the ceiling, from coves alongside the few wall mirrors, and from a few downlights.

At the far end of the lobby, the patron turns left to enter the foyer. Set in this corner, equally visible the length of the foyer and the length of the lobby, is a large, semi-circular, brilliantly-lit refreshment stand. It forms the common focal point of both lobby and foyer areas.

Foyer Is Homelike

In the foyer side wall opposite to the lounge door are the doors to the auditorium aisles; and at the end opposite the candy stand (not seen in this picture) are neo-classical pilasters similar to those at either side of the auditorium screen opening. Except for the doors, foyer walls present panels of mirrors alternating with panels finished in homelike wall paper. Some of these carry framed pictures. Foyer lighting, other than the blaze at the refreshment stand, is from a single ceiling trough located at the opposite side from the entrances to the auditorium, and from large, domestic-style table lamps.

The auditorium seats 1,387. Lighting is partly indirect, partly by downlights. There are no fixtures. The strictly functional screen opening is devoid of proscenium but graced with old-fashioned tasselled draperies. Four curving steps that sweep across the whole width of the screen opening and lead upward to the screen platform add an illusion of intimacy. There is an elaborate air-conditioning system, said to have cost $100,000. The screen is the new Glascreen.

Lounge Strictly Modern

The lounge is strictly modern in decor. It has heavily-upholstered, very comfortable furniture, a rubber tile floor, large table-style reading lamps, metal sand urns, and a ventilated telephone booth for the convenience of patrons.

The Poli is owned by Berkman Brothers, well-known Norwich builders, who designed and constructed it throughout. They incorporated many refinements, including fireproofing of the wood used in its construction. Operation is entirely in the hands of the Loew circuit, under lease, with Joe Boyle as manager.

Maintenance Memos for Managers

NOVEMBER, 1949

1. Does some staff member watch picture and sound at all times and report faults promptly to the projection room? Are you told of faults that occur in your absence?
2. Have you made a regular schedule for progressive changes in the timing of your outdoor lighting to conform to seasonal changes in daylight?
3. Time for another careful inspection of carpet throughout the theatre? Shift badly worn sections to places where traffic is light for the sake of economy.
4. Time now to consider the types of refreshments that sell best during winter weather and place your orders for them so they will be on hand in ample time?
5. If your balcony is not open during matinee performances do you nevertheless have an usher check it regularly as a safety measure and to prevent abuses?
6. Does the staff always remember to put out rubber mats PROMPTLY when weather turns stormy? Impress them with the need for conserving the life of your carpets.
7. Time again to have all sump motors thoroughly inspected for brush and commutator condition, condition of bearings, and lubrication? Don't delay needed repairs.
8. Have sump pumps themselves thoroughly inspected for condition of all washers and packing. Authorize any repairs needed to conserve power and prevent leaks.
9. Have you a schedule for thorough periodic inspection of all bare wooden floors? Splintered, loose or uneven boards can lead to expensive law suits.
10. If you have an unused organ be sure oil is kept on all metal parts, organ loft swept and cleaned occasionally, organ inspected often for damage by rodents.
11. Remind employes who change the marquee letters that they are never to stand on, or rest the ladder against, any frail or brittle parts of the marquee.
12. Is your own projection equipment damaging prints? Consult with projectionists and authorize whatever repairs to equipment may be needed to prevent this.
13. Have you been careful to avoid inflammables in your planned Thanksgiving Day decorations, or if not to have such materials flame-proofed? Take NO chances on safety.
14. Has the cleaning staff been warned never to use brass polish, but only machine oil, on top plate of ticket machine? Are newly-hired cleaners so warned?
15. Do you yourself watch all lighting to make certain faulty tubes or bulbs are always replaced promptly—that "dead eyes" and flickering fluorescents do not annoy your patrons?
16. Are you compelled to use deodorants in rest rooms? If so, are you certain you have exhausted every possible alternative resource of ventilation and cleanliness?
17. Will a relief engineer in your theatre know where to find every size and type fuse he may need in an emergency, and just what type and size to use at every point?
18. Is plumbing causing trouble—does water drain slowly anywhere because of clogged or partly clogged pipes? Don't risk expensive flood repairs; fix plumbing immediately.
19. Make certain that cleaning crew does not waste electricity; that they turn off work lights as soon as cleaning each part of theatre has been completed.
20. In projection room fires, projectionists are expected to operate safety devices and then get out—to save their lungs. Are switches properly located for this?
21. Do you watch changeovers for any alteration in brightness of picture and volume of sound? Insist that projectors be accurately equalized in both respects.
22. Time to have the box-office change-maker overhauled? How long since it has been cleaned, adjusted, oiled and had all its working parts inspected?
23. Outdoor electric boxes take a heavy beating from winter weather. Have them all examined, any rust removed, and sanded and repainted as may be necessary.
24. Have you made arrangements for complete, regular, expert inspection and maintenance of all furnace and heating equipment throughout the winter months?
25. Do you have buzzers and phones between office, floor and projection room checked periodically to keep them in perfect working order for every need or possible emergency?
26. Check occasionally on opening theatre to make sure porter staff always turn off automatic urinal and toilet flushing devices when cleaning is completed.
27. Listen to sound carefully when size of the audience changes. Do your arrangements for keeping sound volume setting adjusted to size of attendance work out well?
28. Time to re-examine roofs, gutters, leaders, water tank, etc., for any signs of rust or other fault that might lead to leaks under pressure of winter weather?
29. Have you set up a regular, fool-proof routine whereby every fire extinguisher in the theatre will be inspected and refilled at the intervals specified on its label?
30. Are all the theatre's extra keys kept locked up at all times, but properly tagged so every one can be identified readily whenever it may be needed?

turer, is to reduce aperture temperature from 1350° F. to 450° F., using a high intensity arc lamp at 70 amperes with no film in the aperture. The manufacturer further states that with this method of cooling test loops of film have been run through the aperture for more than 3,000 revolutions without showing any sign of film damage.

Projection lenses of the latest types were presented by Kollmorgen Optical Corporation, including their sealed-construction, six-element, coated f/1.9 Super-Snaplites. The recently reorganized Projection Optics Company, which is now under the presidency of Fred E. Aufhauser, also exhibited a full series of projection lenses; and Bausch and Lomb put forward their new Super-Cinephor and Cinephor series.

Motor-Generators and Spotlamps

The large and varied display of Motiograph, Inc., included their very new Hi-power motor-generator sets, with output ratings ranging from 70 to 230 amperes; the smaller model being vertically mounted to reduce the amount of floor space occupied. The manufacturers claim that these generators are available at prices equivalent to current prices for rectifiers of comparable amperage rating. J. E. Robin and Co. showed an entirely new model motor generator with the motor mounted above the generator and coupled to it by belt drive, again requiring a minimum of floor space.

Capitol Stage Lighting Co. had on exhibit an entirely new 1,000-1,500 watt incandescent spotlamp, complete with fingertip control of six gelatines and fadeout dowser, iris, and masking shutter. Murch Electric Corporation showed a small incandescent spotlamp; and also presented the latest Murch factory-built glass projection port, which permits glassing in projection ports with optical glass, coated or uncoated as desired, without need for having the frames tailor-made to order.

Projection Accessories

Ace Electric Manufacturing Co. demonstrated a new reel-end alarm in which only a harmless ball-bearing comes into contact with the film; a new film splicer which can do perfect work on shrunken film because the pins are adjustable, and a new dry scraper for removing film emulsion for splicing.

Neumade Products Corp. offered a new wire brush film scraper, for effective removal for splicing not only of the emulsion but also, the manufacturer asserts, of the binding layer that holds the emulsion to the celluloid. It was developed in cooperation with Eastman Kodak Co.

LaVezzi Machine Works showed a new line of removable film trap doors for three models of Simplex projectors—the Standard, Super and E-7. Wenzel Projector Co. exhibited new, improved projector magazines.

Edward H. Wolk showed a completely new film cabinet in which each section, when a reel is inserted, becomes an independent self-closing and self-locking unit.

Kneisley Electric Company presented an improved line of arc supply rectifiers and completely enclosed rectifier switches in which burning of contacts is reduced because oxygen is excluded from their enclosure. Continental Electric Co. put on display an expanded line of photo-cells and rectifier tubes.

Acousticon Division of Dictograph Products, Inc., returned to the theatre hearing aid field for the first time since the war with a booth at this Tesma exhibition.

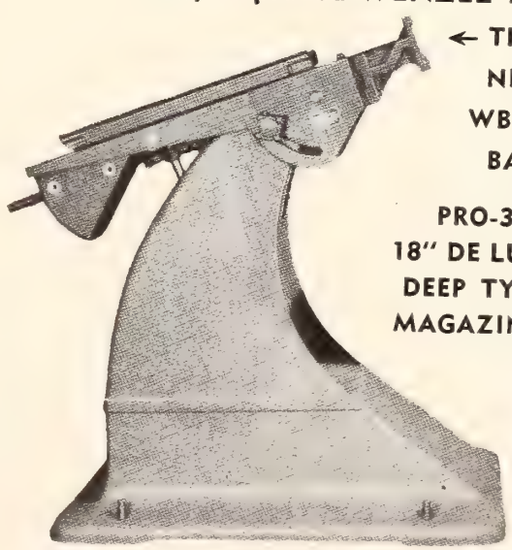
And 16-mm. projection was represented by Victor Animatograph's new Envoy model sound projector, and their Auditone two-way speakers which are manufactured by Altec Lansing and utilize 15-inch cones.

Three More Fremont Floor Tiles

Fremont Rubber Company has added three new colors to their line of floor tiles —a bright red, a verdi-green and canterbury blue. The addition brings the Fremont line to a total of 10 standard, 7 de luxe, and 3 grease-proof colors.

- Super Hi-Up Tube adds 10 feet to the reach of the operator. Makes cleaning of screen, walls, cornices, box fronts, frescoes easy and safe.
- Super Floor Tool goes right up to walls and baseboards eliminating unsightly strip for moths to work in.
- Super Spotlight sees the dirt in dark places before you do. Saves houselights.
- Super Metal Shod Tool keeps air conditioning units free of clogging, unsanitary dirt. You can clean 100 air filters in 10 minutes with a Super.
- Super Screen Brush insures top presentation of pictures by keeping screen bright and sound holes free of dirt.
- Super Blower boosts popcorn boxes, candy wrappers, and other litter out from under seats and down the aisle for easy disposal, leaving areas free for cleaning.
- Keep clean the easy, economical, modern Super way. Write for specifications. Ask your supply dealer.

Anybody On Your Staff Can be a Star With a SUPER



There is no trick to cleaning theatres with the Super Specialized Theatre Cleaner although it seems like magic the way the Super gets the dirt any place and every place.

Super engineers studied every detail and problem of modern theatre cleaning before they designed the Super and its wonderful tools. They have produced a cleaner built to meet your every special requirement—efficiently and quickly.

Maintenance Memos for Projectionists

NOVEMBER, 1949

1. Will your projection room heating and ventilating arrangements be adequate during the coming winter? If not, why not ask for minimum needed improvements?
2. Do you carefully watch your screen during changeovers and take effective steps to correct any discrepancy in screen light or other fault that patrons can see?
3. In electrical troubles, fuses may blow as fast as put in until fault is found and cured. Are you sure you have a sufficient supply of every type for every trouble?
4. If maintenance of the curtain machine is part of your responsibility have you set up a regular schedule for inspecting, cleaning, lubricating and adjusting it?
5. Do you carefully listen to monitor during changeovers and promptly remedy any discrepancy in sound volume or other fault that patrons can hear?
6. Do you keep a running inventory of carbons and spare parts, ordering replacements in step with use to make sure you will always have an adequate supply of everything?
7. Are all fire extinguishers always fully charged, always ready for emergency? (Order extra carbon tetrachloride for cleaning, never deprive the extinguisher.)
8. Do all members of the projection staff make it an iron-clad rule never to place anything on port shutter sills that could prevent shutters from closing?
9. Time again to blow dust out of amplifiers, rectifiers, motor-generators? Use a bellows, vacuum cleaner, or vacuum cleaner operated in reverse to serve as blower.
10. If there is any possible way your projection room could be locked from outside while you are in it—have that lock removed. Take NO chance of being locked in with a fire.
11. If projection room floor needs re-painting ask to have it done. Explain that walking on bare concrete scuffs harmful, abrasive dust into expensive equipment.
12. Have you a standard, periodic routine for inventory of the projection room's supply of needed tools to make sure all of them will be on hand when wanted?
13. Have additions to projection room equipment threatened any wiring, fuses or switches with overload? Report any such condition; ask to have it remedied promptly.
14. If fire should drive you out of the projection room—are your emergency port shutter and power cut-off switches located where you can operate them without delay on your way out?
15. Do you and all other members of projection staff make every effort to observe quiet in the projection room at all times to avoid annoying balcony patrons?
16. Are you thoroughly familiar with Underwriters' and your own local safety codes, and have you checked projection room and its fittings for any non-conformance?
17. Do you make it a practice to mop up any dripping or leaking oil the moment it appears; to investigate cause of such occurrence and remedy it without delay?
18. Have you set up a regular schedule for inspection, lubrication and needed adjustment of carbon feed motors in all projection, spot and effect lamphouses?
19. Have you a standard routine for checking all oil cups, grease cups, oil reservoirs and other lubricating points to make certain that none are ever overlooked?
20. Are your equipment items, fuse clips, switches and spare parts cabinets all so marked that a relief man in your projection room will never be exposed to doubt or delay?
21. Have you and other members of projection staff rehearsed yourselves thoroughly in every detail of what to do and not do in every variation of emergency?
22. Do you maintain the projection room bulletin board in up-to-date condition, removing obsolete notices, etc., so they will not obscure new reminders?
23. If you are compelled to play the monitor so loud it creates apparent echo in the theatre have it moved to a location where you can hear it at lower volume.
24. Have you inventoried all blueprints, instruction books, etc., and ordered replacements for any found missing? Even though you don't need them yourself, a relief man might.
25. Do you sometimes forget to inspect rectifiers, motor-generators or other items located outside the projection room? Why not set up a routine schedule for looking after them?
26. Are your arrangements for emergency light in power failure in good shape? If you will rely on flashlights, do you regularly check their batteries, spare batteries and bulbs?
27. Do you keep complete records showing repairs and replacements made and cost of each as a check on economical maintenance of apparatus under your care?
28. When any changes are made in projection room wiring or equipment wiring do you make sure they are recorded on your blueprints for permanent future record?
29. If you have two amplifying channels do you use them alternately to make sure both are always in working order ready for instant operation whenever needed?
30. Do ceiling or walls painted in pale colors keep the projection room too bright for really critical observation of the screen? If so, have you asked for re-painting?

Useful Idea for Drive-Ins

Drive-in snack shop, developed by Sweden Freezer Mfg. Co., makers of frozen custard machines, in daily operation on Elliott Avenue, Seattle. Three types of service are offered—direct from sales window to car as pictured, by itinerant vendors to adjacent parking area, and at tables inside "Freeze Shoppe." Operation is unconnected with any theatre; it was developed as part of a comprehensive program for testing both freezers and service methods from the point of view of the purchaser of the company's machines.

Altec Marks 12th Anniversary With First All-Out Sales Drive

For the first time in its history Altec Service Company is staging an all-out sales drive, covering all Altec services and all equipment manufactured by Altec-Lansing Corporation. The drive started September 12th, the 12th anniversary of the company's existence, and will continue for 12 weeks. Valuable cash prizes will be open to all Altec sales representatives, inspectors, field and business managers, and division chiefs. L. D. Netter, Jr., has been named the drive captain. He is being assisted by "Mo" Morris, Product Sales Manager, and by a committee headed by Altec's Treasurer, Paul Thomas.

Altec's newly announced television sets and recently-announced miniature microphone will be featured in the new sales campaign, in addition to Voice of the Theatre speaker systems, amplifiers, lounge music systems, and service and parts contracts.

Screen "Floating" in Colored Light Tried Out in France

"Floating" screens are giving "excellent" results in three theatres in Bordeaux, France, according to the British publication Ideal Kinema. The screen is surrounded on four sides by a light trough lamped with concealed sources in four colors—yellow, green, red and blue. Colors and intensity can be controlled from the projection room.

New In-Car Heater for Drive-Ins

A new in-car heater for drive-in theatres is being introduced to exhibitors along the Eastern seaboard by Murry Lafayette, who was formerly with Warner Brothers and 20th Century Fox theatres in the Albany, New York, area, but is now General Sales Manager for National Heaters, Inc., of Glendale, Calif.

Audio Engineers Meet In New York October 27-29

October 27th-29th have been set as the dates, and the Hotel New Yorker in New York as the place, for the Fair and technical sessions planned by the Audio Engineering Society. Magnetic recording and audio testing methods will be the highlights of the session. Standardization, interchangeability and uniformity of magnetic records are to be explored with the help of discussions from the floor. Factors involved in testing sound circuits for frequency, harmonic and modulation distortion will also be canvassed, and the discussion will extend to the measurement of such transients as pulses and square waves.

The Fair will display audio-frequency equipment produced by some 35 manufacturers and covering a wide range of magnetic recorders, new loudspeakers, etc.

Theatre Sales of Popcorn Featured at NAPM Meeting

A special panel devoted to sales of popcorn in motion picture theatres will be one of the highlights of the fifth annual convention of the National Association of Popcorn Manufacturers, scheduled for the Palmer Hotel, Chicago, October 24th-26th.

Theatre popping vs. off-theatre popping; direct operation; merchandising ideas, noise factor and greater use of vending machines will be among factors discussed in detail at the theatre sales panel, which is slated for 10 A M. October 25th.

According to NAPM's Executive Secretary, Thomas J. Sullivan, there will be at least 60 separate exhibits and 500 registrants at the convention, an increase of 50 per cent over the previous record totals.

American Seating Advances Bersie in Promotion Relay

Following a policy of filling vacancies from within its organization, American Seating Company has advanced three of its executive employes in a series of relay promotions. Hugh G. Bersie, Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Northwestern U., who has been with the company since 1945, is now Director of Products. Replacing him in his former post of Transportation Product Manager is Kenneth J. Barclay, graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy and a destroyer captain during the war; and he in turn has been replaced by John J. (Jack) Keating, his former assistant, a graduate of Michigan State College and also a Naval officer during the war.

Television Attracts Millions At Canadian National Exhibit

Displays of television (which has not as yet been sanctioned by the Dominion government) were an outstanding attraction at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, and drew audiences estimated at a total of 2,300,000 persons. Marconi-Dumont (a Paramount affiliate), Cossor, Ltd., Canadian General Electric, Northern Electric, RCA-Victor, Westinghouse, Admiral and Philco were among the manufacturers who exhibited their TV equipment.

New Beverage Dispenser, Cole-Spar, Now on Market

A new 3-flavor beverage dispenser, whose features include a built-in coin changer, hermetically sealed tanks and compact proportions—important factor for theatre installations—has been put on the market by Cole Products, Chicago. One of the stock machines has been in service for some time at Chicago's Northcenter Theatre. Rollin K. Stonebrook, managing director of the theatre, declared that on the basis of the first ten weeks operation of the machine it ran up a $245.00 week as compared with a top gross of $133.00 for the dispenser it replaced at the Northcenter.

$245.00 weekly gross reported for this 3-beverage dispenser.

The new dispenser is named Cole-Spar and serves a choice of 3 popular, nationally advertised soft drinks. Automatic, controlled mixing turns out a freshly mixed, cooled drink served in a sanitary paper cup in only 5 seconds, the sponsors of Cole-Spar claim.

The Cole-Spar 3-Flavor Hermetic dispenser may be purchased direct or installed and serviced without charge on a percentage-of-profit sharing arrangement with the theatre. The manufacturing firm which developed and builds the Cole-Spar, is headed by Albert Cole, president, and widely regarded as the Dean of the automatic beverage cup dispenser industry.

Low Cost Animation Motors Now Available

Gale Dorothea Mechanisms now offers light duty, 32 r.p.m. display animation motors at prices ranging from $5.50 to $4.00 each, depending on the quantity ordered. They come equipped with two electrical connections—a 6-foot cord that plugs into any standard outlet, and a 4-foot cord terminating in a light socket that takes any standard bulb. Motors are said to have been built especially for animating displays, to be quiet in operation, and of long useful life. One end of each motor shaft terminates in a crank that can readily be used to convert rotary motion into rocker arm motion for oscillatory-type displays.

Alexander Smith Cuts Price And Profits as Costs Go Up

A policy of reducing prices in the face of rising costs has cut Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company's net profit on common to $1,123,560 for the six months ending June 30, 1949, as compared with $3,736,709 for the corresponding period of 1948. Despite its policy of cutting costs and profits, however, Alexander Smith experienced a reduction in consolidated net sales of 16.1 per cent during the first half of 1949 as compared with 1948.

SMPE's Record Convention

A record number of technical papers, requiring morning, afternoon and evening meetings during all five days from October 10th to October 14th, inclusive, was presented at the 66th Semi-Annual Convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood.

Among the highlights was a technical talk on television by the inventor of the RCA system, Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin. Dr. Zworykin spoke at a special meeting held in the Carnegie Assembly Hall of the Mt. Wilson astronomical observatory.

Other paper addresses and discussions dealt with motion picture lighting, lenses, film emulsions, color photography, sound recording and related topics. Eastman Kodak Vice President Edward P. Curtis spoke on "Motion Pictures on the International Scene." An estimated 300 motion picture engineers from all over the United States, and six from Europe, attended the gathering.

Altman and Tanney Donate Projectors to Israel

Ted Altman, nephew to William Fox, donated twenty 35-mm. portable sound projectors to Israel for the instruction and entertainment of Israeli soldiers, STR learns, at the suggestion of J. A. Tanney, President of S.O.S. Cinema Supply Corp., who himself gave five 35-mm. sound projectors. The donations were made through Material for Israel, Inc., of 250 West 57th Street, New York, which had appealed for projectors, record players, amplifiers and any other equipment suitable for entertainment or instruction of troops.

Hild Floor Machine Co. Occupies New Building

Hild Floor Machine Company, manufacturers of floor maintenance equipment, have moved into a new building of their own at 740 West Washington Boulevard, Chicago 6. It is at the corner of Washington Boulevard and Halsted Street, and includes a giant, two-story glass-walled "show case," an air conditioned demonstration room, and two factory wings. The company is a pioneer in the development of equipment for shampooing carpet on location.

Joe Maharam Engaged to Marry

Joseph Maharam, President of Maharam Fabric Corporation, will marry Roslyn Silverman of New York City. Maharam Fabric Corporation has pioneered since 1898 in the introduction of soft and beautiful fabrics into theatre decor. Joseph, present head of the company, is a son of its founder, Louis Maharam.

Tesma Presents New Aids for Showmen

"Our business was built on a partnership of fine pictures and fine theatres," he explained. "If Hollywood puts out fine pictures, and if we keep our theatres in fine condition and improve them constantly, we can stand up to any competition."

Congressman Carl T. Curtis of Nebraska, member of the House Ways and Means Committee, told the gathering that luxury excise taxes almost certainly will be reduced next year, and that it is up to the theatre industry to see that admission taxes are included in any favorable changes that are made.

Drive-In Give-Aways Deplored

George M. Peterson, drive-in expert, decried give-aways and free admissions for children as harmful to the outdoor theatre in that they convey the impression of a second-class operation. He advised, instead, adding beauty to the outdoor theatre, and reducing its overhead burden by such devices as swimming pools, games, cocktail lounges, and other additional services to the public. Sale of refreshments in drive-ins, he noted, has already been built up to a highly profitable operation.

The convention was entertained by a "genuine theatre television" program piped into the Stevens over co-axial cable and not available nor visible elsewhere. It consisted of a six-round boxing match between professional middleweights, specially staged for the convention at NBC's Chicago studios, and presented on RCA's 20-foot theatre television screen. In an address preceding the showing Barton Kreuzer, head of RCA's theatre television activities, revealed that the equipment is in commercial production and that RCA Service Company field engineers have already been trained in installing and servicing it.

Much New Equipment Shown

New equipment items displayed at the Tesma trade show that relate to projection and sound, including drive-in projection and sound, are described elsewhere in this issue of STR.

Wagner Sign Service presented a novel addition to their line of multi-colored, multi-size plastic marquee letters—a series of iridescent pink plastic letters in 4" and 6" sizes which the theatre itself can assemble in any desired combination to form advertising or directional signs. The letters, of Tenite plastic, are mounted to rails of clear Plexiglas plastic by means of an adhesive furnished with them. The rails carrying the message thus assembled can be mounted by means of clips or suspended by a bead chain. These mounting devices are also supplied by Wagner. The theatre can thus produce for itself, at substantially nominal cost, highly attractive signs reading "Popcorn" or "Television Lounge" or "Admission 65 Cents" or whatever other message it may wish to convey. The Plexiglas mounting rail being transparent and nearly invisible, the letters appear to stand individually in mid-air.

Highly attractive and eye-catching advertising and directional signs can be assembled by the theatre at almost nominal cost by means of these new Wagner Sign Service letters, demonstrated at the Tesma convention. Letters are iridescent pink plastic in 4" and 6" sizes, mounted by means of adhesive to a transparent and nearly invisible plastic rail.

Adler Silhouette Letter Company's display featured their new 17", 2-tone "Lok-Lip" safety letter (STR for September 17th, Page E-27) in addition to that company's interchangeable marquee letters from 4" to 24" in height. Theatre Specialties, Inc., showed their full line of marquee letters and display cases; Poblocki and Sons featured specially designed poster cases and "inner service" marquees; Young's Picture Framing Co. had poster cases and tripods on display.

"Turn-Key" Drive-In Featured

The large Ballantyne Company exhibit which showed dozens of items of apparatus and equipment, featured the new Ballantyne "turn-key" drive-in theatre package (STR for September 17th, Page E-20) whereby the would-be drive-in owner merely places his order and returns in three weeks or so to find his new theatre finished, equipped, and ready to operate any time he turns the key and lets himself in.

Other drive-in facilities were extensively featured. A new in-car heater was shown by National Heaters, Inc. Valley Steel Products Co. had playground equipment for children on exhibition in addition to their Vendcar for selling refreshments in open-air theatres. Autocrat, Inc., showed not only in-car speakers with a switch to summon the refreshment vendor and their new Thermocrat in-car heaters but also a new Crosley chassis "Concession Car"—a small automobile fitted with a hot compartment for sandwiches, a warm compartment for popcorn, cold compartments for ice cream and beverages, and a carbonator, in addition to provisions for candy, cigarettes and similar items.

Calumet Coach Co., Supurdisplay, Inc., and Walky Service Company also exhibited carts and carriers equipped for peddling warm and cold refreshments in open-air theatres.

New Popcorn Machines

stressed by the large number of exhibits devoted to that growing aspect of theatre business. C. Cretors Co. presented a line of popcorn machines—with or without associated candy counters— varied enough to meet the needs of any theatre from the smallest "shooting gallery" to the largest drive-in. Manley, Inc., featured their Stadium Model (pictured on Page E-8 of STR for September 17th) with its rated capacity of 30 bushels of popped corn per hour. Supurdisplay showed a butter dispenser for popped corn; and West Coast Sheet Metal Works popcorn warmers both as single units and built into candy stands. Candy stands with or without popcorn provisions were also offered by Sinicrope & Sons and Supurdisplay.

Lion Manufacturing Company presented a large-size, cup-dispensing Coca-Cola machine. Other dispensers for carbonated and non-carbonated beverages were exhibited, some in full operation, by Anderson & Wagner, Inc., Carbonator Supply Co., and Norge Division of Borg Warner Corporation.

Other Novel Items

Among novel items brought before visitors to the convention was the product of Balch Glass Exit Door Release, a new device whereby a clear glass door remains locked until released by the weight of a person approaching it from inside. And there were fluorescent posters, advertising coming attractions, supplied by Midwest Poster Exchange and illuminated by the ultra-violet equipment of Black Light Products.

A number of mechanisms associated with the sale of tickets were shown. General Register Company's Automaticket control boxes were displayed in new finishes of gleaming silver and gold. Theatre Control Corporation and GoldE exhibited new ticket boxes (the former with automatic registering devices) and Coinometer Corporation presented a new and highly compact coin player machine.

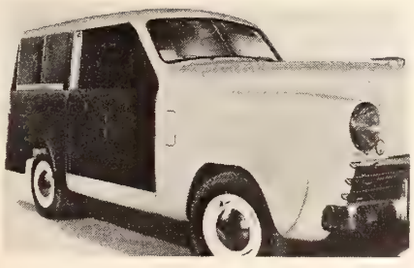
Local Fuel Oil Shortages

Local shortages in fuel oil supply are expected for this winter by the refining industry, not because oil is scarce but because local dealers are not stocking up in advance this year, industry officials declare.

Because dealers did not follow their former custom of filling their tanks during the summer, the industry fears that the first cold weather will bring a rush of orders too great for shipping facilities to handle! Spokesmen for Shell Oil, Gulf Oil and Atlantic Refining Company have issued public warnings.



New Aids for Showmen

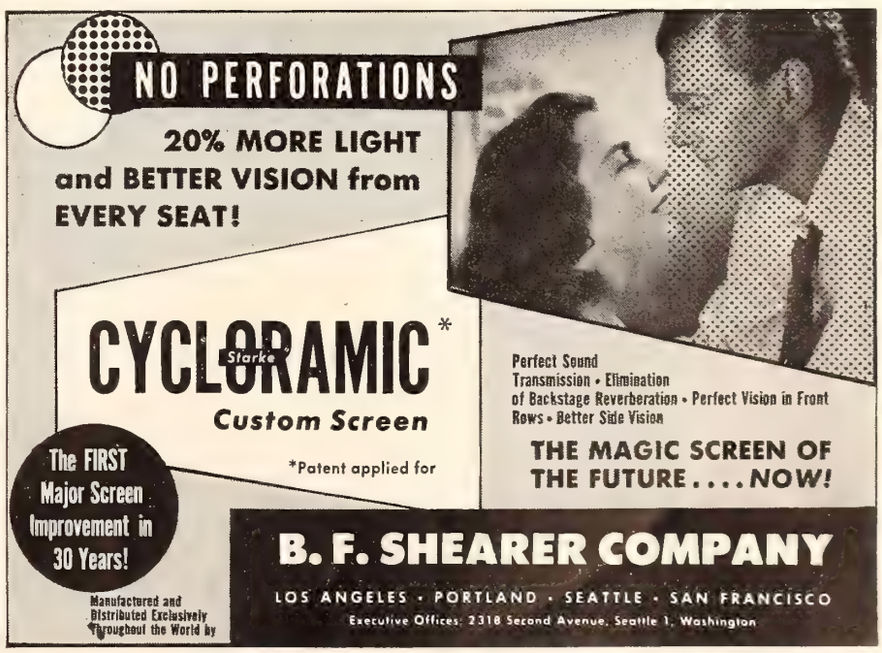
Theatre housekeeping was exemplified by the products of National Super Service Co., Inc., including shampooing and vacuum devices and special, attachable tools for both; by the electric hand driers of Electric-Aire Engineering Corp. and National Dryer Corp., and by the sand urns, long-handled dust pans and waste receptacles of Atlas Products Co. Mystic Adhesive Products distributed samples of their plastic, waterproof, multi-colored tapes designed for all kinds of patching, repairing, weather stripping and sealing. Joseph Sklar presented a wide variety of usher's and especially usherette's uniforms.

Air conditioning was represented by the booths of U. S. Air Conditioning and of Reynolds Manufacturing Co. Stagecraft by the draperies and designs of Knoxveille Scenic Studios and the curtain control machines and tracks of Automatic Devices Co. Vallen, Inc., also showed curtain tracks and machines.

Lobby size television was offered by Trad Television Corp—pictures up to 3x4 feet in size; and by Tele-Video Corp. Division of Reeves Soundcraft Corp., with pictures as large as 7x9 feet. Auditorium-size television, on a screen measuring 15x20 feet, was demonstrated by RCA, with a special program transmitted over an untappable coaxial cable circuit from the NBC studios in Chicago and not visible anywhere except in the "theatre" of the Stevens Hotel ball room.

Concession car for sales of refreshments in drive-ins, shown by Autocrat, Inc., at the Tesma exhibition, consists of a Crosley chassis; and body fitted with hot compartment for sandwiches, warm compartment for popcorn, cold compartments for ice cream and beverages, carbonator, and compartments for candy, cigarettes and additional items.

New 30-Gallon Ice Cream Fountain Now in Production



Bastian-Blessing Company has in production a new ice cream soda fountain named Fast-Serv, claimed to give maximum service with a minimum of help. The unit, built of stainless steel, insulated and refrigerated, measures 74" long, 31¼" wide and 33" high to top of counter. It has a capacity of 30 gallons of ice cream; two patented draft arms said to provide drinks of 30 per cent more carbonation than usual; 5 syrup pumps, 1 chocolate pump and four crushed fruit jars with hinged covers. Ice cream lids are all steel, removable, and designed to be immersed in boiling water for sterilization.

German Carbons Available Now Through Local Dealers

American rights to the complete line of Helios (imported German) projection carbons have been acquired by Forest Manufacturing Company. Carbons will be available to theatres throughout the country through local dealers, according to Forest President J. K. Elderkin.

Projectionist Local No. 160, Cleveland, and Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, have signed a three-year contract providing for a five per cent pay increase the first year and two and a half per cent increase each of the two following years.

EQUIPMENT LITERATURE

The most efficient way to request literature on items of theatre equipment is to fill out the adjoining coupon and mail it to us. That single request will bring you information on as many kinds of equipment as you please. For literature described below check the corresponding numbers in the coupon; for literature on subjects listed in the coupon check the adjacent squares. Your wishes will be attended to promptly, with no charge or obligation whatever.

ACOUSTICAL MATERIALS made of spun glass are described and pictured in an eight-page, two-color booklet issued by Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation. These include tiles, both plain and perforated; boards, wool, and glass blankets built on metal mesh. The booklet illustrates and diagrams methods of installing these materials; and where appropriate sets forth their physical dimensions, sound absorption coefficients, and maintenance and painting requirements. Architectural specifications for use of these materials are given; and, finally, there is a list of the street addresses and telephone numbers of the company's branches in 29 cities in the U. S. and Canada where still further information can be obtained. (#1)

ARC LAMP DATA. A great deal of valuable information about arc lamps and their optics is packed into a small, pocket-size booklet put out by Heyer-Shultz, Inc. It details the reason for, and importance of, matching lens speed and reflector speed; tells how to determine the reflector working distance for any given lens speed, and explains the optical details of reflector action. Additionally, it describes the Heyer-Shultz optical reflectors, how to install and how to maintain them; and explains the use of both the company's pin hole aperture plate for aligning optical elements, and split aperture plates for balancing light from two projectors. All projectionists and all technically minded managers will find this booklet interesting and valuable. (#2)

CLEANING AND SHAMPOOING. Effective cleaning of theatre screens, drapes, ornamental surfaces, and upholstery; and inplace shampooing of carpets, are pictured and explained in a four-page folder by National Super Service, Inc. The bulletin describes the best methods of using the Super vacuum cleaner, and technical details of the cleaner itself. It will prove definitely helpful to anyone concerned with problems of theatre housekeeping. (#3)

DRIVE-IN AIDS. Ramp lights, illuminated traffic control and directional signs, speaker post lights, car-side speakers, in-car speakers, ramp control panels, projection room ramp monitor, junction box, amplifier, pre-amplifier and exciter lamp supply panel are illustrated, described and priced in a three-color pamphlet issued by The Ballantyne Company. Showmen will want to read through this pamphlet, get ideas from it, and study its pictures and descriptions of up-to-date facilities for outdoor entertainment. (#4)

DRIVE-IN CORDS AND CABLES. Retractile, spiraled "Koiled Kords" for in-car speakers, and "Teleseal" underground service wire for inexpensive wiring of drive-in areas, are described in literature issued by the Whitney Blake Company. Four feet of coiled-up speaker cord extends to approximately 25 feet, if necessary, but retracts to its original length when released. Twisting, tangling and trailing of speaker wires are eliminated where Koiled Kords are used. Teleseal underground wire is copper, electroplated with lead, which in turn is plated with brass, insulated, and then jacketed in neoprene over the insulation. These underground wires are rated as highly resistant to moisture, abrasion, acids, oil and grease. Both products are well described and adequately illustrated in this literature. (#5)

DRIVE-IN "PACKAGE." A 16-page, 3-color booklet issued by Ballantyne Company describes in detail the drive-in theatres that organization is prepared to design, build, equip, and deliver as a completed "package" ready to operate. All the purchaser needs to do is turn the key and start his show, the booklet asserts; and adds that such drive-ins, planned and built on a mass scale, cost the purchaser $10,000 to $20,000 less than any comparable theatre he could build for himself. A very complete description is given of the services Ballantyne offers to render and the materials it will supply and install. This description covers the grading and ramping, fencing, wiring and speaker posts, attraction board, screen, entrance approach, box office, concession stand, water supply, plumbing, sewage disposal, moonlight towers, projection booth, projection and sound equipment, and traffic control signs. Whoever is interested in drive-in operation can find out from this booklet very exactly—in full and illustrated detail—what The Ballantyne Company has to offer him. (#6)

FLUORESCENT COLOR CARD. When specifying fluorescent lamps of a certain color, do you know exactly what the color will be like when those lamps are installed and lighted? Supro Lux Manufacturing Company, Inc., has a simple solution to that problem in the form of a very accurately printed color card showing the exact appearance of the twelve most popular fluorescent hues. (#7)

GENERAL CATALOG — for every part of the theatre—is issued by S.O.S. Cinema Supply Corp. Nearly a thousand items are included in its 64 pages. Prices are given, and are highly competitive. Whoever buys anything for a theatre will want this free catalog handy for reference. (#8)

GENERAL EQUIPMENT. J. E. Robin, Inc., has an eight-page folder picturing and describing a wide variety of items for the motion picture theatre and for drive-in theatres. These include: the Robin-Weber Synchro-film projector-soundhead (a single unit); Models "E" and "400" separate soundheads; the Robin-Imperial arc lamps; the Robin-Weber amplifier (licensed by A. T. & T. and by Western Electric); the Robin-Imperial motor generators and rectifiers; the Robin-Tarrytown in-car speakers; Robin-Arc projection room accessories; Ideal SlideBack theatre chairs; the Robin-Regal theatre chair, and Imperial replaceable seat cushions. The folder carries photographs of nearly all of these items, and concise descriptions of their outstanding features. (#9)

LENSES. The Kollmorgen Super-Snaplite and Snaplite lenses (f/1.9 and f/2.0 respectively) are described in detail in a two-color, six-page brochure by Kollmorgen Optical Corporation. Also illustrated and described is the Kollmorgen Series 1 Snaplite. Included is a list of fittings, by means of which any Kollmorgen lens can be used with any of 23 models of American-made projectors. (#10)

MARQUEE SAFETY LETTER. Adler Silhouuette Letter Company's new plastic "Lok-Lip" letter is featured in a new 4-page, 2-color bulletin issued by that company. The letter, it is stated, cannot blow off or fall off the rails under any conditions of wind or weather because of a new, integral construction that holds it safely, yet permits it to be installed and removed instantly. Aside from describing the new letter, the bulletin pictures seventeen different marquee arrangements for attracting the public. These are very varied and will suggest many stimulating ideas to showmen interested in improving their own theatre's appeal to passersby. (#11)

PROJECTOR MECHANISM. Mechanical details of the Century Projector Corporation's single shutter projector are set forth photographically and diagrammatically in a four-page, two-color booklet. Text material explains the gear arrangements, constructional features, and so on. The whole constitutes a concise, interesting and easily understood presentation of a modern motion picture mechanism. (#12)

PROJECTOR PARTS. Latest catalog issued by Wenzel Projector Company, although primarily intended for users of that company's equipment to assist them in making repairs and ordering spare parts, will be of interest and value to anyone concerned with projection. Its "exploded" drawings and photographic illustrations convey an abundance of detailed information about the construction of modern equipment and accessories. Catalog and its associated data sheets constitute a valuable and fascinating budget of technical information. (#13)

SAFETY LADDERS. Two types of all-aluminum safety ladders are announced and described in a two-color, one-page folder by The O'Connor Company. The Safety ladder has steps on one side only, but its pail rack will support a man's weight. It comes in heights up to 8 feet. The "A" ladder has steps on both sides and no pail rack; it comes in heights up to twelve feet and will support three men at one time. Steps are serrated to a depth of 1/16th inch for safety; and safety against both skidding and electric shock is further provided by rubber pads 3/4" deep on which the ladder stands. (#14)

SPRAY GUN AND KIT. A two-color, two-page folder by Sellco Corporation describes a new paint spray gun that weighs only 17 pounds complete with kit and carrying case. It is handled like a revolver and its action is trigger-controlled. The gun is rated to spray 1 quart in 4 minutes. It can be used for disinfectants, insecticides, liquid waxes and weed killers, as well as for oil or water base paints, lacquers, varnishes and stains. The kit includes three interchangeable nozzles, spare aluminum canisters, strainers, covers, respirator with refills, gaskets, brush, oil and instruction manual. (#15)

PRODUCTION PARADE

By Ann Lewis

Direction assignments were handed out to four directors at Republic. Two were westerns. Fred Brannon got the next Allan "Rocky" Lane "Gunmen of Abilene" and Phil Ford the second Rex Allen outdoor opus "Redwood Forest Trail." The other two were "Unmasked," a newspaper story which George Blair will handle, and "Tarnished," a melodrama, Harry Keller's next for the studio.

Sam Jaffe, the distinguished Broadway stage and screen star and Sterling Hayden, were signed for top roles in MGM's "Asphalt Jungle" which John Huston will direct. To be produced by Arthur Hornblow, the picture rolls at the end of this month with Jean Hagen and James Whitmore in leading roles.

Producer Carl K. Hittleman has signed Vincent Price for the starring role in Lippert Productions' "Baron of Arizona." Direction will be by Samuel Fuller from his own screenplay. Cameras are scheduled to roll Nov. 1.

Scott Brady an Mona Freeman (on loanout from Paramount) were set to co-star in Universal's "Shoplifter." Leonard Goldstein will produce and Charles Lamont direct, with the picture due to start before the end of the month.

MacDonald Carey and his wife are on vacation at Sun Valley prior to his return for the leading role in "Outrage," the Pine-Thomas picture for Paramount release.

"Two Flags," an original story by William R. Lipman, was purchased by R. W. Alcorn as his next production and has a tentative starting date of January. It will be in Technicolor, and the producer plans an all star cast. This will be Alcorn's second independent production; the first was the recently completed "Johnny Holiday."

Bette Davis has been signed by Producers Jack H. Skirball and Bruce Manning to star in "This Day Is Ours," scheduled to start November 15th for distribution by RKO. With Curtis Bernhardt slated to direct, picture will be Miss Davis' first since ending her long-term contract with Warner Bros.

Direction of the Columbia picture "Fortunes of Captain Blood," which Harry Joe Brown will produce, has been turned over to H. Bruce "Lucky" Humberstone. Louis Hayward plays the title role in this picturization of the famous Sabatini novel. Cameras start rolling Oct. 24.

"The Bowery Boys in London" has been announced as Producer Jan Grippo's first in his Monogram series to go before the cameras in 1950. Before that, the producer will make "The Bowery Boys on a Double Date," due to roll next month.

Marshall Thompson, signed to a term contract at MGM, gets one of the leading dramatic roles in "Mystery Street," which stars Ricardo Montalban. The film goes into work at Cambridge, Mass. Script was approved by the Department of Legal Medicine of the Harvard Medical School, the actual locale of the story.

Peggy Lee, popular songstress, joins Bing Crosby in Paramount's "Mr. Music."

Should Combine Significance, Entertainment

"Motion pictures should combine significance and entertainment," declares Aaron Rosenberg, Universal-International producer.

"Neither significant subject matter nor entertainment alone is sufficient in a picture. You can have the most important subject in the world, but if it is not presented in an entertaining manner the picture will fail. Once word of the picture gets around, people won't even go to see it. They don't want their screen fare to be dull, no matter how important the subject matter may be.

"On the other hand, you can cram a picture with so-called entertainment, but unless the story has some meaning to it you will not get an enthusiastic audience response. People may enjoy the film while they are seeing it, but 10 minutes after they have left the theatre they will have forgotten it completely.

Aaron Rosenberg

"Every picture should send people out of the theatre with something to make them remember it. An example of what I mean may be found in 'The Story of Molly X,' a film we recently finished at U-I. The significance of that picture lies in the great work that is being done in the rehabilitation of women in the California State Women's Prison. The story also is entertaining because of the excitement that has been injected into its telling."

Rosenberg is one producer who has come up the hard way. After graduating from the University of Southern California, where he was an All-American football star, he became an assistant director. Then he advanced to associate producer and early this year was promoted to a producer's berth at U-I.

To date he has completed three pictures—"Johnny Stool Pigeon," "The Story of Molly X" and "Outside the Wall." All of these films dealt with crime in one form or another and every one is jam-packed with action and suspense. Rosenberg now is preparing three other productions for early shooting: "Winchester 73," "Pauline Cushman" and "Flame Blue Glove."

3 Top-Budget Films Rolling at RKO-Radio

With the start of the Jack H. Skirball-Bruce Manning production, "Blind Spot," on Oct. 17, three top-budget productions will be rolling this month at RKO Radio, the largest number of big-name features shooting at the same time since Howard Hughes took over as managing director of production.

Executive Producer Sid Rogell has had the Ansco Color special, "The White Tower," starring Glenn Ford and Valli, in production for several weeks, while Executive Producer Robert Sparks sent "Carriage Entrance," with Robert Mitchum, Ava Gardner and Melvyn Douglas in stellar roles, before the cameras a few days ago.

4 Warner Production Units To Go on Location Nov.

Four Warner Bros. units will be shooting simultaneously on location come November. "The Victim" company will go to Palm Springs for a week of desert resort filming, while Milton Sperling (United States Pictures) will send his "Rock Bottom" cast and crew to Mount Waterman and Mount Whitney for lodge and mountain rescue scenes. "Storm Center" is slated for an extended November location trip to Corona, Calif., and "The Hawk and the Arrow" (Harold Hecht-Norma Production) will be at Bronson Canyon.

Sidney Sets Record as 1949's Busiest Director

George Sidney, who took over the directorial duties this week for MGM's "Annie Get Your Gun," establishes some sort of a record as 1949's busiest director. The Technicolor musical marks his third major production in eight months. His first was "The Red Danube," followed by "Key to the City."

The year 1950 promises to be equally busy for Sidney, who has already been assigned to "Showboat," scheduled to go before the cameras in early spring.

8 Allied Artists Films Set for '49-50 Production

With the purchase of "My Wife Is Mine," a starring vehicle for Florence Marly, which Jeffrey Bernard will produce, eight Allied Artists films will go before the cameras during the 1949-50 season. They include "The Giant Killer," "Heaven Is Where You Find It," "The Police Story," "Land of the Sky Blue Water," "The Longhorn," and to be made in England, "The Highwayman" and "The Bishop's Mantle."

Story Bought for Serial

"The Phantom Ruler," an original screenplay by Ronald Davidson, has been purchased by Republic and assigned to Associate Producer Franklin Adreon for production as one of the studio's four serials for the 1949-50 program. It will go before the cameras upon the completion of the currently shooting serial, "Radar Patrol vs. Spy King."

Studio Roundup

With only five new pictures starting this week, but with a host of trade press previews being held, it looks like distribution, for a change, was evidencing their importance over production . . . quite a new fact in Hollywood.

Not listed among the five new films was the MGM Technicolor picture "Annie Get Your Gun" which Director George Sidney started with Betty Hutton in the leading role and Louis Calhern playing Buffalo Bill. Since this had previously been listed with Judy Garland, the only change necessary was change-of-cast.

Margaret Sullavan's return to films was heralded this week when Columbia gave the "go" signal to "No Sad Songs," a picture originally scheduled for Sam Wood, but which Rudy Mate will now direct.

At Lake Tahoe

The cast and crew of the Paramount picture, as yet untitled but based on Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy," were on location at Lake Tahoe where shooting commenced. Producer-Director George Stevens is using that magnificent Lake as the locale for the theme of the story, the place where Montgomery Clift drowns Shelley Winters and then proceeds to get himself in a jam. Co-starred with the two stars is Elizabeth Taylor.

Another RKO Tim Holt western went into work. Always good news for the followers of this fine series. Lesley Selander again directs.

Small Starts Film

For United Artists release, Producer Bernard Small started filming "The Iroquois Trail" George Montgomery-Brenda Marshall co-starrer. Phil Karlson is directing and in the cast is Glenn Langan who turned in some fine performances while at 20th Century-Fox.

"Rock Bottom," a Milton Sperling United States Pictures production was the Warner entry this week. Story features three women in the leading roles, Eleanor Parker, Patricia Neal and Ruth Roman. This is Director Robert Wise's first assignment at Warners, his last having been the recently released RKO film "The Setup."

Finally Settled

The controversy over the Ingrid Bergman "Stromboli" film was finally settled when Producer-Director Roberto Rossellini turned over the sequence he was, personally, holding. Delivery of this to the Technostampa Laboratory in Rome, makes available to RKO the entire footage and they can now go ahead finishing and editing the picture for release.

Ward Bond joins Vaughn Monroe in Republic's "Singing Guns," presently shooting.

At Universal-International, the cast principals and the crew of "Outside the Wall," took time out to help Director Crane Wilbur celebrate his 45th anniversary in show business. A buffet luncheon was served on the set.

Groesse Named Head Of Art Directors

Paul Groesse of MGM was elected president of the Society of Motion Picture Art Directors at an election held last week, succeeding J. Russell Spencer of 20th-Fox. Ralph Berger of RKO was elected vice-president, Robert Boyle of U-I, secretary-treasurer, and Ralph Gilbert of Warners, warden.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Exclusive Films Succeeds Despite British Industry Crises; 'Forsyte Saga' at Command Performance; Safety Club Idea

By JOCK MacGREGOR

In these days of crises in the British film industry it is invigorating to come across a success story. Exclusive Films under the Carreras family have concentrated on making second features on a tight schedule and have succeeded in providing sufficient quality product for the Associated British Cinemas to meet their supporting program quota in their key houses.

Jock MacGregor

They have specialized in this market and have curbed inflationary ideas, with the result that they are now financing their output and are self-supporting. They have concentrated on filming radio serials with proved followings. They then set about finding the artists. If they cannot get whom they want for their price, they look around for someone they can afford, thereby probably giving a break to some unknown.

They have built a first-class technical crew. It is a happy group, for they know that a continuous program is lined up and that the end of a picture does not mean unemployment. Consequently, during the last weeks of a picture, the unit is as enthusiastic as when it starts, and members are not slipping off the set to phone around trying to find the next job.

Each picture is technically superior and attracts better casts, for artists know they will not lose face and that direction, camerawork and make-up will not discredit them. The latest feature to be shown is "The Adventures of P.C. 49," an action-packed thriller telling of a young policeman's adventures in trying to track down a blackmarket gang. It is good supporting fare. Incidentally it introduces Patricia Cutts who is Robert Montgomery's leading lady in "Your Witness."

Odd thing is: the Carreras receive far more criticism than praise from the production side. Presumably this is a case of sour grapes.

The producers I really resent are those who sit back complaining about star salaries, for they have only themselves to blame. They gave the contracts out in the first place and if their assessment of the artist's value has proved off the beam, they can hardly expect sympathy. The players have to keep up an expensive front and they have planned their lives according to their contracts. The practical ones have bought life insurances, cars on hire purchase and their homes with the aid of mortgages. A 10 per cent cut can cause as much embarrassment to them as to the more lowly paid, and stars must live as stars because it is part and parcel of the profession.

Sam Eckman, Jr. is overjoyed with the selection of "The Forsyte Saga" ("That Forsyte Woman" in the U. S.) for the Royal Command Film Performance. This is a decided feather in Leo's cap—or is it a crown? This year's performance is at Rank's Odeon Marble Arch and afterwards the picture will play MGM's Empire, a reversal of last year's procedure when "Scott of the Antarctic" was shown for one night at the Empire and moved over to the Odeon, Leicester Sq.

MGM have another royal premiere coming up when "The Search" will be presented before Queen Mary at the Empire. After this one performance the film will be moved over to the Ritz which, with its small capacity, is considered more intimate for the subject.

The Empire management, incidentally, are well advanced in their plans to start the stage shows around Christmas, and on Sunday morning I attended an audition for the ballet and chorus—as an Observer, of course. It looks as though they will be having the prettiest team in town. Proposed policy is to run each program three weeks, and there is some conjecture as to where the overflow MGM pictures will be shown in the West End.

I am always interested to read the monthly house organ of the Rank Children's cinema clubs, for one can appreciate the fine service the Rank organization is rendering the community. One of the best ideas in a long while comes from the Odeon, Middlesborough. In connection with the Road Safety Campaign, the Chief Constable, A. E. Edwards, has been photographing children who take risks while crossing the road. Slides are made of these pictures and are screened at the Saturday matinee. Prizes are given to kids who display road sense.

"Naturally," the manager reports, "there is a buzz of excitement when the tell-tale pictures are about to be shown and woe betide the culprits who have forgotten their safety-first training. Audience reaction leaves them in no doubt about their social status!"

Torquay's Peter Myott was quipping in the Screenwriters that he appreciated the hot weather, as he had made so much money on ice cream sales. This joke is ceasing to be funny. The situation is serious, as these sales are beginning to play far too prominent a part in cinemanagement. In some cases the efforts have become almost fanatical and detract from the prime object of many people going to the cinema. The revenue is enormous and it is understood the suggestion that managers should receive 2½ per cent commission on its sale was one of the main reasons for the CEA being unable to reach agreement with the Managers Society on their new charter and resulting dramatic resignations of the latter's executive.

So loud has been the laughter at "The Chiltern Hundreds" (based on the play, "Yes M'Lord") that microphones have been installed in the stalls at the Odeon, Marble Arch, to enable the projectionists to monitor the sound. This prevents the audience losing lines through laughter.

On hearing a producer was selling his farm, the trade's wit quipped, "Suppose he's turning out sufficient corn in the studio, anyway!"

Minnelli to Direct 'Father'

Vincente Minnelli will direct MGM's "Father of the Bride," which has been moved up to a November starting date. Pandro S. Berman will produce. Spencer Tracy will star.

ADVANCE DATA
On Forthcoming Product

Jungle Stampede (Republic) Principals: African Natives, George Breakston and Yorke Coplen. This is a picture made in the Belgian-Congo by George Breakston and Yorke Coplen, who previously made "Urubu" for UA. It is a visual story about the natives in a place where few white men have dared to go

Mark of the Gorilla (Columbia) Principals: Johnny Weissmuller, Suzanne Dalbert, Trudy Marshall, Selmer Jackson. Director, William Berke. Jungle Jim locates a hidden cache of gold bullion which the Nazis had buried during their African campaign. White men, dressed as gorillas, were guarding the treasure with a phony doctor as their leader. Once uncovered, the gold is returned to the princess of the native tribe.

Double Crossbones (U-I) (Technicolor) Principals: Donald O'Connor, Helena Carter, Will Geer, John Emery, Charles McGraw. Director, Charles Barton. Two ex-sailors gain control of a ship run by a heartless buccaneer, rescue the Governor and his ward from aboard a pirate ship and then expose the Governor as the "fence" for disposal of pirate loot.

Gun Fighter (20th-Fox) Principals: Gregory Peck, Helen Westcott, Millard Mitchell, Jean Parker. Director, Henry King. One of the most notorious killers in the Southwest in the lawless days before the turn of the century attempts unsuccessfully to change his life and become an honest citizen.

The Petty Girl (Columbia) Principals: Robert Cummings, Joan Caulfield, Elsa Lanchester, Audrey Long. Director. Henry Levin. This is the fictionized story of the struggle of the young artist-creator, George Petty, whose curvaceously, alluring depiction of the American female known as "The Petty Girl" has brought him fame and fortune.

Convict Molly X (U-I). Principals: June Havoc, John Russell, Elliott Lewis, Dorothy Hart, Cathy Lewis. Director, Crane Wilbur. Plot: Story of a young wife out to get some easy money in order to find the murderer of her gangster husband. Embittered and alone, she finally lands in jail where, with the penal institution's advanced methods of mental therapy, she becomes a changed woman.

Beware of Blondie (Columbia). Principals: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Adele Jergens, Larry Simms. Director, Edward Bernds. Plot: Dagwood is the victim of a beautiful, blackmailing female, but is helped out of his predictament by Blondie's loyalty and his boss' error in bank accounts.

In 'Petty Girl'

Mable Paige, noted Broadway character comedienne, has been set by Columbia for an important role with Robert Cummings and Joan Caulfield in the Technicolor musical, "The Petty Girl," which Henry Levin is directing and Nat Perrin producing under the supervision of S. Sylvan Simon. She plays the eccentric keeper of a boarding house.

KEY TO THE CAMPAIGN ON M-G-M's GREAT COMEDY!

"ADAM's RIB"!

Seldom before has any comedy enjoyed such an advance build-up. When Coast columnists carried reports to the fans about a sneak preview, they tipped off the nation to what will be one of the audience sensations of the year!

WHO WEARS

ONE OF MANY ADVANCE NATION-WIDE PLUGS!

from Louella Parson's Syndicated Column

"Adam's Rib," which I caught at a sneak preview had me in stitches.

What an amusing picture, with Spencer Tracy at his best and Judy Holliday the likeliest movie bet in a long time.

Katharine Hepburn was more likable than I have ever seen her.

A bouquet should go to George Cukor for direction and to M-G-M for a swell comedy.

THIS meeting of mother and child is no make-believe—not to the movie-goers!

To them, it is as real as life itself, thanks to the director of the picture. Through his perceptive handling of action, dialogue, and camera, he has given the scene its human touch, its heartbeat . . . made the audience feel its warmth, its mood—and live the moment, one with the personalities on the screen.

And this achievement is the mark of his mastery of the dramatic; the gauge of his creative contribution to the motion picture art.

But if such artistry is to have full expression, the director must have the assistance of film that gives him ample freedom to achieve the effects he desires. This freedom he finds in the family of Eastman motion picture films.

Young Blood

We liked that portion of Bill Rodgers' remarks at the opening of his company's recent sales meeting in which he stated that they were vitally interested in bringing up the young men of the organization and developing them for top executive sales positions.

If there is anything this industry needs today it is the injection of new and young blood into its executive ranks. Not that the old-timers are not firing on all cylinders, but the future and security of any great organization is dependent upon promotions from within and the development of good, young and aggressive manpower.

This is the kind of a business that gets into your blood. Most of our top executives are men who grew up in this industry and they have been very active in it for a long stretch of time. They don't like to step down or retire. Perhaps that is why so darned many of them die in harness. Perhaps if they had retired or gone into partial retirement a lot of those we've lost might still be with us.

These are fast-changing times. The whole complexion of business changes rapidly and calls for entirely different slants and the ability to solve the new order or orders as fast as they take shape either by the changing times or by government's ever-expanding influence in industry.

The older men just don't realize or refuse to acknowledge the fact that they don't have the fight and courage they once possessed. Just make a comparison of how the same men of today fought the battle of the deep depression in the early thirties and brought their companies and their industry out of the dumps and back to prosperity.

Sure, they are still smart. But do they have the same courage and tenaciousness they had then? We won't venture an answer. Let them do that themselves. But we will say that more young blood and more courage would help to solve the problems of today. And that is why we applaud Rodgers' remarks.

DeMille, has out-DeMilled himself with "Samson and Delilah."

All of the spectacle, the thrills and the cunning, which he so well understands and knows how to translate into celluloid, has gone into this latest of his epoch-making productions and the net result, we are very happy to report, means another milestone in the great picture contributions he has made to our industry.

This magnificent production has all the ear-marks of a money picture in all classes of theatres from the downtown first runs right on through to the remote subsequent runs.

Of equal importance is the intelligent manner in which Paramount is handling the advance build-up.

Variety Clubs Conference

During the week starting October 23rd, Variety Clubs International, holds its third Mid-Year Conference at the Hotel Astor in New York City.

Representatives from thirty-seven tents located in that many different cities in the United States, Canada, Mexico City and Great Britain, will gather in the big city on Sunday the 23rd when they board their special cars for a trip to the Variety Clubs-Will Rogers Hospital at Saranac Lake where they will inspect the institution and its modernized facilities and learn, first hand, how this great Hospital is being operated under the Great Heart of Showbusiness, the Variety Clubs.

On their return to New York on the morning of the 25th they go into their series of business sessions interspersed with an elaborate program of entertainment sponsored and hosted by the New York Tent under the leadership of Max A. Cohen.

The climax of this year's conference will be the banquet on Thursday night when Bob O'Donnell inducts the new Tent officially and presents them with their Charter. At this function most of the top executives of the industry and honored guests and dignitaries from Washington will be present. Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark and Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder will lead the Washington delegation to the dinner.

This event, or series of events, again brings the industry into favorable public relations as the medium through which so much good is being done for so many people in and out of the industry. The Clubs have gained thousands of lines of newspaper space, radio comment and newsreel coverage for the many outstanding acts of charity they are performing.

No matter what the industry's critics may say or try to say against our business they cannot take away one iota from the fine work of the great Heart of Showbusiness.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

EXHIBITION

Strikes in the steel and coal industries this week hammered away at the box-office in affected areas with exhibitors feeling the pinch and asking the major distributors for rental adjustments. Twentieth Century-Fox was reportedly the first to grant an adjustment with Columbus reporting that the Cincinnati branch had agreed to changes in contract terms from Oct. 16.

However, nationally, the picture was happier generally. Business elsewhere seemed to hold up and the week that is closing showed the fewest new cases of polio since the epidemic made itself felt this summer. Only 1,538 new cases were reported nationally compared to 3,417 which marked the peak week ending Aug. 20.

On the exhibitor front national Allied was preparing for its annual convention which opens Monday at Minneapolis. Allied directors, who meet in that city Saturday for a pre-convention conference, had before them a recommendation from its committee which studied the all-industry public-relations plan inaugurated in Chicago recently. The report favored Allied's joining the move "with . . . reservations." (P. 9)

And out in Sun Valley, Idaho, the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre owners held its meeting and called upon distributors to make public the figures in bids received for pictures. Down in Memphis, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee, met and elected Max A. Connett, president. And out in California, the Citizens Committee Against Daylight Saving Time, attacked Charles Skouras for putting out a trailer favoring the advanced clock system in his theatres.

DISTRIBUTION

"Hamlet" this week started something when it became the first British film to get a mass preferential booking over a large chain as Fox West Coast booked the Rank film for its circuit of over 200 houses. In New York United Artists was establishing precedent too by selling the dual bill of "Black Magic" and "The Great Dan Patch" away from Loew's neighborhood houses to approximately 100 independents among which are the Brandt, Century, Randforce and Skouras circuits.

Eagle Lion anticipates a schedule of 20 to 24 top-flight pictures for 1950, with up to 16 more programmers and 12 to 15 British imports. The company probably will shut up its studio and become exclusively a distributor for others. Twentieth-Fox has put in a 28-day clearance between first- and second-runs in San Francisco,

LITIGATION

Both Big 3—Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM) — and Little 3—Columbia, United Artists, Universal—were granted another 30 days in which to file their answers in the Government anti-trust suit thereby postponing this hearing to Nov. 17. However, the anti-trust front was anything but inactive this week with the Dipson and Meiselman interests hiring Robert L. Wright, late of the Justice Department, to work on their appeals against the majors and with the Fifth and Walnut Company carrying its appeal on the National Theatre to the U. S. Supreme Court. Anti-trust suits filed this week, in addition were:

Louis and Sadie Sablosky, Marion Fox, Myrtle Singer vs. Warner Bros., Paramount, RKO, Loew's, Columbia, Universal and United Artists, alleged monopoly on product which hurt the plaintiff's Mayfair at Philadelphia. Damages, $1,800,000.

Charles E. Dickinson estate vs. Schine circuit, claiming product tieup which compelled the estate to sell the 1,800-seat Palace at Lockport, N. Y. Damages, $1,-050,000.

Settled was the South Bend Auto Driveway suit against the majors and the Michigan Drive-In at South Bend. Plaintiff got day-and-date run with the rival Michigan which brings it 14 days after South Bend first-run.

Meanwhile the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers announced that it would extend its anti-trust activities and furnish evidence to the Justice Department wherever it found apparent violations and the Schine circuit, complying with a consent decree in its anti-trust suit, was releasing the Star at Delaware, Ohio and the Opera House at Wooster.

In Brunswick, Ga., exhibitors knocked out the city amusement tax when the Georgia Supreme Court ruled the community was without authority to make such a levy in view of existing taxes.

GENERAL

The American film industry, which has found stormy weather in Britain over the question of dollars, was pondering a new one this week which might give it trouble with frozen sterling. Under the terms of the Anglo - American agreement, film monies which are frozen in England may be put to certain uses such as covering print costs, exchange operations, etc. The money can also be put to uses not defined in the agreement after such use has been approved by a joint committee consisting of representatives of the American distributors and of the British Board of Trade. Recently the Bank of England wanted to move in and take over approval of these extra uses. Americans were wondering???

Dead: Elmer Clifton, 59, writer, and director, credited with discovering Clara Bow, in Los Angeles. William Dewees, 75, pioneer Canadian exhibitor, at Vancouver. Robert E. Vining, 48, former assistant to Motion Picture Association of America President Eric Johnston, at Palo Alto.

Coal and Steel Strikes Strike Box-Offices

Strike-torn areas in Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, feeling the twin pincers of closed coal mines and cold steel furnaces, were noticing deep cuts in average theatre attendance, reports from Columbus and Louisville indicated.

Exhibitors, watching the situation, were trimming expenses wherever possible and were turning to the film companies to seek relief. First positive action in this direction, according to a report from Columbus quoting P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, was that 20th Century-Fox had granted rental adjustments back to Oct. 16. The Wood report placed the reduction at 20 per cent and attributed the cut to 20th-Fox Cincinnati Branch Manager, who is said to have acted under the company's policy of giving its branch managers authority to negotiate and adjust contracts.

Reports from Columbus declared that Wood was asking the other distributors also for readjustments.

Council Moves to Protect Film Capital's Good Name

Hollywood's Motion Picture Industry Council, which consists of various elements of the industry including labor, moved on two fronts this week to take an active part in protecting the film capital's reputation by locking the stable door before the horse escapes.

The council, in two resolutions, went on record, first to assist law enforcement agencies to fight crime, and, second, to provide courses by which newcomers to Hollywood could adapt themselves to their new lives there.

One of the steps to help law enforcement agencies was thought to consist in providing active liaison with officials by which information might be furnished to head off criminal "encroachments."

The "orientation" courses were suggested in an effort to prepare newcomers to Hollywood and to acquaint them with their problems. The Council pointed out that the studios were already furnishing such training but that it would be advisable to spread it to places where the newcomer came before he entered a studio—such as the schools in acting, makeup and allied acting arts.

20th-Fox Switches To 28 Days in 'Frisco

Twentieth Century-Fox this week officially put a 28-day clearance schedule between first- and second-runs for its San Francisco key districts, thereby becoming the second major to realign its clearance partially in this area.

Suggests Industry Plan OK, If..

Endorse Public Relations Move with Reservation, Reports Allied Group

A suggestion by a special committee that national Allied should participate in the all-industry public relations program "with . . . reservations" will be offered to the Allied directorate as it meets in Minneapolis on Oct. 22.

The directors' meeting precedes the annual Allied convention which opens Monday and runs through Wednesday at the Hotel Nicollet.

The committee's reservation is not binding upon the Board, which will make its own decision as it maps out the program for the convention's business sessions.

Retain Autonomy

The committee recommended that the public relations program, which was first suggested at the Chicago all-industry meeting, be endorsed "with certain conditions and reservations" among which will be that Allied "reserves the right . . . to take whatever action it sees fit in the interest of its members . . . anything in the public relations program notwithstanding."

The committee, which noted the thought that the success of the program depended upon the success of Allied's participation because of the importance Allied now held in the industry, further proposed that all acts of the Allied representative to the all-industry public relations body, be subject to review by the national Allied Board. It appointed Pres. William Ainsworth as temporary representative to the public relations organization.

In expressing itself against any "large and expensive organization" for public relations, the committee recommendations stated:

"We are interested only in promoting cooperation and understanding among the participating organizations in the public relations field, not in setting up a motion picture bureaucracy or in creating jobs."

To Map Sessions

Saturday's Board meeting will also be taken up with the business session program of what is reported to be looming as Allied's largest and most mellow convention. While the delegates have not abandoned any idea of securing their ends by Allied's historic tactics of legislation and litigation, the results of recent events are said to have made many of them think that conditions have vastly improved. The basis of this is the success of the Government to date in its anti-trust suit against the major distributors, an action for which Allied General Counsel Abram F. Myers is given credit by his organization.

The board will probably discuss the following matters:

1) Television, including "eye-witness reports" on the world series.

2) Box-office promotions, including the Baltimore and Iowa-Nebraska campaigns.

3) Drive-ins, the need for servicing through existing exhibitor associations and their effect on under-roofers.

4) Flat rentals.

5) Study of insurance in an effort to cut rates.

6) Print shortages.

7) Taxes and legislation.

Afternoon Work

The convention program limits business sessions to the afternoons of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The mornings will be devoted to registration and to inspecting the exhibits in the East Room Hallway of the Hotel Nicollet. At 2 P.M. during these three days the convention will hold sessions in the Grand Ballroom until 5 P.M. On Monday night at 7 o'clock there will be a night club party at the Club Carnival; on Tuesday at 6:30 P.M., a cocktail party in the main ballroom and on Wednesday at 7:30 P.M., the convention banquet, which is informal, will take place in the main ballroom.

A special program for the ladies adds a sightseeing tour and a luncheon at Lowell Inn, Stillwater, Minn., on Tuesday, with the tour starting at 11 A.M., and a tea and style show on Wednesday from 3 P.M. to 5 P.M., at Dayton's Skyroom. The ladies are also included on all other convention entertainment features.

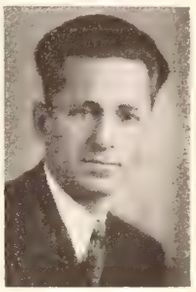
Three Birds, One Stone

A new tax collecting system by which exhibitors can report their federal admission taxes, along with their social security payments and their employe withholding tax on one form in one operation, will go into effect for the first quarter of 1950, the Treasury Department announced in Washington this week.

The new system, which also provides for one payment, has been tried out in the Maryland area where it has been found successful. It will be handled on the new Form 941, which will replace and incorporate the features hitherto contained in Form W-1 and Form SS-1.



Children's Library Adds 12

The Children's Film Library of the Motion Picture Association of America this week added 12 features to its program of 42 features which it offers exhibitors for children's programs, such as special morning matinees. The 12 new features are: "Black Beauty," "Last of the Mohicans," "Kidnapped," "Boys' Ranch," "Kit Carson," "Adventures of Gallant Bess," "The Overlanders," "The Return of Rusty," "Feudin', Fussin' and A-Fightin'," "Mickey," "Bill and Coo," and "Northwest Stampede."

More than 3,500 theatres in the United States are now playing these Children's Library program films for special children's shows, Marjorie Dawson, chairman of the Children's Film Library Committee, declared.

Make Bids Public, Demands PCCITO; Re-Elects Harvey

A demand that distributors make public the figures submitted on pictures offered for competitive bidding highlighted the regular annual convention of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners which closed Tuesday at Sun Valley, Idaho.

Rotus Harvey

The convention reelected H. V. (Rotus) Harvey board chairman, with Mrs. Hannah Oppie as executive secretary and Ben Levin as treasurer.

The bidding resolution was forged in a fire of discontent which has flared from exhibitor circles generally. It demands that all bids be submitted sealed and opened before all interested parties. It further demands that requests for bids and awards be sent out earlier than the PCCITO claims is now the practice.

Suggests Arbitration

The convention also passed a resolution suggesting arbitration by which the two parties would each select an arbiter or who would in turn select a third from a panel furnished by

More Phonies

Counterfeit $10 bills, thought to have been made in Kansas City, made their appearance in the midwest this week and may spread to other sections of the nation. The phony bills bear the serial number E-56527991A, are of a fair quality but are printed on paper which is much lighter than that used for money making by the U. S. Government. Other fake bills noted are: $10 notes on the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, bearing serial number E269689969A and the check plate number F28 to the right of the engraving of Alexander Hamilton; $20 bills on the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis with the face plate C42 and the back plate number 592 with the serial number H95621073C. The paper is of poor quality.

High Court Upholds Showmen; Kills City Amusement Levy

Attempts by the city of Brunswick, Ga., to impose a tax on theatre tickets failed this week as the State Supreme Court unanimously ruled that the city lacked authority to levy such an added tax in view of current city occupation tax.

The high court reversed a lower court judgment made by Superior Court Judge Gordon Knox. The suit arose out of the fight put on by Publix-Lucas Theatres, which operates the Ritz, Bijou and Roxy in Brunswick, and Independent Exhibitor E. H. Diemmer of the Starlight. The exhibitors, in their complaint, charged that the city of Brunswick was prevented from charging more than $1,000 a year in occupational or license taxes from a single firm. Publix-Lucas said that it had already paid a $500 license tax and the new levy would add $3,000 a year to its tax bill. Diemmer said that the city had billed him already for his license tax and the ticket tax would amount to an additional $1,000 or more.

In its opinion the Georgia Supreme Court said:

"Since one occupation tax has been demanded of the (theatre operators) and actually paid as to one of them, the City of Brunswick was without authority to levy another and different occupation tax."

Variety Clubs Int'l to Gather In Gotham for Midyear Meet

Delegates from 37 tents of the Variety Clubs International located in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Great Britain, will open the third Midyear Conference of that organization in New York Tuesday afternoon for a three-day run at the Hotel Astor.

The conference was to be preceded by a trip to the Variety Clubs-Will Rogers Hospital by the delegates who were to leave New York Sunday by special train and return Monday after inspecting the hospital plant. The report on the hospital's first four months of operation by Variety holds an important place on the conference agenda which includes:

Reports to be Heard

Reports of the International Officers, committee reports on the Great Heart Awards, historical data, scholarships in Phillips Exeter College, and the agreement reached by the Clubs with the American Guild of Variety Artists. This last covers an agreement by which the Variety Clubs pay Agva's sick fund $20,000 annually in return for which Agva will clear any talent needed for benefits given by the various Variety tents.

The midyear conference will also decide whether the Club swill support the Motion Picture Industry Council and its public relations program. An innovation of the meetings will be an open forum at which all Tent representatives will be able to express themselves and offer suggestions, which, if approved by the meeting, will be referred back to the Tents for action.

Schedule

The conference's schedule follows:

Tues. Oct. 25—Morning, registration until 2 P.M. at the College Room, eighth floor, Hotel Astor. Noon, Private luncheon with International Chief Barker Bob O'Donnell as host to the representatives of the Hospital and Finance Committees.

2 P.M.—First business session, in the College Room of the Astor Hotel.

6 P.M.—Reception, and dinner, hosted by the New York Tent in the Variety Club Rooms and North Garden, after which tent representatives and their wives will be the guests of the New York Tent at various Broadway shows.

Wed., Oct. 26—Morning, 2nd business session, College Room. Noon, Luncheon for all delegates, officers and guests.

2 P.M. — Third business session, College Room, Night, open for delegates and wives to visit night clubs and other spots in the Times Square area.

Thurs., Oct. 27—Morning, 4th business session, College Room.

2 P.M.—5th business session, if necessary. Remainder of the day is open for shopping and sightseeing.

7 P.M.—Cocktail party and banquet in the Grand Ballroom of the Astor Hotel at which the New York Tent will be officially inducted and presented with its charter from the International Tent. George Jessel, master of ceremonies, honored guests will include the Treasury Secretary John Snyder, who will receive from O'Donnell a gold membership card in the Variety Clubs International.

Over 700

The New York Tent reports that over 700 reservations have already been received for the banquet which will be both broadcast and televised. The stage show will follow the limited speaking program and will be under the direction of Russell Markett of Radio City Music Hall.

The following are representatives of the various tents: Pittsburgh, Jim Balmer; Cincinnati, Irving Sochin; Detroit, Art Robinson; Cleveland, M. A. Mooney; Buffalo, William Dipson; Albany, Charles Smakwitz; Indianapolis, Sam Switow; Washington, Frank Boucher; Minneapolis, William Elson; Philadelphia, Michael Felt; Des Moines, Nathan Sandler; Omaha, Frank Van Husen; Dallas, William O'Donnell; Dayton, Roy Wells; Baltimore, Owen D. Weems and Joseph C. Grant; Memphis, Herbert Kohn; Atlanta, E. E. Whitaker; Oklahoma City, J. C. Hunter; Boston, Joe Cifre, Harold Stoneman and William Koster; Charlotte, Scott Lett; Los Angeles, Ezra Stern; Grand Rapids, Phil Osterhouse; Toronto, Canada—J. J. Fitzgibbons and Morris Stein; Mexico City, Luis Montes; Toledo, Jack Lykes; New Haven, Barney Pitkin; San Francisco, Abe Blumenfeld and Jimmie O'Neal; Miami, George Hoover; Houston, John P. Goodwin; New York, Max A. Cohen and Denver, Pat McGee.

International officers who will attend include: R. J. O'Donnell, International Chief Barker; Marc Wolf, 1st Assistant International Chief Barker; Jack Beresin, 2nd Assistant International Chief Barker; George Eby, International Dough Guy; Chick Lewis, International Press Guy and Convention Director; Col. Bill McCraw, International Executive Director; Murray Weiss, International Property Master; Nate Golden, Chairman of the International Heart Committee.

Special guests who will accompany the representatives to Saranac Lake for an inspection tour of the hospital are: Dr. Edgar Mayer, medical consultant in New York for the Hospital Board; Rabbi Bernard Birstein, head of the Actors' Temple in New York; Henry Dunn, officer of the American Guild of Variety Artists; and Ned Shugrue, public relations consultant.

Triples No Go

Balaban and Katz this week dropped the use of triple features at the Belmont in Chicago and returned to twin bills. They also returned to their policy of morning matinees for kids on Saturdays.

B&K Kiddie Shows

For the first time in many years Balaban and Katz will use its 4,000-seat Uptown Theatre, Chicago, for a Saturday morning kiddie show on Oct. 29 with a feature from MPAA children's list plus several cartoons at 25 cents admission. Tickets will be sold in the schools and elsewhere in advance. A similar kiddie show will be screened at the B&K Belmont on the same date. On Nov. 11 the circuit will have an Armistice Day show for children in the Belmont. The same type of show will be put on in other parts of the city as soon as arrangements can be completed.

the American Arbitration Association. The decision would be final and binding upon all parties.

I. E. Chadwick, president of the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association, was one of the speakers addressing the body. He told his audience that the ranks of independent producers was decreasing, their numbers having dropped from 250 to 90 and warned that independent exhibitors had a vital stake in preventing the death of independent production.

Importance of the independent producer to the independent exhibitor was stressed to the convention by Monogram-Allied Artists President Steve Broidy who told the group that independent producers needed the "active, real, wholehearted support" of the exhibitor. "The independent companies have been making available a reliable, constant source of supply to meet your needs. Without your active support, this supply must necessarily diminish in quantity and quality. Continued indifference can only bring one result—the disappearance entirely of a picture supply which I know is vital to your needs."

Tri-States Ass'n Elects Connett

Max A. Connett of Newton, Miss., was elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee (Tri-States) Wednesday at the 40th annual convention of that organization in the Hotel Chisca, Memphis. Connett succeeds W. F. Ruffin, who went to the board chairmanship.

Other officers are: Vice-President Leon Roundtree for Mississippi, M. A. Lightman, Jr., for Tennessee and C. C. Mundo for Arkansas, and Secretary-Treasurer Dave P. Callahan.

The organization decided not to extend its membership to exhibitors from Kentucky but will eliminate the Tennessee River as its boundary line so that exhibitors from eastern Tennessee are eligible for membership.

Gael Sullivan, executive director of the Theatre Owners of America, in an address attacking amusement taxes, told the convention that the average family of four pays $35 a year in such taxes on movies.

Twentieth Century-Fox Vice-President Al Lichtman told the meeting that while he believed exhibitor-distributor relationships were improving, "there are still too many law suits pending and being started." He urged exhibitors to consider arbitration saying "why not set up an arbitration system on the local levels in each exchange area?"

Attack Skouras Daylight Saving Trailer Support

Sharp issue over the support of daylight saving time in California by National Theatres Chief Charles Skouras was taken this week by the California Citizens Committee Against Daylight Saving Time, which includes exhibitors.

The anti-daylight savers centered their fire on what they termed a "$12,000 movie trailer dreaming up propaganda virtues for the often defeated law."

In asking exhibitors to refuse their screens to this trailer which is said to have been made by Skouras, R. V. Garrod, state chairman for the committee, stated:

"This trailer is about to be forced upon thousands of innocent theatre patrons. This committee uses the word 'forced' in the sense that we do not believe Mr. Skouras will pay for advertising warning the patrons that they will have to sit through political hokum after having paid their own money for entertainment."

Theatremen included on the committee's executive board are: C. A. Cabellero, Pacific Drive-in Theatres Ass'n, Los Angeles; Leo Fenton, director, Independent Theatre Owners, Los Angeles; George M. Mann, Independent Theatres, San Francisco; Leroy Pawley, president, Independent Theatre Ass'n, Indio.

Name 3-Man Committee To Pass on ECA Payments

ECA administrator Paul G. Hoffman this week appointed a three-member advisory Committee on motion picture guaranties to decide which films would be suitable to receive financial assistance under the informational media guarantee program.

The committee will study all film company applications for contracts under the program, which provides for the convertability into dollars of out-of-pocket expenses incurred in the distribution of pictures to Marshall Plan countries.

Named to the committee were: Thomas K. Finletter, New York attorney, who formerly headed the ECA mission to the United Kingdom, and earlier was chairman of the President's Air Policy Commission; Mrs. Louise Leonard Wright, director, Chicago Council on Foreign Relations, and a member of the U. S. National Commission for UNESCO; Dr. George N. Shuster, president of Hunter College, New York City, and also a member of the UNESCO Commission.

Polio Cases Lowest Since August Peak

Polio cases were on the decrease by more than 50 per cent of the peak this week with figures for the seven days ending Oct. 8 showing 1,588 new cases as compared to the peak figure of 3,417 new cases for the week ending Aug. 20. The epidemic, which went into high gear during July, is the worst since World War I and has claimed 34,742 victims during the year.

Oregon Establishes Minimum Wages

Minimum wages of 65 cents an hour for women and 50 cents an hour for minors will go into effect Nov. 28 for persons employed in the theatrical and recreation industry in Oregon, dispatches from Portland said.

Not for Us Americans

The license of the Taconic Theatre in Williamstown, Mass., was suspended for five days after the Board of Selectmen had viewed the two foreign films being shown there, "Passionnelle" and "Torment," a message from Boston states. Chairman John D. Henderson said, after a private showing of the films had been made for the Selectmen, "The two films are too highly suggestive for an American audience." Shortly after the decision was made known students of Williams College staged a demonstration and hung Selectmen in effigy in front of the theatre. State police were alerted but their services were not required. The Board reportedly acted after complaints had been received that the trailers advertising the films were "suggestive."

Savini Winner

Astor Picture exchanges' drive to honor the fact that President R. M. (Bob) Savini has been in the motion picture saddle for 45 years wound up this week with Minneapolis taking first prize, Pittsburgh, second; Cleveland, third; and San Francisco, fourth. Drive Captain Pat Patterson announced that the exchanges ran so close that 10 runners-up will also receive prizes. They are: Indianapolis, Canada, Philadelphia, Charlotte, Dallas, New Orleans, Boston, Atlanta, New York, Cincinnati.

Hanson Up

Oscar Hanson, who was representative for Monogram Pictures of Canada during many years, this week was appointed general manager of both Monogram and Allied Artists' distribution activities in the Dominion, according to Monogram President Steve Broidy.

Foreign

Sir Sidney Clifft, chairman of Film Classics of Great Britain, and David Griffith, his general manager, sailed from New York for England this week, after having closed a deal with Film Classics foreign sales Chief, David D. Horne, to handle "Not Wanted" and "Lost Boundaries" in the United Kingdom. . . . Salvatore Casolero and Salvatore Billitteri have formed C & B films to handle Italian imports. First will be "Disillusion," which goes into the Giglio at New York on Oct. 28.

Bernard B. Kreisler returned to New York last week prepared to set up distribution facilities for foreign films under the cooperative plan he negotiated with European producers during his recent trip to the Continent and England for the formation of International Film Associates (STR Oct. 8).

2 Kitty Houses Plan Large-Screen Video

Two Kansas City, Mo., theatres were scheduled to install large-screen RCA instantaneous television equipment within the next six months, it was reliably reported this week. They are:

The recently refurbished Fox Midwest Orpheum which is devoted largely to legitimate and roadshow films.

The Commonwealth Circuit's 1200-seat, Ashland, a neighborhood house in eastern Kansas City.

Schlaifer Sees 52 For Eagle Lion Release in 1950

A release schedule for Eagle Lion in 1950 which would include as many as 52 pictures was foreseen in New York Monday by General Sales Manager Jack Schlaifer.

Schlaifer's estimate, which includes 20 to 24 "top flight" pictures, 12 to 16 programmers including the Red Rider series and westerns, and 12 to 15 more British imports, came after Financier N. Peter Rathvon previously had declared that he thought Eagle Lion would have sufficient product during 1950 to operate exclusively as a distributing outfit. That Rathvon's view was being considered by the company was further confirmed by Operations Vice-President William C. McMillen, the Robert C. Young lieutenant, who, in answer to a question, said that the closing of Eagle Lion's studios on the west coast was a "possibility."

Rathvon, whose Motion Picture Capital Corporation is financing several pictures for Eagle Lion distribution, told the trade press in a conference last week that four productions had already been completed or were to get into production with his company's funds for EL release. They are: "The Sundowners," "Ruppert," "Beloved," (tentative title) and George Pal's fantasy, "Destination Moon," last of which deals with rocket ships and is to get under way this week.

May Close Studio

McMillen, who sat in the same conference, declared that with monies available to Eagle Lion, financing for 20 films was available to independent producers. It was not Eagle Lion's intention, he said, to compel producers who distribute through it to use its studio space if cheaper space could be obtained elsewhere, and it was not planned to keep the studio operating unless enough productions were available to make its operation economical.

Eagle Lion also announced that it would distribute Filmakers "Never Fear," which originally had been scheduled for Film Classics distribution.

5th and Walnut Carries Appeal To Highest Court

The Fifth and Walnut Corporation, operators of the National at Louisville, Ky., this week asked the U. S. Supreme Court to review its $2,100,000 damage and injunction suit against eight major distributors, the Marcus Loew Booking Agency and United Artists Theatre circuit.

Grounds for appeal were that the New York federal court, in which a jury returned a verdict against Fifth and Walnut, and the Second U. S. Court of Appeals, which upheld the jury decision, had both erred.

The error, Fifth and Walnut Attorney Monroe Stein said, lay in the refusal by Federal Judge Vincent Leibell to instruct the jury that move-overs were illegal and his further refusal to permit introduction of the findings of fact and conclusions at law issued by the U. S. Supreme Court in the Government anti-trust suit.

Judge Leibell had told the jurors they might decide for themselves whether the move-over situation at the Brown Theatre, in which two of the circuit defendants were said to have an interest, was illegal. The plaintiffs contended it held up product. The judge refused to allow introduction of the Supreme Court rules as evidence on the ground that the Government anti-trust suit was still in litigation and hence the findings of fact and conclusions at law were not final.

On the latter point Stein contends that the Court's view on the illegality of the defendants' acts and the like were final and even if the Government anti-trust suit again goes to the high court, this portion of the record will not be changed. The judge, however, held to his stand, and in a 60-page charge, instructed the jury what was acceptable as evidence.

Fifth and Walnut had originally sued Marcus Loew's Booking Agency, United Artists Theatres, Paramount, Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Loew's (MGM), Columbia, United Artists, Universal, charging that the National, though properly entitled as to location and seating capacity to first-runs in Louisville, could not get them because of an agreement among the defendants. The agreement, it was charged, favored other theatres and discriminated against the National.

Objection Expected

All defendants were expected to fight the appeal, with Columbia Attorney Lou Frohlich stating that he had already sent his brief opposing the appeal to the printers.

Drive-In Run Suit Ends With Clearance Changes

Suit of the South Bend Auto Driveway against the major eight distributors over clearance was settled out of federal court in Chicago last Friday with an agreement whereby the South Bend plays day-and-date with Manta Rose-Niles Michigan Drive-In. This brings both 14 days after South Bend, Ind., first-run. The suit had been directed against a Balaban and Katz subsidiary operating the first-run in South Bend, Manta-Rose, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, Warner Bros., RKO, Loew's (MGM), Columbia, Universal and United Artists.

More Time

The federal statutory court in New York last week granted the distributor defendants in the Government anti-trust suit another 30 days in which to file oral arguments on the proposed decree which the court will issue. The arguments, which were to have been heard on Oct. 17, are now scheduled for Nov. 17. Defendants are the Big 3—Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox, which is reported seeking a consent decree to escape the suit, and Loew's (MGM)—and the Little 3—Universal, United Artists and Columbia.

SIMPP To Expand Anti-Trust Activities

The Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers will expand its anti-trust activities to cover the entire nation and all forms of monopoly which restrict the marketing of motion pictures, Board Chairman Gunther Lessing told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW Tuesday in Hollywood. Lessing made it clear the move would include buying combines where complaint is justified.

Elaborating on the original statement from the Society that the tempo of its anti-trust activities was to be stepped up, Lessing said the SIMPP action would be primarily toward informing the Justice Department of possible violations of the anti-trust laws.

To Furnish Evidence

The program will have as "its purpose," he said, "first, the furnishing of evidence concerning local monopoly to the Department of Justice for presentation to the federal courts.

"This will include," he continued, "all actions in concert which are in violation of the anti-trust law including buying combinations which restrict the marketing of motion pictures.

"After the final splitting up, we shall also be active and vigilant to see that no new illegal combinations develop locally or otherwise."

The Society now has an anti-trust suit of its own against United Detroit Theatres and a booking combine in the same area.

Elmer Clifton Passes; Was Pioneer Director

Elmer Clifton, 59, screen writer and director of silent and sound films, who was credited with discovering Clara Bow, died in California Hospital Sunday. Starting in show business as an actor, he became associated with D. W. Griffith; in later days he directed Buck Jones westerns "The Old Chisholm Days" and "Wreck of the Hesperus." Surviving are his widow, Helen, two daughters Dorinda, an actress, and Mrs. Kenneth Hanson, and a son, Michael.

Robert E. Vining, Johnston Aide, Dead

Robert E. Vining, 48, former assistant to Motion Picture Association of America president Eric Johnston, died at his home in Palo Alto, Calif., last Thursday. A former Boston newspaperman, he switched to public relations and was later public relations advisor to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and the Duke of Kent. During the war he organized and served as commander of the psychological warfare unit in the south Pacific.

Wright To Handle Dipson Appeal

Robert L. Wright, who as a member of the Justice Department successfully prosecuted the Government anti-trust suit against the eight major distributors, this week was retained as private counsel to handle appeals on two unsuccessful exhibitor anti-trust suits.

They are the Dipson case in Buffalo where the federal court found for the seven distributor and two circuit defendants, and the Meiselman suit in Charlotte, N. C., where the court upheld the eight major distributors and the one circuit defendant.

Defendants in the Dipson case were Paramount, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM), Warner Bros., Universal, United Artists and the Buffalo and Bison Theatres, part of the so-called Shea circuit. Those in the Meiselman case were Paramount, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM), Warner Bros., Universal, United Artists, Columbia and the Wilby-Kincey circuit.

Wants$1,800,000 Over Run 'Favor'

Suit for triple damages amounting to $1,800,000 over alleged favoritism on run was filed Monday against seven major distributors under the anti-trust laws in federal court at Philadelphia.

The suit, entered by Louis and Sadie Sablosky, Marion Fox and Myrtle Singer charges that the defendant distributors over a period of six years "conspired to favor" Paramount's Roosevelt and Warner's Circle and Liberty over the plaintiff's Mayfair by letting the allegedly favored houses have their product from one to two weeks ahead of the Mayfair.

Defendants named are Warner Bros., Paramount, RKO, Loew's (MGM), Columbia, United Artists and Universal. Actual damages claimed are $600,000 which may be trebled under the anti-trust laws.

Sue Schine for Million; Charge Forced Theatre Sale

Charging that a conspiracy which cornered product had forced the Charles E. Dickinson estate to dispose of the 1,800-seat Palace at Lockport to the Schine circuit in 1936, the estate Tuesday filed suit in federal court at Utica, N. Y., against Schine for triple damages amounting to $1,050,000.

The suit, filed under the anti-trust laws by Washington Attorney Harold Schliz and John Clagett, alleges that Schine gained control of all first and second-run product in Lockport for his two houses, the Rialto and the Hi-Art, between 1933 and 1943. Loss of business as a result forced the Dickinson Estate to sell the Palace to Schine.

The Hi-Art has since burned down and under the terms of the consent decree it reached with the Justice Department, Schine must dispose of either the Palace or the Rialto.

Kerr Named Cinecolor Chief

John D. Kerr, chairman of Cinecolor's board of directors during the past eight months, president of the American Fruit Growers, Inc., and a bank and railroad director, this week was elected president of Cinecolor.

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

Finds a McCoy, Gets News Break

When it comes to drumming up publicity, Lawrence Lehman, manager of the RKO Missouri Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., likes the real McCoy. So when he played "Roseanna McCoy" recently, Lehman went out and found the real thing in the person of Miss Jo McCoy, a Kansas City resident and a bonafide descendant of the Hatfields and the McCoys.

The young lady's life story reads like a sequel to the Goldwyn film, since her mother was a Hatfield and her father a McCoy. All of which makes her neutral on the subject of the historic feud.

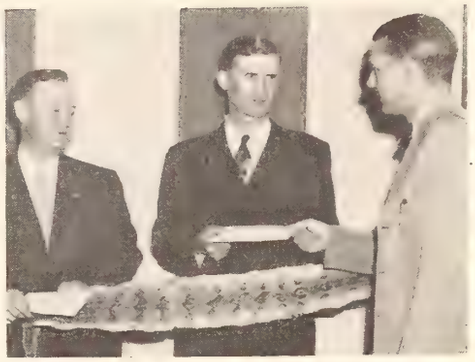
Lehman found Miss McCoy on her job as a senior clerk in the general offices of Mid-Continent Airlines, and interested Landon Laird, Kansas City Star "About Town" columnist in the human interest story.

Laird devoted his entire column on Saturday of the week during which the film played to Jo McCoy and her story. She was born on the Kentucky side of the Tug River, and as a girl waded in Peter Creek and Blackberry Creek, around which much of the early action of the film swirls.

The episode made excellent reading for Laird's followers and good publicity to the Missouri Theatre, which was duly credited in the column.

News Roto Section Devoted to Industry

As the result of arrangements made several weeks ago by Russell Stewart of MGM's publicity department, the New York Daily News last Sunday devoted its rotogravure section to the motion picture industry, carrying 32 pages in a variety of colors featuring various attractions of eleven distributors.



MGM was represented by 218 inches or 28.4 per cent of the total amount of space. Next was 20th Century-Fox, with 167 inches or 22 per cent of the total. Then came Warners with 80 inches, followed by Republic with 60, Columbia with 41, United Artists, 38; Universal-International, 38; Paramount and RKO, 36 each; Eagle Lion, 33, and J. Arthur Rank, 13.

Manager Writes Column, Costs Paper Nothing

Al Hutchins of the State in Fostoria, Ohio, sold the publishers of a weekly newspaper on the idea that he could write them a good column that would cost them nothing. He's done so well writing of production facts or other sidelights on the movies at his theatre each week, that the publishers ran a contest to name the column. The winning name was good for a two-year subscription to the paper: Human Angles of Hollywood with Al Hutchins.

'Bride' Bike Ballyhoo

A parade of motorcycles, bannered with film and theatre copy and loaded down with cans and shoes, greeted "I Was a Male War Bride" in Cumberland, Md. Manager Johnny Manuel of the Strand arranged the affair with a local cycle club.

SNAKES ALIVE! But they proved better off dead when the banks in Wellsboro, Pa., offered a bounty of $1 for each rattlesnake killed. Well, 1,500 were turned in, and Manager Larry Woodin of the Arcadia Theatre Co., offered a season ticket for the biggest one. You see it above—59 inches long. Lawrence Franklin and Alfred Comfort, the snake killers, got duplicate awards from Woodin (right) on the Arcadia stage. The event packed the house.

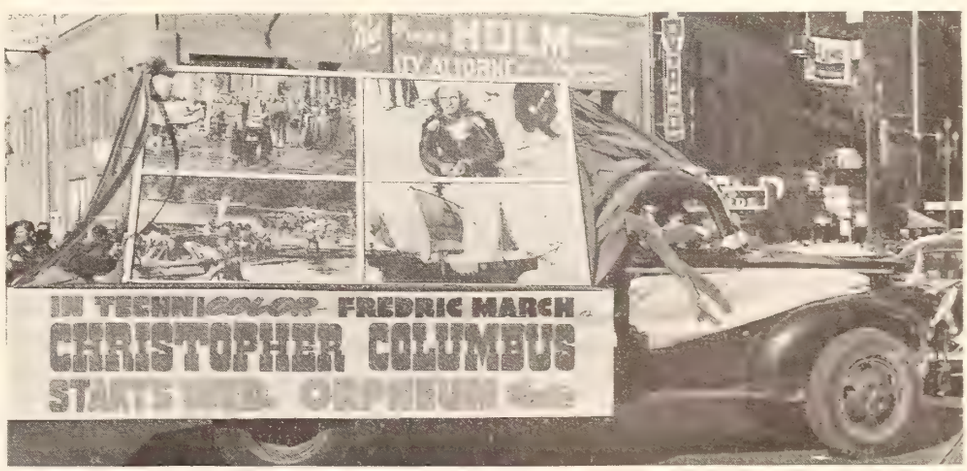
Brochure Outlines TheatrePromotion

A brochure outlining the problems and techniques of motion picture theatre advertising, publicity and exploitation is being offered free by McLaren-Andersen Associates, New York City film publicists. Titled "What Does the Public Know About Your Theatre!", the four-page mimeographed pamphlet quotes Universal-International President N. J. Blumberg in his recent declaration that the exhibitor must get back into the ad-pub business. The agency's discussion then proceeds on a breakdown by first-run, art and subsequent-run houses.

Recommended for all situations is complete coverage in the trade press in order to build the name and reputation of the theatre with an eye to both promotional and future sales value.

'Seabiscuit' Will Bow in 255 Houses

A five-state simultaneous premiere covering 255 theatres in Indiana, Kentucky, North Tennessee, East Illinois and West Virginia has been set for Warners' "The Story of Seabiscuit," on Nov. 2. These states will be blanketed by a special territorial advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign which has already been put into operation by Mort Blumenstock, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity.



The campaign includes elaborate press and radio coverage not only in the situations where the Technicolor film is scheduled to premiere but also in surrounding areas of over 200 miles of each premiere theatre. To take full advantage of the effects of the campaign, the picture is scheduled to open in over 200 neighboring cities within 10 to 15 days of the premiere.

Highlights of the campaign include the following:

Special premiere area cooperative ad which will include all theatres and towns participating in the event; a blanket radio coverage campaign with special transcriptions keyed to the premiere; theatres, towns and playdates will also be mentioned over the air on selected local radio stations.

Special Hollywood interview transcriptions will be provided with two interview records, one with Shirley Temple and another with Director David Butler. Special 40 x 60 lobby piece has been prepared for use in all premiere theatres; special premiere kit is being forwarded to each of the theatres with all material slanted to the premiere event. Special advance premiere announcement trailer to be shown well in advance in each of the theatres, and special radio commercial transcription announcement of the event.

Blumenstock is also sending a special exploitation crew headed by Herb Pickman and Bernie Serlin from New York and George Bannon, from the company's Dallas territory, to coordinate publicity, advertising and exploitation in the entire area.

IT WAS EASY TO ENTER THIS FLOAT IN THE PARADE. After all, it was the annual Columbus Day parade, and the float was advertising a timely offering: namely Universal-International's J. Arthur Rank Technicolor film, "Christopher Columbus." So North Coast Theatres in San Francisco realized a good measure of cooperation and exploitation through this showmanship. With large color stills from the picture, which opened that day at the Orpheum, mounted on a truck, the theatre circuit gained maximum display.—SF.

'Battleground' to Have 3 Premieres

Three consecutive premieres, starting Nov. 9, will launch MGM's national campaign on "Battleground." On that date the picture will have gala invitational showings at Loew's Capitol, Washington, D. C., attended by military brass, cabinet members and congressional representatives. Guests of honor will be Producer Dore Schary, Director William A. Wellman, stars of the film and General A. C. McAuliffe, whose exploits at Bastogne are depicted in the picture.

The next evening, Nov. 10, the film will be premiered on Broadway at the Astor Theatre, with the regular public opening to follow the next day. Industry leaders, MGM and Loew's executives, Schary, Wellman and some of the cast will be in attendance.

"Battleground" will then be screened on Armistice Day at Fort Bragg, in Fayetteville, N. C., for the 82nd Airborne Division, home base of the 101st Airborne engaged in the Battle of Bastogne, background of the film.

Plans are now being worked out by home office and studio executives for later openings in Los Angeles and other key cities.

Meanwhile, it was learned, MGM is assured of the Army's complete cooperation. Major General F. L. Parks, chief of the Army's Public Information Division, has issued a directive to all P. I. offices to extend MGM representatives full cooperation in exploiting the picture. Equipment and material will be made available for display in whatever locations are decided upon. The complete file of photographs taken by combat photographers at the Battle of Bastogne will also be made available to MGM.

First on New Sound

Having installed a new sound system into the Glove at Gloversville, N. Y., Assistant Manager Paul Richrath let patrons know that the musical, "Look for the Silver Lining," was the first film to be screened over the new system.

FINE WINDOW display for MGM's "The Barkleys of Broadway" was promoted for the showing of the film at the Empire, Leicester Square, in London. Tieup was on MGM Records.

The Ice Man Cometh Less Now in Maysville

Maysville, Ky., is having its first refrigerator giveaway in years, a project set up by Ben Tureman of the Russell Theatre and Schine Group Manager Bud Sommers. The nine-cubic-foot, $310 prize is being spotlighted in the lobby for a month, and its dealer is so enthusiastic that he is buying radio time and overprinting his statements and envelopes to plug the stunt.

Call the Marines!

The local Marines tied up with the Olympic at Watertown, N. Y., when it showed "Guadalcanal Diary" and "Purple Heart" revivals, with a couple of A-boards proclaiming the Marines' pride in the films, a window featuring different uniforms, and plugs on their radio program and at a reserve meeting. Irv Neuwirth credits his assistant, Ken Hartz.

Capital Boys Go French on 'Devil'

Saul Menick and Sam Keller of the National Theatre, capitalized on everything French in their campaign for the Washington, D. C., premiere of the French picture "Devil in the Flesh."

Starting two weeks before the opening a new 1949 French Renault sedan and an old 1929 model of the same car were driven around the business district displaying large placards announcing the film's playdate.

Use French Poodles

Something new in exploitation ideas was used when French poodles were employed, through the use of want ads in the local newspapers, to walk around the downtown streets with large tags (advertising the picture and playdate, of course) on their necks, accompanied by beautiful models. A colored slide of the poodles was projected in the window of Eastman Kodak Co.'s main store.

French copies of the book by Radiquet were presented to the language professors at the local colleges following a screening of the film. Screenings were also held for drama critics, members of the press, radio and television, and they too received copies of the book.

Brentano's book stores each devoted a window to the film, using copies of the book and large blowups supplied by the theatre. Twenty-five thousand bookmarks and heralds were printed and distributed through the book stores, bowling alleys, public libraries, inside and outside the theatre, etc.

TWA Airlines devoted their choice window in downtown Washington to "Devil in the Flesh" by displaying a group of hand-colored photos on the film, from Paris; a can of film; picture of a French Renault sedan arriving from Paris via Transworld Airlines; a large TWA Constellation plane and copies of Cue, Eye and Life magazines, which contained reviews and picture layouts on the film.

Goodwill Envoy Wilcoxon Reports; Youth, Churchmen at 'Samson' Meet

Letter prefect in a subject he has discussed before more than 90 different groups in 14 cities of the country, Henry Wilcoxon, Paramount-DeMille Ambassador to the Court of Public Relations, on Monday in New York gave a combined demonstration and report to trade press representatives of the activity which is winning new friends and influencing former customers to come back to the movies, according to estimates of theatremen in several areas.

Wilcoxon, who plays one of the principal roles of DeMille's "Samson and Delilah," appears ideally equipped to carry the message to influential groups that the motion picture industry is in a position to make valuable contribution to sources of education and culture with the material ("by-products," Wilcoxon calls them) gathered in the research which goes into the making of films for the entertainment of the masses.

The Wilcoxon address is supplemented by the showing of slides—frames from "Samson and Delilah"—and exhibits of stills and sketches. So far—he has covered 14 of the 41-city itinerary set by Paramount—Wilcoxon has met with enthusiastic response from the groups of educators and leaders in cultural and civic activities, he told the press. His subject is motion pictures more than the particular motion picture whose "by-products" he is offering as a gesture of goodwill from Paramount and DeMille to the educational institutions, libraries and cultural groups for whatever purpose they may find for them as sources of research on Biblical characters and events gathered during the 14 years of preparatory study which went into the making of "Samson and Delilah."

Representatives of more than a million young men and women and more than 400 leaders of public opinion in Protestant churches and affiliated religious organizations attended meetings last Friday (14) to discuss "Samson and Delilah."

The first meeting, held on the Hotel Pierre Roof, was attended by the heads of 34 national youth organizations, including the YMCA, YWCA, YMHA, YWHA, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, Boys' Club, Boys' Brotherhood Republic, Young People's League and Child Welfare League.

Henry Wilcoxon discussed the 14 years of research that preceded production and explained how the material assembled during this research would be made available to youth organizations.

That afternoon, at a meeting of Protestant church leaders, Wilcoxon's discussion included proposals for specific programs and materials for service to church and religious groups.

Cavalcade of Stars At 'Heiress' Premiere

From William Boyd and Elinor Fair, who starred in "The Volga Boatman" in 1926, to Olivia deHavilland, Montgomery Clift and Ralph Richardson, stars of "The Heiress," a cavalcade of the screen's most glamorous names were expected to tread the scarlet carpet from curb to lobby at the Carthay Circle Theatre Thursday night (20) for the Hollywood premiere of Paramount's "The Heiress."

Stars of pictures that have premiered at the Carthay through the years were invited to the opening, and grandstand seats were set up in the forecourt to accommodate the crowd of fans turning out to welcome their favorites.

'Massacre River' Campaign Marks Drive-In Birthday

Heavy exploitation campaign on "Massacre River" marked the first anniversary week of the Bellevue Theatre in Peoria, largest drive-in situation in southern Illinois, and the inauguration of a 100 per cent first-run policy.

House ran full-page ads in local newspapers and offered free admission to patrons presenting Indian Head penny, with induction into the Kiowa tribe of Oklahoma to those with coins dated 1870 to 1875. Teaser ads in the same issue were used to call attention to the full-pagers.

Folks Turn Out for 'Pocono' Premiere

About three years ago while serving as vice-president of Astor Pictures Corp., Joe E. Elicker received a three-week leave of absence to produce a motion picture using the scenic beauty of Pennsylvania's Pocono Mountains.

A 156-week leave of absence would be more like it, for it took Elicker that long to complete the 90-minute 16-mm. Kodachrome full-length motion picture, "Pocono," which had its world premiere recently at the Irem Temple Theatre in Wilkes-Barre before a reserved-seat audience.

Generous Cooperation

Elicker, whose home is at Dallas (apparently a suburb of Wilkes-Barre), is well known in the region where the film was made, and the generous cooperation of the citizenry during production extended right through the campaign activities in connection with the premiere.

Both the Dallas Post and the Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader, Evening Post gave several columns of publicity to the event, utilizing stories and pictures. Several merchants came through, too, with cooperative advertisements.

On the exploitation side, Elicker posted 100 three-sheets, 800 window cards, and distributed 20,000 heralds, of which 7,500 were enclosed in a weekly newspaper and mailed into every home in suburban Wilkes-Barre. The remainder were inserted in packages delivered into the towns by the four leading department stores.

Music from the picture was featured by disc jockeys on radio stations in the area. Stores featured sheet music. Photographic enlargements were placed in prominent windows, and one-sheets were displayed on the bulletin boards of Wyoming Valley schools.

Sponsored by C of C

The premiere itself, which was sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, was a gala affair. Mayors from northeastern Pennsylvania towns from as far as Reading were guests of the local mayor. An audience of over 1,000 gave Elicker and members of the film's cast a big ovation at the opening-night ceremonies. It was a big night for the producer-director and all those associated with him in the making of "Pocono."

But if you're itching to get out that old 16-mm. movie camera and produce a motion picture, don't—not unless you're prepared to stick to the job for at least three years, as Elicker did.

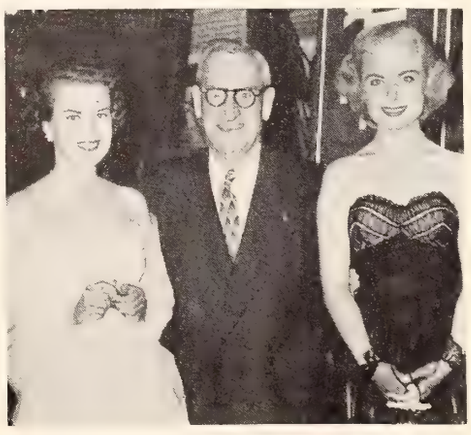
Two Tom Arrants Stunts That Denver Smiled At

Leave it to I.M.P.S. Member Tom Arrants to put over an exploitation stunt that holds a smile for the public—even with such simple stunts (which are often the best) as the two following:

For "Words and Music" he had printed on a small card what at first glance appeared to be a season pass to the State Theatre in Denver. Closer inspection showed in small type, under the SEASON PASS, the words "Dont let the," thus adding up to: "Don't let the season pass without seeing" etc. Simple, inexpensive, proven—and gets attention with a smile.

For "I Walk Alone" Brother Arrants tied up with a gum manufacturer, pasting a stick of the gum on a card. Reading matter was: "You'll never say 'I Walk Alone' if you chew . . . etc.," with an admonition to see the picture. Good plugs, Brother Arrants.

CONVERTIBLES WORK FOR PETERS' HORROR SHOW. If you're going to put on a midnight horror show, reasoned Manager George Peters of Loew's Theatre, Richmond, Va., then go out and ballyhoo it. And he did. He obtained five new Studebaker convertibles and paraded them around the downtown section the afternoon before the show. The first was driven by a blindfolded driver, the second contained the Monster, and the others were filled with beautiful girls. Needless to say, the show was a sellout. Two of the convertibles are shown above. Snazzy, eh?



I.M.P.S. Member Report

Film's Stars Ballyhoo Streeter 'India' Stunt

I. M. P. S. Member Reg Streeter, while relief manager at Warners' Fresno Theatre, Fresno, Calif., learned that "Song of India" had been booked, and at once sought two avenues for publicizing it—with a street ballyhoo away from the theatre, and a "sensationalized" theatre front for patrons and passersby.

Streeter dressed the theatre's porter in a costume similar to the one worn by Sabu in the film, and the doorman in a costume similar to that worn by Turhan Bey and sent then to traipse downtown streets. Attached to the back of each was a "catch" card; Sabu's sign read: "I am not Sabu, but I'm hunting for Warner's theatre to see . . ." etc. The doorman's card substituted the name of Turhan Bey for that of Sabu. Payoff of the stunt was a small promoted puppy, with a card on each side: "I am not a wild panther, but—" etc. And the kids "fell" for that puppy.

For his "sensationalized" theatre front, Brother Streeter mounted cutouts from the 24- and six-sheet, and provided a bit of action to attract the eye by placing glittering lights in the tiger's eyes. Both were stunts easy to imitate or adapt in other situations, and proved real attention-getters.

'Red Shoes' Ends First Year's Run

First anniversary of the New York run of J. Arthur Rank's "The Red Shoes" was to be celebrated Oct. 21 over a national network program in which Moira Shearer and Robert Helpman, Alfred Drake and Mary McCarty and two New York critics were to participate. J. Arthur Rank was to join the program on "live" pickup from London.

Since its opening 12 months ago, 503,684 New Yorkers have paid up to $2.40 to see the picture and, according to Eagle Lion Vice-President in Charge of Distribution William Heineman, the end of the film's run is not yet in sight. Maurice Maurer, operator of the Bijou, reports that tickets are printed and his staff is already filling mail order requests up to and past the New Year's weekend.

Some other "Red Shoes" long-run engagements include Chicago, 43rd week; Boston, 43 weeks at the Majestic, then moved to the Copley; Philadelphia, 40 weeks, after which the theatre was closed temporarily for repairs; Baltimore, 12 weeks; Cincinnati, 10; Cleveland, 18; Detroit, 21; Kansas City, 25; Los Angeles, now at 42; Rochester, 10; San Francisco, now at 21; Washington, 21.

Dodge Dealers Urged to Help Exploit 'Splendor'

Through the tieup between RKO Radio and the Dodge Motor Co. on "Savage Splendor," a complete working kit has been assembled by Dodge for its 4,000 dealers throughout the country. This consists of three large two-color posters, mats on two- and four-column newspaper ads, a two-column scene mat, an illustrated layout for window and store display, and a publicity handout. The dealer is instructed to phone or visit the manager of the local theatre and extend his cooperation when "Savage Splendor" is booked. He is also told to display posters in showroom, exhibit car or truck in theatre lobby, hold a parade with banners associating dealership with the Dodge cars and trucks seen in the picture, organize a party of orphans or school children and take them in a group in Dodge vehicles to see the picture (notify the newspapers on this), hire a "sandwich man" and have him parade with giant poster or regulation one-sheet supplied with the kit, and schedule the ad mats for the newspapers.

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

Bride for Sale

RKO Radio Comedy 87 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Delightfully amusing entertainment for average audience in this sophisticated comedy that includes a slapstick sequence and other laugh-provoking situations. Claudette Colbert is excellent in the title role.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should balance with fun and laughter a program weighted at the other end with drama. Has fine exploitation possibilities in the catchy title and the star-names. Exhibitors should do pretty well with it.

Cast: Claudette Colbert, Robert Young, George Brent, Max Baer, Gus Schilling, Charles Arnt, Mary Bear, Ann Tyrrell, Paul Maxey, Burk Symon. Credits: Directed by William D. Russell. Screenplay by Bruce Manning and Islin Auster. Story by Joseph Fields and Frederick Kohner. Photography, Joseph Valentine. Produced by Jack H. Skirball.

Plot: Complications arise when an ex-Wac takes a job with an accountant so that she can, in making out income tax returns, find herself a rich husband. Her boss, learning of her plans, arranges for a friend of his to teach her a lesson, but his plan backfires when she and the friend fall in love and the boss also finds himself in love with her.

Comment: Since comedy attracts a considerable number of customers who ordinarily are not interested in other types of entertainment, here is a film the exhibitor should welcome. It is a sophisticated comedy that has many amusing sequences, with some slapstick thrown in and ending on a hysterical note generated by the hilarious events that lead up to it. It is by no means a world-beater, but from an average audience standpoint it is delightfully amusing entertainment. Claudette Colbert is the star and her splendid flair for comedy, known to most, is again evidenced by her ability to look attractive and still be in there punching for laughs. George Brent is a capable foil and Robert Young contributes a swell job as the gentleman she has marked as her "husband-to-be." Additional laughs are contributed by Max Baer in the role of a pug and Gus Schilling as a member of the merchant marine. William Russell's direction succeeds admirably for comedy's sake and Jack H. Skirball's production values are of a high standard. "Bride for Sale" will balance, with fun and laughter, a program weighted at the other end with drama. Exhibitors should do pretty well with it.

A Kiss for Corliss

United Artists Comedy 88 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Clever comedy lines and several amusing situations in this further adventure of Corliss Archer (remember "Kiss and Tell"?) should keep audiences thoroughly entertained. A wholesome family comedy that will be welcomed by family moviegoers.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: No one is likely to claim it will break all box-office records, but on the strength of its star names, its relation to the earlier "Kiss and Tell," and the publicity it will get in connection with the "Meet Corliss Archer" radio show, it should do all right for itself.

Cast: Shirley Temple, David Niven, Tom Tully, Virginia Welles, Darryl Hickman, Robert Ellis, Richard Gaines, Kathryn Card, Gloria Holden, Roy Roberts. Credits: A James Nasser Production. Produced by Colin Miller. Associate Producer, Marcus Loew II. Directed by Richard Wallace. Story and screenplay by Howard Dimsdale, from characters created by F. Hugh Herbert. Photography, Robert de Grasse. Production manager, Lewis J. Rachmil. Musical direction, Rudolph Polk.

Plot: A teen-aged girl gets involved with an oft-divorced man who is seeking revenge on the girl's father, a lawyer. It looks like the girl is going to become Wife No. 4, but matters are ironed out before the fateful wedding march.

Comment: About four years ago Columbia released "Kiss and Tell," screen version of the F. Hugh Herbert Broadway stage success. That picture, and this new production, have a number of things in common. Shirley Temple, Darryl Hickman and Tom Tully, of the present film's cast, also appeared in the 1945 comedy-drama. Richard Wallace directed both pictures. And, oddly enough, both pictures are pegged at the same running time —88 minutes. But whereas "Kiss and Tell" had a heart-tugging quality along with its laugh-provoking situations, this new cinematic account of the adventures of Corliss Archer contrives complicated situations for laughing purposes only. Therefore, while it may lack some of the human warmth of its predecessor, it is otherwise a good match in clever comedy lines and several amusing situations that should keep audiences thoroughly entertained throughout its running time. Average moviegoers may get too many dramas, too many psychological stories, too many controversial films, or perhaps even too many musicals. But "A Kiss for Corliss" is that type of family comedy that is always welcomed by family audiences. What matter if they forget it quickly, so long as the pleasure is there during its unwinding? Shirley Temple is just as adolescently appealing as ever as the teen-aged Corliss, and Darryl Hickman is the prototype of the confused but ever faithful next-door boy-friend. In one of his rare comedy roles, David Niven is refreshing as a wolf, by reputation, but really the unhappy victim of three gold-digging marriages. As Corliss' father, Tom Tully occasionally goes overboard in his reactions to the supposed escapades of his daughter, but he gets the laughs, just the same. Gloria Holden, as the mother, Kathryn Card, Robert Ellis, Richard Gaines and others of the supporting cast are all satisfactory. Colin Miller's production values are good and the Wallace direction maintains a smooth pace.

Samson and Delilah

Paramount Biblical Drama 128 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Bids fair to stand as DeMille's most impressive and magnificent spectacle since his 1923 history-making religious epic, "The Ten Commandments." Patrons will flock to see it, be thrilled, engrossed and handsomely entertained by it, and renew their faith in the glories of motion picture entertainment. There are spectacular scenes of eye-filling beauty and pageantry in this Technicolor feast.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Has all the trappings of a record-breaking moneymaker. Exhibitors will see in it that longed-for opportunity to again put into motion the principles of old-fashioned showmanship that made this industry famous. There's money to be made in "Samson and Delilah"—lots of it.

Cast: Hedy Lamarr, Victor Mature, George Sanders, Angela Lansbury, Henry Wilcoxon, Olive Dearing, Fay Holden, Julia Faye, Rusty Tamblyn, William Farnum, Lane Chandler, Moroni Olsen, Francis J. MacDonald, William Davis, John Miljan, Arthur Q. Bryan, Laura Elliot, Victor Varconi, John Parrish, Frank Wilcox, Russell Hicks, Boyd Davis, Fritz Leiber, Mike Mazurki, Davison Clark, George Reeves, Pedro de Cordoba, Frank Reicher, Colin Tapley and others. Credits: Produced and directed by Cecil B. DeMille. Screenplay by Jesse L. Lasky, Jr. and Frederic M. Frank from original treatments by Harold Lamb and Vladimir Jabotinsky. Based upon the history of Samson and Delilah in the Holy Bible, Judges 13-16. Photography, George Barnes. Special photographic effects, Gordon Jennings. Directors, Paul Lerpae and Devereaux Jennings. Process photography, Farciot Edouart and Wallace Kelley. Holy Land photography, Dewey Wrigley. Art direction, Hans Dreier and Walter Tyler. Technicolor color director, Natalie Kalmus; associate, Robert Brower. Research, Henry Noordlinger and Gladys Percey. Music by Victor Young. Choreography, Theodore Kosloff.

Plot: The only hope of the enslaved Danites against the Philistines is Samson (Victor Mature), a giant youth with remarkable strength. When he is tricked at the wedding feast for the Philistine girl of his choice (Angela Lansbury), Samson destroys the home in a fit of rage, with the girl, Semadar, mortally wounded. Her younger sister, Delilah, vows vengeance and promises the Philistine Saran (George Sanders) to bring Samson back from his hideout in the hills. She pursues him, finds him and wins his love. But this love turns to hate when his childhood sweetheart appears. Learning the secret of Samson's strength, Delilah dopes him, cuts off his hair and delivers him into the hands of the Philistines. But when Delilah finds him chained to the grist mill, his eyes burned out, she is remorseful and seeks to release him. Next day, when the Philistines bring Samson to the temple to make sport of him, she pretends to harass him, meanwhile professing her love and following his bidding: to lead him to the two columns supporting the house of the temple on which the great idol stands. Under his strength, the columns crash and the temple topples in ruin, killing Samson, Delilah and his enemies.

Comment: A little more than 25 years ago Producer-Director Cecil B. DeMille turned deaf ears to associates' protests that religious pictures were commercial suicide and made a picture called "The Ten Commandments."

That picture held the record as the biggest Paramount money-maker of all time until "Reap the Wild Wind" (1941), which in turn yielded to "Going My Way" (not a DeMille film, however) in 1944. Now, it would seem reasonably sure, further yielding is in order. For the latest from the master film-maker has all the trappings of a record-breaking money-maker. Since the memorable "Ten Commandments," DeMille has been responsible for a number of other successful films of a religious or ancient history nature, among them "The King of Kings" (1926), "The Sign of the Cross" (1932), "Cleopatra" (1934) and "The Crusades" (1935). But the present "Samson and Delilah" bids fair to stand as this veteran showman's most impressive and magnificent spectacle since that history-making 1923 religious epic. Although based on different Biblical episodes, "The Ten Commandments" and "Samson and Delilah" are of much the same inspiring grand-scale genre: the Israelites under Egyptian bondage saved from their oppressors by Moses in the unforgettable parting-of-the-Red Sea spectacle, on the one hand, and the rescue of the Danites from Philistine bondage as Samson brings down the temple on his enemies, on the other. While the temple-destruction climax may not equal the impact of the Red Sea episode, it nevertheless is tremendously thrilling and spectacular in the DeMille tradition and will be much-talked-about by present-generation moviegoers. But in addition to spectacle there are scenes of eye-filling beauty and pageantry in this Technicolor feast. And there are moments of violent hate and tender love in the absorbing and moving love story of Samson and Delilah—perhaps the most celebrated in religious history. For this famous couple, Victor Mature and Hedy Lamarr are ideal choices. Samson is the epitome of powerful, sinewy strength, and Mature symbolizes those physical attributes, besides essaying a performance of genuine depth and sincerity. Miss Lamarr is just about everyone's conception of the fair-skinned, dark-haired, beauteous Delilah, a role tailor-made for her, and her best acting chore to date. Other outstanding portrayals are contributed by George Sanders as the Saran of Gaza and Henry Wilcoxon as Ahtur, with Angela Lansbury, Olive Dearing, Julia Faye, William Farnum and others contributing splendid support. "Samson and Delilah" is a grand-scale Biblical epic that should do much to revitalize the industry and swell the army of moviegoers by bringing back some of the wanderers. It comes at a propitious time. Patrons will flock to see it, be thrilled, engrossed and handsomely entertained by it, and renew their faith in the glories of motion picture entertainment. Exhibitors will see in it that longed-for opportunity to again put into motion the principles of old-fashioned showmanship that made this industry famous. Paramount has already started the ball rolling with Henry Wilcoxon's nationwide tour in which he lectures to civic, educational, fraternal and religious groups. There will be more to come in the company's advance campaign plans. Showmen should follow up with their most thorough and elaborate exploitation campaigns. There's money to be made in "Samson and Delilah"—lots of it.

Beyond the Forest

Warner Bros. Drama 96 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Bette Davis returns to the heavy dramatic role that made her famous. Consequently, this picture should be enjoyed by her many fans, although others may find it somewhat unpleasant, since she is the dominant figure.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A typical Bette Davis dramatic vehicle that should do well at the box-office wherever her name has a draw.

Cast: Bette Davis, Joseph Cotten, David Brian, Ruth Roman, Minor Watson, Dona Drake, Regis Toomey, Sara Selby, Mary Servoss, Frances Charles. Credits: Directed by King Vidor. From the novel by Stuart Engstrand. Screenplay by Lenore Coffee. Photography, Robert Burks. Music by Max Steiner. Produced by Henry Blanke.

Plot: An unscrupulous, scheming woman married to a small-town doctor has an affair with a rich man and then decides to make him marry her and get her out of a town that is driving her mad. She goes to great lengths to accomplish this, but ends up by paying with her life for her misdeeds.

Comment: In this film, apparently the last under her Warner Bros. contract, Bette Davis returns to the type of role that made her famous: a heavy dramatic characterization that gives her an opportunity to present her extradordinary histrionic talents . . . something like the "Jezebel" portrayal for which she won an Academy Award. The story has been tailored to her special talents and she is the dominant figure in it, which means that unless one is a true Bette Davis fan, he may find it somewhat unpleasant. Besides returning to serious drama, Miss Davis has also changed her physical appearance by the addition of a shoulder-length black wig. This has an immediate psychological effect on the audience, for as soon as she makes her appearance one realizes he is about to see the strange doings of an unscrupulous woman. Co-starred is Joseph Cotten, who turns in a sincere, understanding portrayal of the small town doctor to whom she is married, and David Brian is effective as the rich, unscrupulous man from Chicago whom she has marked for her own, and for whose love she commits murder. Minor Watson and Ruth Roman, though they have little to do, are splendid in their individual parts, and Dona Drake, playing Miss Davis' Indian servant, makes such an impression that one remembers her, above all, for the outstanding job she did. Direction by King Vidor pulls no punches, making the Davis character true-to-form and the small-town folk typical. Henry Blanke's production values are in keeping with the requirements of the story, and Max Steiner's musical score points up the dramatic effects. This picture's strongest appeal will be for the women.

That Forsyte Woman

MGM Drama 114 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Excellent entertainment that is more for the mature, thinking adult than for the masses, but its dramatic love story can scarcely be resisted by most women. Topgrade production, direcion and performances. Technicolor brings vividly to life the atmosphere of 1880 London society.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Except in the smaller towns and some neighborhoods, it should motivate considerable box-office activity—first, because of its star and literary values, and second, because of its love story most women will talk about.

Cast: Errol Flynn, Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon, Robert Young, Janet Leigh, Harry Davenport, Aubrey Mather, Gerald Oliver Smith. Credits: Produced by Leon Gordon. Directed by Compton Bennett. Based on Book I of "The Forsyte Saga" by John Galsworthy. Screenplay by Jan Lustig, Ivan Tors and James B. Williams. Photography, Joseph Ruttenberg. Technicolor consultants, Henri Jaffa and James Gooch. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons and Daniel B. Cathcart. Musical score, Bronislau Kaper.

Plot: Set in London in the 1880s, this is the saga of the Forsytes. Soames (Errol Flynn) marries Irene (Greer Garson), who does not love him. She meets family outcast Jolyon (Walter Pidgeon) and becomes friendly with his daughter June. When June

Alexis Smith has been borrowed from Warners to co-star with Scott Brady and Mona Freedman in Universal-International's "Shoplifter." She will play a "sophisticated" heavy. Picture rolls the latter part of this month with Leonard Goldstein producing and Charles Lamont directing.

Stanley Kramer has hand-picked Everett Sloane, Richard Erdman and Jack Webb for three important supporting roles in "The Men," which will star Marlon Brando and Teresa Wright, under the direction of Fred Zinnemann. All three have just recently completed top assignments in other notable productions.

Producer Alex Gottlieb is launching a search for four talented girls, with no previous screen experience, for the top feminine leads in his forthcoming musical for RKO, "Two Tickets to Broadway." They must possess singing or dancing, as well as acting ability . . . and naturally, beauty.

Universal-International will star Shelley Winters in a Technicolor western, "Frenchie," to be produced by Michel Kraike, with Oscar Brodney during the screenplay. Production will start as soon as Miss Shelley finishes her current loanout stint at Paramount.

"Madam Sheriff," an original story about a woman peace officer, has been acquired by Lippert Productions and scheduled for filming after the first of the year. Picture is slated for top budget treatment.

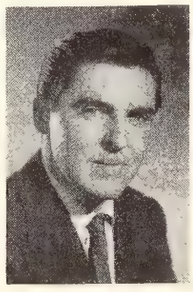
Samuel Goldwyn has started preparations for the last of his four pictures for this year, "The Edge of Doom." To be piloted by Mark Robson, it will star Dana Andrews, Farley Granger and Joan Evans.



Scully Urges More Action, Less Dialog

Peter Scully, one of Hollywood's youngest producers, thinks it's about time the industry began making movies with more motion and less talking.

"In its infancy," the 29-year-old producer said, "the motion picture's overwhelming attraction as an amusement medium was based on action. When the industry, as a whole, returns to that formula, then box-office receipts are bound to show a marked increase."

Scully, President of Mayfair Pictures, Inc., producers of the "Henry" series for Monogram, has two of these comedies now in release, "Henry, the Rainmaker" and "Leave It to Henry." The next in the series, "Henry Does It Again," is scheduled to go before the cameras in November with Raymond Walburn again in the title role.

According to Scully, even in these family comedies he proves his point by stressing fast-paced situation sequences rather than dialog.

Peter Scully

"In our pictures," said the son of John J. Scully, eastern sales manager for Universal-International, "we depend on action. We don't want to hit audiences over the head with too much dialog, music, or special effects. It is our contention that the greater segment of motion picture audiences want action in their entertainment, and we shall continue to try to give them what they want to see."

The young producer, who with Bill Castle, just recently formed an independent company called Motion Pictures, Inc., has scheduled as his first production for the new company, "It's a Small World." "In this picture," he says, "we plan so much action that I am sure that the cameras will work even harder than the actors."

Paramount Sets 12 Films for Early 1950

Twelve top-budget pictures will go into production at Paramount during the first five months of 1950, it was announced last week by Henry Ginsberg, studio head. Three of the films have definite January starting dates, with the remainder being scheduled over the following four months.

The January starters are William Wyler's "Carrie Ames," "Eagles of the Navy," to be produced by Robert Fellows, and Hal Wallis' "My Friend Irma Goes West."

The other nine pictures which will go into production in February, March, April and May are "Dear Mom," with Joseph Sistrom producing; "It Won't Last Long," Charles Brackett production; "Jack of Diamonds," with Sistrom producing; "Big Guy," Robert Welch producing; "The Mabel Normand Story"; Leo McCarey's "Born in a Trunk"; "Mr. and Miss Anonymous," produced and directed by George Stevens; "Roman Holiday," produced and directed by Frank Capra, and "Union Station," which Jules Schermer will produce.

Dempsey-Popkin-Stiefel Plan One Film a Year

A life of Jack Dempsey will be the next film of the Dempsey-Harry Popkin-Sam Stiefel producing team, if present plans work out, and the partners will continue to aim at one picture a year for United Artists release, they announced at a luncheon for the trade press in New York this week.

"The Big Wheel," their first production, is tentatively set to premiere Nov. 10 at Indianapolis. Made for around $900,000, it stars Mickey Rooney and Thomas Mitchell in a story of auto racing that reaches its climax on the famous Indianapolis Speedway. While the producers like sports yarns, they may also consider the juvenile delinquency theme.

Warn Named Westrex Coast Engineer Chief

R. E. Warn, who has been chief of engineering of Westrex Corporation since 1948, has been appointed manager of the firm's Hollywood Division which recently took over the motion picture activities of the ERP Division of Western Electric. Warn has been associated with the motion picture industry since 1928, when he joined ERPI.

Also transferred to Hollywood from the Westrex New York engineering group was Perry Shean.

Opportunities for Young Directors at MGM

With the assignment of Gerald Mayer to direct "Standoff," to be produced by Richard Goldstone, MGM will shortly launch a program to give opportunities to new, young directors, according to Dore Schary, vice-president in charge of production.

Mayer's direction of production tests and short subjects during the past two years, which were important stepping-stones for young directors in the past, led to his elevation to the new post, Schary said.

Studio Roundup

Among the nine new pictures starting this week are two comedies, Columbia's "Kill the Umpire," and 20th Century-Fox's "Cheaper by the Dozen." "Kill the Umpire' 'is the new William Bendix starrer that has beauteous Gloria Henry in the feminine lead. "Cheaper by the Dozen" stars Jeanne Crain, with Clifton Webb and Myrna Loy playing the parents of twelve children. Walter Lang directs.

"Mr. Music," latest Bing Crosby vehicle at Paramount, features Dorothy Kirsten, hailed as one of the most beautiful members of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Miss Kirsten is the second "Met" feminine star to appear with Bing. Rise Stevens was the other in "Going My Way."

"King Solomon's Mines" rolled at Nairobi, Africa when Director Compton Bennett, Cameraman Robert Surtees and a staff of six assistants reached Nairobi after a safari in search of shooting sites. Stars Deborah Kerr, Stewart Granger, and Richard Carlson arrived by plane from England.

Technical Adviser

Nipo Strongheart, Yakima Indian scholar and collector, signed as technical advisor on Monogram's "Young Daniel Boone." In this drama, in Cinecolor, Strongheart also plays the role of the famous Indian chief, Walking Eagle. Reginald LeBorg directs for Producer James S. Burkett.

"Outrage," modern-day mob violence drama starring Gail Russell and Macdonald Carey was started for Paramount by the "Dollar" Bills . . . Pine and Thomas.

Underwater scenes for "Captive Girl," Sam Katzman's production for Columbia, has Johnny Weissmuller doing his stunts at the Columbia Ranch pool. Anita Lhoest lends African sarong interest.

Jeffrey Bernerd's Cinecolor "Blue Grass of Kentucky" for Monogram is shooting in two units. Race sequences are being lensed at Northridge farms, while Director William Beaudine puts stars Bill Williams and Jane Nigh through interior scenes at the studio.

Crawford's Model Pal

Jaequeline DeWitt checked-in this week to start her role as Joan Crawford's model pal in Warners' "The Victim." Added to the cast were Ralph Sandford and David Leonard with Vincent Sherman directing for Producer Jerry Wald.

At Lippert Productions they finished a picture that combines a group of feature variety acts. Film was handled by June Carr and Paul Schreibman, with Paul Landres directing. Acting as master of ceremonies and starring in the feature is Robert Alda, with the Hoosier Hotshots, Glenn Vernon and Eddie Ryan, Shawn & Lee, the DePina Troupe of acrobats and numerous others doing a stint.

Two in Preparation

Aubrey Schenck, now a Universal-International producer, has two pictures in preparation. One of them is an unpublished novel by Stephen Longstreet, while the other is "Undercover Girl," by Francis Rosenwald.

Ames a 'Heavy'

Leon Ames, veteran MGM character actor, has been set to play a "heavy" role in "Mystery Street," which starts next month. Ricardo Montalban and Marshall Thompson are starred.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Films Aided by FFC Need Not Qualify for British Quota, Says Lawrie; Exhibitors Ask Entertainment Tax Reductions

By JOCK MacGREGOR

J. H. Lawrie of the Government-sponsored Film Finance Corporation sprung several surprises at his press conference. He stated that employment within British studios was not one of their main objects and the pictures, aided by them, did not necessarily have to qualify for British quota.

Jock MacGregor

These revelations came as a result of questions pertaining to the financing of films for American television and the number of pictures which are being made partly or entirely abroad. He suggested that if the producers did not use the frozen currency, they would probably not make the pictures anyway. I did not follow this argument, for several of the companies which are filming overseas would appear to have had no opportunity of accruing such balances.

Such producers, he fears, may not be able to fulfill the requirements of the quota act through devaluation and the like.

Contrary to general belief, FFC has not been created to find work for the idle technicians and studios but to help the independent producers, and apparently it matters little where they operate. It seems strange reasoning.

Some twenty-six loans have been made to sponsor 44-odd pictures. The bulk appears to have been made to the Korda British Lion group. Most of the other pictures come under the supporting program category.

Mr. Lawrie was evasive over details of the loans, but admitted he was keeping a strict eye on all companies receiving aid, deleting items of unnecessary expense and reading scripts. This substantiates the growing criticism of some producers who allege FFC officials have not the knowledge of box-office requirements to pass such judgment.

The fact that FFC does not insist on the pictures it aids qualifying for British quota is, I think, significant. It suggests the 40 per cent set for this year will definitely be lowered.

During the next few months the entertainment tax campaign should occupy the trade's major attention. Exhibitors are working for the elimination of all tax on seats below sevenpence and a reduction of one penny on all others below three shillings. This would cost the Exchequer approximately six-million pounds, my mathematical friends tell me.

Bearing in mind that the legitimate theatre already gets a reduction and non-profit making plays of a cultural type get exemption, the producers wanted a reduction when British pictures were played. They now realize this would be discriminatory and have withdrawn it in favor of a straight state subsidiary for production. Incidentally, "A Street Car Named Desire" is the latest play to be presented in London to be exempted on cultural grounds.

To clear the congestion of top-line product at the Empire and prepare for the introduction of longer seasons of films backed with stage presentations at Christmas, Sam Eckman, Jr. has reluctantly been forced to curtail the runs of current offerings. "Madame Bovary" has made way for "In the Good Old Summertime" after only seven days.

J. Arthur Rank is trying an experiment at the 1,200-seat New Gallery by showing the GB instructional film "Atomic Physics" as a top feature. This is an excellent classroom film. Speaking personally, I found it extremely interesting, but some of it was over my head. The results will be watched by the trade.

Recently I was pulling Jimmy Hanley's leg to the effect that Sonia O'Shea, the rising young Irish actress, was Gene Tierney. Though many have made the mistake, he didn't. Now the laugh is on me. At the Variety Clubs Midnight Matinee, the photographers were also misled and an agency sent the picture direct to STR in New York. This was used, and is Jimmy laughing!

CMA Publicity Chief Charles Young is having a high time making London conscious of his namesake "Mighty Joe Young" and has had the first neon sign of its type erected in Piccadilly Circus for ten years. It features the ape.

It has been musical chairs in publicity circles. Stephen Miller and Paul Mills have left Rank for MGM British, Anthony Downing for destinations unrevealed and Morys Bruce for the BBC. Beryl Bamber will be leaving for India shortly. Betty Callaghan, back from Australia, landed a job immediately with Harry Reynolds. John Montgomery is leaving the Butchers Nettlefold group. Jimmy Hutchison after his long illness is working with Sidney Bernstein. John Ware has gone to Coronado.

* * *

Took Phil Gersdorf, RKO publicist who is over here looking after the American end on Walt Disney's "Treasure Island," to Ascot to see an English race meeting on Saturday, and we really discovered where the trade vanishes to on weekends. Most fascinating sight were the producers trying to impersonate horses in the paddock and find backers. I shall long remember the look of bewilderment of one as he watched the totals go up on the tote. He just didn't seem to understand how even the outsiders got the money and he didn't.

Monogram Lists Five Films Through November

Five pictures on Monogram's production schedule through November include "Young Daniel Boone," which started last week; "Joe Palooka in Honeymoon for Five," Oct. 27; "Killer Shark," Nov. 7; "Fence Riders," Nov. 14; "The Bowery Boys on a Double Date," sometime during the last of the month.

Location Scenes Made For 'Asphalt Jungle'

Headed by Director John Huston and stars Stirling Hayden and Joan Hagen, an MGM company was in Lexington, Ky., and Cincinnati, O. recently, filming pre-production scenes for "The Asphalt Jungle." Actual production will get underway at the Culver City studios on Oct. 24.

BOX-OFFICE SLANTS

reveals her love for Philip Bosinney (Robert Young), Irene seeks the family's approval. Philip, however, has only contempt for the family and becomes infatuated with Irene. In a quarrel between Philip and Soames, Philip leaves in haste and is killed in a street accident. Five years later, Irene is happily married to Jolyon.

Comment: Topgrade in all departments—production, direction and performances, "That Forsyte Woman" is excellent adult entertainment. Based on Book I of "The Forsyte Saga" by John Galsworthy, this picture is apparently more concerned with the love story involving Irene, Soames Forsyte and Philip Bosinney than with the family chronicle that must have occupied the Galsworthy volumes. For this reason, it is certain to win the admiration of women, for it concerns the conflict of a woman who, married to a man she does not love, fights desperately but unsuccessfully to keep from falling in love with a young achitect who is engaged to the daughter of her husband's brother. As "that Forsyte woman," Greer Garson gives a restrained and impressive performance; she is lovely to look at and has a genuine warmth that will win audience sympathy. In a role quite foreign to his usual dashing cavalier or frontier cowboy, Errol Flynn scores as the arrogant, selfish Soames Forsyte who would not stop until he got what he wanted, whether it was a beautiful woman who did not love him, or a priceless painting or bauble. Because the character he portrays is so different from his others, Flynn stands out, although the other performances, including the smooth and competent acting chores of Robert Young, as the impulsive young architect, and Walter Pidgeon, as the outcast member of the Forsyte family, are not without merit. Indeed, it is the splendid work of all the principals, plus the fine direction of Compton Bennett and the impeccable production of Leon Gordon, that make "That Forsyte Woman" the beautifully done job that it is. The atmosphere of 1880 London society has been convincingly captured, with Technicolor bringing it even more vividly to life. The picture is more for the mature, thinking adult than for the masses, but its love story can scarcely be resisted by most women. Except in the smaller towns and some neighborhoods, it should motivate considerable box-office activity—first, because of its star and literary values, and second, because of its love story most women will talk about.

The Reckless Moment

Columbia Drama 82 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) General audiences should find the skillful pacing of this tersely directed picture sufficiently compelling to hold attention throughout. Discriminating patrons may be made uneasy by a lack of validity in the original story premise, but in spite of this it should prove enjoyable entertainment.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The James Mason and Joan Bennett names have definite marquee value. This is in no sense a great picture, but is good solid entertainment. Properly exploited, it should hold its own in any situation.

Cast: James Mason, Joan Bennett, Geraldine Brooks, Henry O'Neill, Shepperd Strudwick, David Bair, Roy Roberts, Frances Williams. Credits: Producer, Walter Wanger. Director, Max Opuls. Screenplay, Henry Garson and Robert W. Soderberg. Screen adaptation, Mel Dinelli and Robert E. Kent.

Plot: A mother objects to the attention paid her 17-year-old daughter by an older man. When the man later accidentally falls to his death, under circumstances involving the girl, the mother is blackmailed with letters written to him by the daughter. The blackmailer relents and sacrifices his life to save the girl from being implicated.

Comment: This picture should hold absorbed attention throughout its showing, in spite of a basic falsity in the story premise that discriminating patrons may find disturbing. When questionable character Shepperd Strudwick accidentally falls to his death, Joan Bennett moves the body to prevent the possibility of her daughter being involved. The circumstances hardly seem strong enough to motivate Miss Bennett, a law-respecting Balboa housewife, to conceal the facts. However, the skillful pacing, well-sustained suspense, and able performances by the entire cast should outweigh this story weakness and tip the scales in favor of better-than-average entertainment. James Mason's characterization of the blackmailer, who is softened by Miss Bennett's loyalty to her family, is consistently powerful. The progress of his regeneration from blackmailer to a man who sacrifices his life to save the daughter from involvement in Strudwick's death is well handled and valid. Miss Bennett does her usual competent job. Her part as the mother seems a little cool but this is in keeping with Max Opul's terse, sharp direction characteristic of the picture. Geraldine Brooks as the daughter is good. Henry O'Neill, Shepperd Strudwick, David Bair, Roy Roberts, and Frances Williams give the principals satisfying support. The low-key photography is excellently suited to the suspense.

Give Us This Day

(Reviewed in London)

Univ.-Int'l Drama 120 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) This fine picturization of Pietro Di Donato's "Christ in Concrete" is a connoisseur's piece with undeniable popular appeal and a strong woman's angle.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With New York as its locale, this British offering is an art house "must." Its powerful human story and woman's angle also commend it to wider exhibition.

Cast: Sam Wanamaker, Lea Padovani, Kathleen Ryan, Bonar Colleano, Charles Goldner, Bill Sylvester, Nino Pastellides, Philo Hauser, Sidney James, Karel Stepanek and others. Credits: Adapted from Pietro Di Donato's novel by Ben Harzman. Music composed and conducted by Benjamin Frankel. Directed by Edward Dmytryk. Produced by Rod E. Geiger and N. A. Bronsten.

Plot: In the early 1920s, Lea Padovani goes to New York to marry Sam Wanamaker, a bricklayer, in the belief that he owns a house. After a three-day honeymoon, she learns they must move to tenement rooms and they set about saving the $500 for the deposit. There begins the endless struggle for existence. Children come, expenses increase and Wanamakr is constantly unemployed. He accepts work as a foreman on a building project only because he is desperate, for he knows the contractor is economizing on safety measures. As he fears, the structure crashes and he is buried in falling concrete. Lea receives $1000 compensation for his death and is able to buy the house she craved.

Comment: Here is an outstanding connoisseur's picture which can well meet with popular success due to its unquestioned woman's angle. Sensitively directed, finely acted and telling a very human drama of a man's principles and a woman's enduring wish for a home of her own, this will be one of the most discussed films of the year by highbrow and average film fan alike. The setting is New York between the wars and the characters are mainly of Italian extraction, so there should be little embarrassment over the accent problems. Sam Wanamaker appears with distinction as the conscientious bricklayer and Lea Padovani reveals an enchanting personality as his adoring wife. Other parts are admirably cast and played. Director Edward Dymtryk has long wanted to film Pietro Di Donato's "Christ in Concrete" and has given the production excellent treatment.

My Foolish Heart

RKO Radio Drama 90 mins.

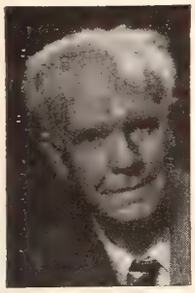
AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A woman's story, appealing alike to the feminine heart and the feminine tear ducts. Women will flock to it and take their menfolk along, and the compelling human interest of the love story will hold male interest captive.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should keep the cash rolling steadily into any box-office. Exhibitors have the Goldwyn reputation and "touch," a woman's love story, good marquee names, direction and photography to help attract patronage.

Cast: Dana Andrews, Susan Hayward, Kent Smith, Lois Wheeler, Jessie Royce Landis, Robert Keith, Gigi Perreau, Karin Booth, Tod Karns, Philip Pine, Martha Mears, Edna Holland, Jerry Paris, Marietta Canty, Barbara Woodell, Regina Wallace. Credits: Produced by Samuel Goldwyn. Directed by Mark Robson. Screenplay by Julius and Philip Epstein based on a New Yorker story by J. D. Salinger. Photography, Lee Garmes. Song, My Foolish Heart, music by Victor Young. Lyrics by Ned Washington. Musical direction, Emil Newman.



Plot: Kent Smith, after some years of marriage with Susan Hayward, who has never loved him, asks for a divorce and the custody of their daughter, Ramona. He intends to marry Susan's old friend, Lois Wheeler, who has been in love with him for years. Susan is on the point of telling Smith Ramona is not his daughter but Lois asks her to reflect. Susan thinks back over her happy but tragic love affair with Dana Andrews which is told in a flashback. She falls deeply in love with him but he is not serious about her, until in the army and about to be sent abroad, he writes Susan to join him at the training field and marry him. He is killed in an airplane accident, and Susan, that her expected child may have a father, wins Smith away from Lois. Then, back to the opening scene: Susan tells Smith he may keep Ramona; she knows he and Lois will give her a good home. Lois and Smith witness Susan's affecting farewell to Ramona, tell her she may keep the child and the house, and leaves her.

Comment: This is a woman's story, appeal-

Guide to Modern Methods in the Administrative and Executive Phases of Theatre Operation

Show Sense

Problems of Vaudeville Presentation

Well, here comes vaudeville! Just around the corner the drums are rumblin', bass blaring, trombones tootin' and trumpets blastin'. If you listen close you can hear the patter of the dancing feet of the girls and the laughter provoked by the funny men. They tell me the customers have demanded that vaudeville be added to film fare. I ain't heard 'em but maybe it's so. In any event, they're going to get vaudeville in all the larger cities. But how are they going to get it?

I didn't go extra deep into the matter but I did go far enough to be pretty thoroughly convinced that, even if the patrons are demanding a return to "flesh" shows, there are mighty few theatres in position to properly present such an adjunct to their celluloid entertainment. And, there are still fewer managers or executives possessing the "know how" and "what it takes" to ripple the risables of a live talent entertainment fan or even supply the performers with the essential accessories to "give with their best."

For almost twenty years vaudeville has been reported as dead, and during the passing of two decades most of the theatremen familiar with the needs of the actors, the routining of shows, the essentials of stage equipment and so on through a maze of "musts," took the vaudeville obituaries at face value and, after rendering proper condolences to disconsolate members of the tribe, entered other fields of endeavor. As this is written there remain, among the ranks of theatre executives and managers, mighty few of men with knowledge as to the timing, placement, lighting, accompaniment, accessories, equipment, etc. necessary to properly present a vaudeville show.

The experience of most of the men who are handling the houses where the revived corpse of vaudeville is scheduled to start kicking up its heels has been confined to handling the personal appearance of visiting screen celebrities, etc. A few have conducted "tab" shows and still fewer have been in charge of the business end—but not the presentation—of visiting roadshow stage attractions. There's a gap as wide as the Pacific existing between the knowledge required to adequately handle any or all of the above limited duties and the myriad details connected with the overall presentation of a vaudeville show.

A Dearth of 'Know How' About Handling of Vaudeville

Not only among the managers but among the various stage hand locals of the I.A.T.S.E. there exists a dearth of "know how" about the handling of vaudeville. Many locals are digging up currently inactive members—those who actually handled the ropes, cues, lights, scenery, etc. during the old two- and three-a-day periods—to give the current membership of curtain pullers and light-switch handlers a condensation of knowledge about what will be expected of them.

The stages, at least most of them that I've looked at, are ill-equipped—or not equipped at all—for the presentation of vaudeville. Let me give you an idea:

Street drops, the standby for emergency in vaudeville presentations, are only dim and vague memories. They just don't exist any more.

The emergency front screen—used to present early reels of the film program while sets were being broke on closing nights and to eliminate delay while clearing the stage and resetting horns on other nights—are no longer on the list of house equipment.

Dressing rooms, locked these many years—and where not locked used as storage for rubbish heaps—have fallen to disgraceful decay. There are no mirrors, no make-up lights, no call buzzers, no chairs. The plumbing has been so long neglected that a major job is faced if it is to be put in order. Even the windows fall into the "project" category if they are ever again to serve their intended purpose.

Once Popular Tower-on-Track Equipment Difficult to Locate

In many houses fixed screens and sound equipment present quite an obstacle. The once popular tower-on-track equipment is as difficult to locate as a salt grain in a sugar barrel. Some of the today's horns are either hung from battings—which will interfere with the hanging of needed scenery in the location occupied—or are housed in heavy wooden towers, some with casters and others without, whose movement will require four good husky Union stagehands. The screens can, in many cases, be flown to stage loft position but there are many houses where construction does not permit this practice. Resetting these screens at back wall positions is a job demanding adjustments in projection, etc.

The old-time Green Room—that gathering place provided by most theatres playing vaudeville where the performers got together for card games and chinning bees—which made the actor's life more pleasant, is crammed to the ceiling, in most houses, with discarded drapes, broken popcorn machines, wrecked seats, etc.

In many places the asbestos curtain—and most cities have ordinances requiring that it be raised and lowered at the start and close of every performance—has not been touched for so many years that movement will be difficult and fraught with danger of cable breakage, if not totally impossible.

To this must be added the condition of stage lighting—foots, overheads, olivettes, etc.—switch boards, wiring, etc. These have also been neglected for years and will be badly needed if acts and actors are to be seen to best advantage.

Most stages today have a minimum of scenic equipment consisting principally of a front curtain, a traveler in front of the picture screen and a couple of legs and borders. This is barely sufficient for personal appearance work and not at all adequate for the presentation of even the tiniest kind of a vaudeville show.

There seem to be entirely too many of the uninitiated who feel that vaudeville ranks in the same category as the adding of another short reel to the program and view its addition as requiring no special skill of any kind and still less in the way of special equipment. Most of them evidence an attitude of total disregard for the advice of old-timers who have actually worked and handled vaudeville. And many openly declare all suggestions regarding stage and scenery improvements or additions as being "old fashioned." They say: "This is a new kind of vaudeville and the actors don't need all those things." How, will someone please tell me, do they know anything about the new, and especially how it compares to the old when they never had experience with either?

These uninitiated know-it-alls are in for a sudden and severe awakening. But whether it happens in time to be of any service to the highly desired ends of giving vaudeville and the performers that make up the show a fair break, and the expectedly enlarged audiences the best possible show, will depend entirely on how quickly the executives booking the acts and buying the shows become aware of the inefficiency of the men charged with its presentation.

Vaudeville is, and must be viewed, as a special department of show business demanding the

All kids under 12, accompanied by a parent or an adult relative, will be admitted free of charge in St. Louis and St. Louis county on Halloween—Oct. 31—Louis K. Ansell declared this week on behalf of exhibitors operating some 110 theatres in the city and county.

Ansell said that exhibitors of St. Louis had agreed to make children the "guests of the house" as the most effective way of cooperating with Mayor Joseph M. Darst's city-wide program to keep teenagers off the streets and out of the usual Halloween mischief making and property destruction. The movement not only embraces all neighborhood houses but the large first-run operations downtown.

ing to the sympathy of the feminine heart and to feminine tear ducts. Women will flock to it and take their menfolk along, and their interest, in turn, will be held captive. Picture has been produced with all of Sam Goldwyn's attention to detail and with Director Mark Robson's flair for taking time to make all the effects he strives for perfectly plain. This slows up the action somewhat, but this is the sort of story where a fast pace is not needed. Lee Garmes' camerawork is a standout. The love story, happy and carefree at first, but in the end tragic, is one of genuine human appeal, with wholesome sentiment and good humor in its beginning. Dana Andrews is capital as a carefree young man taking love where he finds it without much thought for the girls who share it with him. He makes the transition into a man seriously in love with one girl very convincing, but without losing his gaiety. Susan Hayward as the girl who "loves not wisely but too well" gives one of her best performances and will doubtless cause a cataract of tears to flow. Kent Smith as the husband and Lois Wheeler as the girl long in love with him play their parts with discretion and get their meed of audience sympathy. Robert Keith as Susan's understanding, good humored father brings freshness and zest to his role, and Jessie Royce Landis as his tearful wife gives the part a needed comic touch. "My Foolish Heart" is, of its sort, capital Goldwyn entertainment with the traditional Goldwyn human interest "touch" and will doubtless hold audience interest throughout long runs in the bigger cities. It is a picture that should keep the cash rolling steadily into any box-office. Besides a "woman's love story" to play up in his exploitation, the exhibitor has the Goldwyn reputation for artistic and very human screen story, some good marquee names, fine direction and photography to help him attract patronage.

A Dangerous Profession

RKO Radio Mystery 78 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A typical George Raft murder-mystery. Good performances and fine, suspenseful direction give it extra appeal.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do about the same business as previous Raft films. It has the added exploitation worth of the Pat O'Brien name and the catchy title.

Cast: George Raft, Ella Raines, Pat O'Brien, Bill Williams, Jim Backus, Roland Winters, Betty Underwood, Robert Gist, David Wolfe. Credits: Directed by Ted Tetzlaff. Written by Martin Rackin and Warren Duff. Photography, Robert de Grasse. Produced by Robert Sparks. Executive Producer, Sid Rogell.

Plot: An ex-cop, now in the Bail Bond business, falls for the wife of a man jailed for robbery and murder. He posts the bond for the man's release, only to discover him murdered shortly after. He gets into plenty of hot water before he finally nabs the rest of the gang, wins the girl and gets back the pledged money.

Comment: A typical George Raft vehicle with intrigue, murder and suspense the basis of a story about the terrific business done by the bail bond companies who post bonds for criminals, and innocents as well, in order to keep them out of jail until proven guilty. Story holds interest and mystery, plus an entangling romance that causes lots of excitement. All the usual ingredients the Raft followers look for, have been incorporated into the plot, and this should make the film a satisfactory offering where he is liked. Raft gives his role a certain tough realism while Pat O'Brien, as his business partner, turns in his usual smooth job. Ella Raines, Jim Backus, Bill Williams and Roland Winters are more than capable in their important assignments. Ted Tatlaff's direction adds some interesting touches to this suspenseful film. Combination of the Raft and O'Brien names for the marquee, and a catchy title, should help sell this at the box-office.

Zamba

Eagle Lion Jungle Adventure 70 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This picture has enough thrills and chills and adventurous excitement to please those moviegoers who enjoy this type of fare.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do well in the grind runs and neighborhood houses.

Cast: June Vincent, Jane Nigh, Jon Hall, Beau Bridges, George Cooper, George O'Hanlon, Harry Lauter, Darby Jones, Theron Jackson, Pierre Watkin, Alphonse Martel, Ray Corrigan. Credits: Directed by William Berke. Screenplay by Barbara Worth. From the original story by Maurice H. Conn, "The Girl and the Gorilla." Photography, James S. Brown. Special effects, Ray Mercer. Associate Producer, Harry Hendel. Produced by Maurice M. Conn. A Bert M. Stearn production.

Plot: A mother and her six-year old son are separated in the jungle when they are forced to bail out of their flaming plane. The mother is picked up by a couple of white hunters, while the boy is taken care of by a huge gorilla. Hurt in his descent, the child doesn't recognize his mother until another accident brings back his memory.

Comment: This is a minor "Mighty Joe Young" with a huge gorilla playing the title role. Combining generous jungle footage and a suspenseful, human story, the picture has enough chills and thrills and adventurous excitement to please those moviegoers who enjoy this sore of fare. Jon Hall and George Cooper are capable as the white hunters, and young Beau Bridges and June Vincent are effective in the son and mother roles. Director William Berke's know-how and Maurice Conn's production handling have given the film the inherent qualities needed to put it over with audiences seeking such an adventure as this. Should do well in the grind runs and neighborhood houses.

same specialized attention that is given to the making of pictures, the presentation of plays. If it is presented in a sloppy and careless manner it is certain to leave a sloppy impression with its audience. It quite naturally follows that if the audience's impression is poor, subsequent attendance will drop. This must be avoided, not only in the interest of the success of vaudeville but in the interest of maintaining and building interest in moviegoing as a national habit. If it requires that managers be replaced or executives properly schooled in order to acomplish this all important job, let's get about it without delay.

Background Essential

As for me, I must confess ignorance as to whether the shows will come in as they did in the old days or not. Maybe there will be considerable curtailment in the way of paraphernalia for transport and the acts will travel "light." But if they do, it should only serve to place added demands on the theatre for props and scenic effects. Under no circumstances will a front curtain and a braille be adequate. And a screen standard immovable on center stage will be disastrous to all concerned.

I'm not suggesting or advocating any major order to the scenic studios, but I do believe that the installation of a picture sheet hung down in "one" to be essential. I also believe that some sort of a cyclorama that will permit use of full stage for "afterpieces" and the larger troupes is needed as is a street drop and an outdoor scene in "two" to be requisite to the variety of background essential to the creation of the proper accompanying atmosphere to accentuate the various types and styles of performances to be rendered.

As I understand it, this presentation of vaudeville on a national, or semi-national, basis is in the nature of a test to determine whether or not the renewal of the once sure-fire audience-pulling performances will revitalize ailing box offices. To be fair to both theatre owners and the vaudeville bookers and performers, such test must be conducted under the most favorable circumstances possible. The biggest portion of the cost of getting vaudeville off to the right kind of a start is an enthusiastic expenditure of elbow grease and brow dew. A little thinking now—and a bit more of listening to old-time stagehands and managers—will prevent no end of confusion and delay when the shows arrive. Some figuring and a bit of the bank balance will of necessity be required to get the necessary scenery and correct present barriers in the way of stage equipment placement. But, on the whole, the job can be done at a minimum outlay if—and it's a big if—someone with know-how and experience will be given the reins and authority to accomplish the task.

And please, please, don't try to see how cheap you can buy the accompanying picture. You don't need an "A" or "AA" but you should give the performers, who are strangers and utterly unknown to your audiences, the benefit of a good strong "B" containing a modicum of names familiar to movie patrons. And by all means watch the timing of the accompanying feature film program. A picture in the 70- to 90-minute field with a couple of single reels is most pliable.

Personally, I believe a mistake is being made in asking performers to do five shows a day and six on Saturday. In the first place, it is my opinion that the performers are showing themselves at their "tiredest worst" on the last show which is exactly the time when the most discriminating spectators are in the audience. It has also been the experience of most of us "hang overs" from the old vaudeville days that performers seldom do their best when facing abreviated audiences.

But then maybe time will prove the above conjectures to be all wrong. Maybe the doors will be jammed from opening to closing and that capacity five times each day will reward the effort of those who are making the great venture—or should I say those who are answering a public demand for vaudeville?

No Adults Only

Sheriff George Blaine of Tulsa, Okla., was promised Tuesday that no more "adults only" movies will be shown at the State Theatre. The sheriff said the owner of the State told him he "would be glad" to stop shows for "adults only." Earlier in the day Blaine told Tulsa exhibitors they could show such films. The county attorney's office backed him. Blaine's ire was directed at the State which advertised a film featuring Evelyn West, an entertainer with whom he had run-ins when she appeared at a Tulsa night club.

MGM SALES CONFERENCE IN ROUSING KICK-OFF

Expressing confidence that the organization would overcome the obstacles which face all branches of the industry due to unsettled conditions at home and abroad, President Nicholas M. Schenck made the opening address Thursday (13th) of the annual MGM Sales Conference in New York. Mr. Schenck was introduced by Distribution Chief William F. Rodgers, who later emphasized that the gathering was not for the purpose of discussing any new policies but to discuss forthcoming product and servicing of exhibitor customers. Prominent among those who addressed later meetings were Advertising-Publicity Director Howard Dietz, who outlined promotional plans and declared that MGM definitely has not changed its policy in connection with cooperative and applied advertising; and Advertising Manager Si Seadler.

TORONTO

Canadian exhibitors, outside of the Province of Quebec, see a film theatre attendance threat in a recommendation made in the House of Commons by Dr. Pierre Gauthier of Portneuf for a national ban on the admission to motion picture theatres of all juveniles under 17. Gauthier told the Commons members that as a result of the prohibition against attendance in the Province of Quebec where it has been in effect for the past 20 years, the moral fibre of youths in Quebec cities and towns had been improved. Whether any action will be taken on Gauthier's recommendation remains to be seen.

At the Ottawa meeting of theatre representatives, the following officers of the National Committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Ass'n of Canada were elected: President A. J. James Woton, for many years maintenance man with Warners, died last week at the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, Saranac Lake.

Not Cussing

Fox Midwest came up with a dual bill coupling that had some extra advertising when it set "Hellfire" and "Brimstone" into the Kansas City Esquire and Apollo theatres last week. The Apollo is not ordinarily in the first-run picture, but with unusual bookings it is frequently combined in a day-and-date deal with the downtown Esquire. City Manager Leon Robertson figured this one was worth the doubling up, and it paid off with a strong week's gross.

PHOENIX

Universal's "Gal Who Took the West" has been booked into 25 Arizona theatres for showings in October and November. Newspaper advertisements have been playing up such local tag lines as "Photographed in all of its wild action between Phoenix and Tucson," and "Hundreds of Arizonans in its action cast!" Past experience has proved that Arizonans invariably turn out in force to see a picture that was filmed in the Copper State.

Only a small number turned out for the memorial to Tom Mix, the movie cowboy, who died in an automobile accident on the Tucson-Florence highway nine years ago. The services, which included the planting of a sahuaro cactus in honor of Mix, were held at the Tom Mix Monument, about 30 miles north of Tucson.

On Forthcoming Product

Master Minds (Monogram) Principals: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, William Benedict, Bennie Bartlett, David Gorcey, Gabriel Dell. Director, Jean Yarbrough. Because an aching tooth has given him prophetic powers, one of the Bowery Boys is performing in a carnival act as a fortune teller. He is kidnapped by a crazy scientist for use in experiments in mind transference. His pals rescue him.

The Blond Bandit (Republic) Principals: Robert Rockwell, Dorothy Patrick, Gerald Mohr. Director, Harry Keller. A girl is framed for robbery. The D.A. promises leniency if she will help convict the head of the bookie racket. However the racketeer is convicted on other evidence. She realizes she loves him and decides to wait for him.

Rock Island Trail (Republic) Trucolor. Western. Principals: Forrest Tucker, Adele Mara, Bruce Cabot, Chill Wills. Director, Joseph Kane. Western expansion of the Rock Island Railroad is being thwarted by the leader of the river barge men. An Indian attack on the railroad, led by the river man, is defeated. The barge leader is killed. The railroad is free to build.

Military Academy (Columbia) Principals: Stanley Clements, Leon Tyler, Myron Welton, Gene Collins. Director, D. Ross Lederman. The commandant of a military academy agrees to attempt the rehabilitation of four tough boys. When the boys learn that a popular instructor has also been a wayward youth, their respect for him causes them to reform and become a credit to the school.

Tough Assignment (Lippert Productions) Principals: Don Barry, Marjorie Steele, Steve Brodie, Marc Lawrence, Ben Welden, Michael Whalen. Director, William Beaudine. A newspaper reporter discovers that motorized rustlers are operating on a wholesale basis in the San Fernando Valley. He and his wife join the rustlers, secure evidence, and cause their capture by the state police.

A Mother for May (Columbia) Principals: William Holden, Charles Winninger, Coleen Gray, Cary Gray. Director, Norman Foster. A footloose, carefree minstrel man, part of a traveling medicine show, finds himself burdened with a large family, when he comes across five little orphans. The small Ohio townsfolk are ready to send him off to jail when the local judge's daughter comes to his defense.

Independent Production

Steve Broidy sounds a sensible note when he says that independent exhibition must support independent production.

Steve is undoubtedly right. But the cause he champions has been hurt during these past few years by an over-supply of mediocre pictures whose independent producers took the position that exhibitors were obligated to take them off the hook by buying and booking regardless of the quality or box-office potential of the product.

We do, however, go along with that independent producer who frankly admitted that his picture was not good but was, at the very least, just as good as some of the turkeys from the majors which so many exhibitors found a spot for. Had they done as much for this picture its producer might have suffered only a small loss on his investment. Instead, he took such a financial beating that he had a tough time getting financing for his next production.

Unless exhibitors encourage independent production by giving it the benefit of playing time consistent with its box-office potential, they are simply helping to maintain and perpetuate the sellers' market which has existed for much too long a time.

The NEFC, the financing company organized by exhibitors to help independent production, is predicated entirely upon this very important theory. Other exhibitors not in a position to participate financially can, at the very least, help the cause by giving every consideration to all product financed by NEFC. Thus, their contribution is equally as important as those who are putting money into it. It represents the kind of cooperative team-work that can help solve that sellers' market problem and insure for exhibition an adequate supply of salable product.

There are many independent exhibitors who devote too much time and energy to griping and name-calling when they could be lending a helping hand where it can do them—and independent producers—a lot of good. You'll meet them around the country and you'll hear how everybody and everything about the industry is no good. What we all need is lots less complaining, lawsuits and name-calling and a lot more cooperation, especially between independent exhibition, distribution and production.

The independent producers are vitally important to this industry and every time an independent exhibitor takes advantage of them, he's just kicking himself in the shins.

Will Rogers Hospital

On the recent inspection tour of the Variety Clubs-Will Rogers Hospital by representatives of local Tents, several in the party told us they knew of one or two cases of tuberculosis among industry people in their localities and thought such persons deserved the facilities this institution offered.

When we asked why these people did not apply for admission to the Hospital, the answer was that they didn't believe the people they referred to were aware that they are eligible for admission.

We do not know what else could have been done beyond the educational campaign instituted this past summer by Bob O'Donnell to carry the information to all corners of the industry. Letters were channeled to all companies in the industry—producers, distributors, exhibitors, supply dealers and service concerns. In addition, all Variety Club Tents throughout the country passed the same good word along through their members.

While it is quite possible that there are still many industry people who are unaware of the fact that the Variety Clubs-Will Rogers Hospital is open to industry people requiring treatment for tuberculosis, there surely must be large numbers in every area who can carry the good word to them. Furthermore, they can be on the lookout for deserving cases that, with proper care and attention, can be restored to health, especially if we can get them into the Hospital before the disease is too far advanced.

To you who read this, may we again ask your cooperation. Please pass the word around in your territory and watch out for any industry people who might be afflicted with tuberculosis so you can help them apply for admission. If you have any doubt, send us a collect telegram and we'll answer you promptly.

The Variety Clubs-Will Rogers Hospital is the industry's very own Hospital. Let's make sure we use it to the limit of its capacity and ability to render a cure for what once was the most dreaded disease but which today (thanks to medical science) can be licked ninety-nine times out of a hundred.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

EXHIBITION

Ever since the U. S. Supreme Court, in ordering the Government anti-trust suit back to the three-judge statutory court for further study, made final the fact that certain industry trade practices were illegal and definitively outlawed the fixing by distributors of what admission prices a theatre should charge, a large body of exhibitor opinion has remained suspicious of distributor compliance.

This week this suspicion flared into open attack on two fronts—at the distributor-exhibitor committee meeting of the Theatre Owners of America, and at the national Allied convention in Minneapolis. Both attacks were leveled at Columbia. Both were directed at alleged sales policies in connection with "Jolson Sings Again."

TOA denounced sales policies whose terms would have the effect of forcing an exhibitor into admission price rises. National Allied, in stormy sessions, wired protests to Columbia Sales Chief A. Montague, protests which must have intimated that Columbia was asking for raised admissions, for this brought back flat denial from Montague who demanded to know "the basis of your information."

The TOA will seek to work its complaint out with Montague and has appointed a committee for this purpose. Allied probably will seek a similar method, though its convention, which was as fiery and aggressive as ever, resolved to seek out evidence on violations of the U. S. Supreme Court rulings and to offer this evidence to the Justice Department. The convention, one of Allied's largest, decided to accept the industry public relations plans "with . . . reservations" for one year's trial. (P. 5)

Meanwhile the Variety Clubs International, whose mid-year conference closed in New York Wednesday night, was turning back the pages of history. The conference approved audience collections and theatre premieres as a method to raise funds for the operation of the Variety Clubs — Will Rogers Hospital at Saranac Lake and to hold the collections or premieres nationally either on Washington's or Will Rogers' birthday. (P. 6) Audience collections had been used for this purpose when the hospital was managed by the National Variety Artists.

In San Francisco Fox West Coast was reported to be considering vaudeville for its 4,651-seat Fox and Loew's was taken the 2,600-seat Warfield from Fox to operate as its own house (Government anti-trust suit, you know — partnerships). In New York Paramount home office attorney Richard Morgan (what he doesn't know about the Jackson Park case and others isn't worth knowing) quit to become an exhibitor. He takes over the 600-seat Palace at Watertown, N. Y., which Schine had to give up because of its consent decree.

In Charlotte, the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina closed their two-day convention with the reelection of Mrs. Walter Griffith as secretary-treasurer and heard TOA President Sam Pinanski say exhibitors must recognize the problems that producers face and help in their solution. Pinanski declared that exhibitors had a stake in keeping independent production alive — a statement similar to that made by Allied's Jack Kirsch in Minneapolis.

In Florida exhibitors were faced with a three per cent amusement tax on seats at 40 cents and over. In Greenville, Ala., theatres had a two per cent box-office tax clamped on. In Chicago subsequent-run exhibitors were kicking over the alleged lack of first-run product.

DISTRIBUTION

Thirteen exhibitors will offer 35 new features for distribution in November, the Booking Guide of Showmen's Trade Review revealed this week.

The same week saw Realart hold a sales convention and announce a minimum of 15 reissues of 1950 with a maximum based on what the market can take; Universal announcing that it will put 18 new ones on the market during the next six months; Sam Denbow joining the Allen-Tone outfit to handle "The Man on Eiffel Tower" and the trade generally wondering whether, now that Howard Hughes has a Production Seal on "The Outlaw," he would drop his $7,000,000 anti-trust suit against the Motion Picture Association of America. Hughes filed the suit when the MPAA took the seal away over his advertising. He has since submitted revised advertising.

United Artists closed a deal with the Navy for $160,000 to cover 37 features to be exhibited at bases and aboard ships.

GENERAL

The legal front this week was comparatively quiet with Universal suing the William L. Paternostros of Lake Charles, La., for alleged under-reporting of film rentals on percentage pictures for their Delta and Palace in Lake Charles. In Batavia, N. Y., Exhibitor Charles V. Martina dropped the Dipson chain from the defendants in his damage suit based on alleged actions which caused him to lose the lease on a theatre. Hollywood Federal Judge Harrison handed down an oral decision favoring the distributor defendants in an anti-trust suit brought against Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM), RKO, Monogram, Columbia, Republic, United Artists, Universal, Exhibitors James Edwards, Jr., and Arthur Sanborn of El Monte, by Steve Chorak, an exhibitor of Puente, Calif. Chorak sought the usual triple damages and an injunction on the basis of a two weeks' clearance in favor of the El Monte situation five miles or so away. In Detroit Producer Sam Goldwyn was reiterating his opinions on monopoly which he termed "un-American."

In Washington the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, leader of the Christian Nationalist Crusade, said Un-American Activities Committee had a petition with the names of 50,000 southern Californians, requesting continuance of the motion picture red probe. The committee could not be reached for comment.

Financial: Technicolor — net profit for nine months ending Sept. 30, 1949, estimated at $1,768,550, or $1.92 a share, compared to $1,276,900, equivalent to $1.30 a share, for the corresponding 1948 period. Net profit for quarter ending Sept. 30, 1949, $620,830 or 67 cents a share. Universal-Directors declared a dividend of $1.06 a share on 4¼ cumulative preferred payable Dec. 1, 1949.

Dead: J. Applestone, 30, MGM Singapore manager, of polio in that city.

'Outlaw' Gets Seal Back. Question: Will Hughes Sue?

Whether Howard Hughes' anti-trust suit against the Motion Picture Association of America would be fought to a finish now that the MPAA's Production Code Administration had restored its seal of approval to "The Outlaw" remained unanswered this week as no one from the Hughes office was available for comment, and RKO, distributors for the picture, apparently did not know.

Hughes had sued the MPAA originally for damages which when tripled and added to attorney's fees would have amounted to over $7,000,000. The suit, which also sought injunctive relief, was instituted after the MPAA had withdrawn its approval seal because of advertising Hughes insisted upon using. Hughes alleged the MPAA action barred him from theatres and constituted an act of conspiracy under the Sherman and Clayton acts. About this time it was discovered that the MPAA had eliminated a clause which fined member theatres playing unapproved films.

Preliminary efforts by Hughes in federal court at New York to force the MPAA to restore the seal failed and the suit remained on the docket without any date set for regular hearings.

The MPAA restored the seal reportedly when Hughes submitted revised advertising for the picture. However, a stipulation entered into by both parties prior to re-opening the advertising question made it plain that the results of such negotiation would not affect the suit.

50,000 Want Inquiry Resumed, Says Rev. Smith

Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, head of the so-called Christian Nationalist Crusade, declared at a press conference in Washington, D. C., that "a petition, signed by some 50,000 names from southern California had been filed with the Un-American Activities Committee asking that the Hollywood film investigation be completed."

No confirmation was available from the committee since its investigating staff was out of town. Smith, who first rose to prominence as a lieutenant of the late Huey P. Long, has been heading various movements since the senator's assassination when the Long machine denied him to its councils.

More Taxes

Florida has added a three per cent amusement tax which will affect almost all the theatres in the state since it applies to admissions of 40 cents or more. Greenville, Ala., has also joined the cities taxing amusements with a two per cent box-office tax.

Allied Attacks 'Violators'

Evasions of Gov't Suit Rulings to Bring Action, Minn. Convention Warns

National Allied closed its annual three-day convention in Minneapolis at the Hotel Nicollet Wednesday with its delegates voicing protest over what they termed distributor attempts to circumvent the provisions of the Government anti-trust suit and sternly warning that Allied would fight to retain recently gained trade reforms.

Any thought that Allied was departing from its aggressive tactics of litigation and legislation was dispelled by talk from the floor of the meeting as it opened Monday and further emphasized by the remarks of General Counsel Abram F. Myers that "Allied is no less a fighting organization after what has happened at this militant convention."

Abram F. Myers

In fact the organization's traditional policy of keeping to itself nearly wrecked its participation in the all-industry public relations plan which was born in Chicago during August. Actually Allied directors, meeting before the convention in Minneapolis rejected the suggestion of its committee that it join the Chicago plan "with . . . reservations." (STR, Oct. 22, P. 9).

Reconsider

The board, however, reconsidered the question Sunday and at the suggestion of Nathan Yamins that the plan be tried, decided to go along with the plan for one year and left the question of further action to be decided at the end of the year's trial. President William Ainsworth was appointed to act as Allied representative in the industry conferences. Opposition to joining had been led by Sidney Samuelson of Pennsylvania, who claimed that an exhibitor's organization should take no chances with distributors in such a program.

The board, whose action is binding on the convention, finally accepted the committee's suggestion and incorporated into its acceptance the committee's remarks:

"We do not think a large and expensive organization is needed for the best interest of the industry. We are only interested in promoting cooperation and understanding among participating organizations in the public relations field,

Allied Action

National Allied, whose annual convention concluded at the Hotel Nicollet in Minneapolis, Wednesday night, took the following action:

To seek evidence on picture forcing, compulsory admission rises, and other violations of the U. S. Supreme Court findings in the Government anti-trust suit and submit them to the Justice Department.

Criticized Columbia's sales policy on "Jolson Sings Again."

Demanded that distributors abandon their central auditing system.

Decided to try the all-industry public relations program for one year.

Formally admitted drive-ins to membership and moved to set up special service to help them.

Allied, TOA Attack Columbia Over 'Jolson' Sales Policies

Columbia's alleged sales policies in connection with "Jolson Sings Again" were attacked this week both by national Allied, in convention at Minneapolis, and by the distributor-exhibitor relations committee of the Theatre Owners of America.

Both organizations denounced what they said were rental terms which had the effect of compelling exhibitors to raise their admission prices.

National Allied, after a stormy session, wired Columbia in protest and passed a resolution to gather evidence on sales practices which might have the effect of compelling admission rises and to submit such evidence for action to the Justice Department.

The Allied resentment was apparently touched off after exhibitors indicated that it had been intimated to them that they should raise admissions for the picture, an intimation which Columbia General Sales Manager A. Montague emphatically denied.

Montague Denies

Montague, in reply to the Allied wire, wired the convention back:

"Jolson offered to certain accounts on basis of 60 per cent. . . . We have never demanded or authorized any employe of Columbia to even remotely suggest that an exhibitor advance his admission price and vigorously deny your insinuation and demand to know the basis of your information.

"In all negotiations we seek film rentals commensurate with the value of the picture."

John Wolfberg, Denver under-roof and under-sky exhibitor who was among those who had attacked the Columbia policy, challenged the accuracy of Montague's statement from the floor.

TOA Condemns

The TOA committee, after meeting from morning till late afternoon, issued a formal statement stating that it "condemned the sales policies adopted by Columbia in the licensing of the picture 'Jolson Sings Again' because these sales policies, namely, demanding a stipulated sum for each admission ticket sold, or demanding an excessive percentage of the gross receipts, or other inequitable terms and conditions, compel the exhibitor to raise his admission prices in order to show the picture. . . .

"These sales policies, in the opinion of TOA's General Counsel, Herman M. Levy," the statement continued, "are violations of the law.

"It was the firm belief of the committee members present that the theatre owner must be the sole judge of when he should advance his admission prices, and that the distributor may not legally, directly or indirectly, dictate the policy."

The TOA appointed a sub-committee to discuss the subject. It consists of Chairman Walter Reade, Jr., Arthur H. Lockwood, J. J. O'Leary, Albert M. Pickus and Robert W. Coyne.

13 Companies to Offer 35 Features For November Release to Theatres

Thirty-five new features will be offered exhibitors in November, according to a check of distributors in the SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW Booking Guide.

Columbia will lead with five; MGM will offer four and three will be forthcoming from Eagle Lion, Lippert, RKO Radio, Republic and 20th Century-Fox. Paramount, Selznick, United Artists, Universal-International and Warner Brothers have two apiece ready and Monogram has one.

Since the beginning of the year 242 new pictures have gone into production: Last year's figures at this time was about 253.

United Artists—"The Big Wheel,' "A Kiss for Corliss."

Universal-International—"Bagdad," "Free for All," "The Story of Molly X."

Warner Bros.—"Always Leave Them Laughing," "The Story of Seabiscuit."

It Pays to Vote

St. Louis employers, including exhibitors, stand to face a pretty penny of bills if their employes vote and if the decision recently handed down by Judge Louis Comerford holds. The judge fined the Day-Brith Lighting Company for failing to pay one of its employes, when he took an hour and a half off to vote in past elections. The judge finally ruled that the employe was entitled to time off to perform his duties as a citizen but that he should be paid for the time to boot. An appeal is expected.

Difference and Distinction?

Atlanta Censor Christine Smith has approved "Pinky" with cuts, but is still holding out against "Lost Boundaries."

Approve Audience Collections

Variety Clubs Endorse Method to Raise Hospital Funds; Back Industry Plan

The Midyear Conference of the Variety Clubs International Wednesday decided to turn back to theatre audience collections as one of two ways to raise funds for the Variety Clubs-Will Rogers Hospital at Saranac Lake. The second method simultaneously approved by the conference, which met in the Hotel Astor, New York, was that of theatre premieres.

The meeting also decided unanimously, after a somewhat spirited session, to endorse the all-industry public relations program born in Chicago on Aug. 30-31. Then in an unexpected burst of speed, it wound up all business before it and adjourned early Wednesday evening, canceling its Thursday session.

Decision to return to audience collections, a method used by the National Variety Artists, when it managed the hospital, and abandoned several years ago, did not come as a surprise. Though such collections are frowned upon by the majority of exhibitor organizations and circuits, the conference, faced with the necessity of raising operating funds, apparently was influenced by the theory advanced that if national cooperation were possible in audience collections, the sums realized in one day would outstrip any other method of raising money.

The resolution approving this method and that of theatre premieres calls upon all Tents in the organization to cooperate, either by seeking collections or giving premieres once a year. The days selected for this will be either Washington's Birthday or the birthday of Will Rogers, which falls on Nov. 4.

To Study Tuberculosis

The funds so raised, it was pointed out would, in addition to supporting the expanded hospital, go to providing research into tuberculosis.

The conference also decided to approve the industry public relations program upon a resolution presented by Max A. Cohen, chief barker of the New York tent after the pros and cons had been considered. International Chief Barker R. J. O'Donnell, who presided at all the sessions, outlined the ways in which the clubs could assist the program.

Report on Hospital

Wednesday's session also heard Charles E. (Chick) Lewis, executive vice-president of the Variety Clubs-Will Rogers Hospital, report on the operation of the hospital during the four months it has been under Variety management. Included in the improvements was installation of new X-ray equipment, laboratory improvements, neglected for many years, according to the report, amounting to $12,000, and installation of an educational, occupational and vocational therapy program among the patients. In addition, the kitchen and refrigeration equipment has been modernized.

Lewis described the treatment and the freedom accorded patients and read a letter from a patient lauding the hospital plant.

Earlier during the day the Midyear Conference voted to allow formation of a "Hey Rube Club" within the Variety Clubs. The club would consist of all past chief barkers and would hold its official meetings each year at the international convention. At present it plans to hold an inaugural dinner during the convention in New Orleans in 1950 at which members will be inducted.

The earlier sessions also heard Joe Cifre of Boston report on the compilation of historical data on the Clubs since the first club sprang up in Pittsburg when a child was found abandoned in a theatre in 1929. Jim Balmer of Tent One, reported that at the year's banquet on Nov. 13 a plaque would be unveiled in the Sheridan Square Theatre to commemorate the founding of the Variety Clubs regionally. George Hoover reported on the scholarship to be awarded at Phillips-Exeter Academy to some boy found worthy of a scholarship.

Denver In

The assembled conference welcomed the new Rocky Mountain Screen Club's application to become a Denver Variety Club. The club's application was presented by Pat McGee.

The conference opened Tuesday afternoon with O'Donnell presiding and with reports from the various committees. Important among these was the report of Col. William McCraw, executive director of the Clubs, on his tours of the various tents throughout the country and reports of Dough Guy George Eby, Property Master Murray Weiss, Assistant Chief's Barkers Marc Wolf and Jack Beresin, and reports of the publicity and public relations director by International Press Guy Charles E. (Chick) Lewis.

The New York Tent held its induction dinner Thursday night at the Hotel Astor.

Elects E. K. Lane

Ed. K. Lane of the Sparta Theatre, Sparta, Mich., was elected Chief Barker of the Variety Club of Grand Rapids, Mich., at the election on Oct. 19. Others elected were: First Assistant Chief Barker Orvis R. Connolly, Hotel Rowe, Grand Rapids; Second Assistant Chief Barker Joseph Busic, Liberty Theatre, Grand Rapids; Dough Guy Harry Himelstein, Creston Theatre, Grand Rapids, and the following canvasmen: Allen Johnson, Phil Osterhouse, Walter J. Norris, Karl Reynier, Ted Rosendall of Grand Rapids, and Howard Sturgess of the Grandville Theatre, Grandville, Mich.

Martina Drops Dipson From Contract Suit

Charles V. Martina, operating a chain of Theatres in Albion, N. Y., this week dropped Dipson Theatrical Enterprises of Batavia as parties to the $450,000 suit he has filed against Emil Muller, Rochester contractor, and others over alleged abrocation of a lease for a shopping center theatre. Reportedly Martina dropped Dipson from the case because of new evidence available upon which he wished to revise his pleadings.

VARIETY CLUB DIRECTORS VISIT HOSPITAL. Representatives of thirty Variety Club Tents are seen in the group above at the main entrance to the Club's Will Rogers Hospital, Saranac Lake, Tuesday during their visit to inspect the institution's facilities and the improvements made under the rehabilitation program inaugurated since the organization took over the famous hospital for tubercular patients. At the mid-day dinner, Chick Lewis, executive vice-president of the Hospital, introduced the representatives to the assembled patients, staff and guests, and brief talks were made by International Property Master Murray Weiss; Heart Committee Chairman Nate Golden; Dr. Edgar Mayer, consultant to the Executive Committee of the Hospital, and the Club's Executive Director William McCraw. Following the Hospital visit, the representatives were the guests of Fred Schwartz at his Lake Placid lodge. In the group above are: Joe Cifre, Boston; Moe Sanders, New York; Sam Switow, Indianapolis; Ezra Stern, Los Angeles; Charles Smakwitz, Albany; William Elson, Minneapolis; Scott Lott, Charlotte; Roy Wells, Dayton; Nate Golden; Meyer L. White Collarites Sign New Terms For Home Offices

Both the CIO Screen Publicists Guild and the Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild this week ended a 13-month controversy with several major film company home offices over a new contract with two-year agreements starting Oct. 21. The agreements were reached after federal conciliators stepped in and persuaded the two unions not to call a strike which would have involved some 3,000 workers.

New Terms

The SPG contract provides for no general wage rises but permits the union to negotiate individually for members in all but the top brackets. It calls also for enforcement of union membership, requires that three out of four new members in each organization be Guild members, provides for arbitration of disputes and for double severance pay when anyone is discharged for "economic necessity." The old clauses providing for severance pay upon discharge ranged from two weeks for one year's employment to 12 weeks for 10 years.

SOPEG procured 10 per cent wage rises on salaries of $39.90 and under, five per cent wage rises on salaries over $39.90, a wider and speedier grievance set-up, increased severance pay.

The Sopeg deal includes home offices of Loew's, Radio Station WMGM, Columbia, Paramount, 20th-Fox, RKO, National Screen, Exchanges of MGM, 20th-Fox, Columbia, United Artists; Confidential Reports, and Attorneys Sargoy and Stein, who run the Copyright Protection Bureau.

Realart to Distribute Minimum of 15 in '50

Realart will distribute a minimum of 14 to 15 pictures during 1950 and as many more as the market can absorb, Vice-President Budd Rogers declared in New York Wednesday during a lull in the company's two-day franchise holders' meeting.

Rogers said the company would not attempt to flood the market. Other points he made in an informal interview were: 1) "We're getting more money now than the pictures (reissues) had originally;" 2) Reissues take special handling which makes them unsuited for major exchange operations; 3) Star personalities build with the years. ("You know W. C. Fields was a dead one here. Publicity about his book and his name have built him up.")

Realart now has 165 features, all Universal product, 38 westerns and four serials in its vault. Prize winners in the company sales drive are: John Mangham, Atlanta; Lee J. Goldberg, Cincinnati; George Phillips, Herman Gorelick, St. Louis; Nelson Wax, Philadelphia.

Hibrow Show

As if things around Kansas City aren't bad enough the Park College this week came into the motion picture arena as an active competitor to theatres with public showings of one motion picture program a week, presented on Fridays and Saturdays and open to the public as well as students who pay the fee. The show takes place in the Alumni Hall, 12 miles outside of Kansas City.

Sancho Panza a la Cantinflas

Mexico's belly-laugh-giving comedian, Cantinflas, arrived in New York this week mulling the idea of playing Sancho Panza in a projected Sir Alexander Korda production of "Don Quixote," which might have Cary Grant as the chivalry-happy Don. What's holding up the decision seems to be the story for Cantinflas is very story conscious. That is, the story must be Cantinflas-conscious also, since that was the major roadblock to date to the comedian's making a picture in Hollywood, a spokesman revealed, declaring that they had had "discussion with almost all major companies, including Metro." If the Pancho-Cantinflas deal goes through the picture will be filmed in Spain. Cantiflas and his staff revealed that the company planned in addition to its regular schedule of Mexican feature comedies which receive playing times in all Spanish areas, one feature a year in English. Among the subjects considered, Cantinflas agreed, was Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion" which Gabriel Pascal may make with the bull-kidding comedian. In addition Cantinflas will continue his engagements in burlesque bull fights about which he remarked: "The bull is serious, but I am not."

Quite a Market

Incidentally Cantinflas and his staff revealed the importance of the Spanish-speaking picture market when they estimated that it could reach 17,000,000 people in 14,000 theatres of the world.

Youngstein Up

Paramount National Director of Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation Max E. Youngstein, was elected chairman of the Motion Picture Association of America's ad and publicity directors' committee, succeeding Warner's Mort Blumenstock. The post rotates among the distributor ballyhoo chiefs.

Quotes

"Motion pictures can be of immense value in aiding education. The pictures of the better type—and I believe Hollywood is at least seeing the light—can do much to arouse interest in history, biography and science. Motion pictures are a great force for right in combatting evil in many ways and many of them carry such an emphatic message into the lives of our young that their weight cannot be overestimated. The 'bad' picture on the other hand can do inestimable harm but fortunately the public itself is a better board of censorship than any man-appointed board."—Walter M. Burse, president of Suffolk University, Boston.

Goldwyn Takes Fling At Buying Monopolies

Producer Samuel Goldwyn reiterated his opinions on monopoly in the film business Oct. 20 in an interview with the Detroit Free Press in which Goldwyn took a fling at buying combines.

Declaring that producers are faced with a monopoly situation, Goldwyn, who appeared in Detroit to make a deposition in the anti-trust suit of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers against United Detroit Theatres (Paramount partner) and Co-operative Theatres of Michigan, a buying combine, asked:

"Can you imagine how intolerable and un-American it would be if General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and other automobile manufacturers would eliminate all competition in buying by appointing one single buyer for everything they use? Yet that is exactly what has been going on for years among most of the motion picture theatres in Detroit."

No Rest for Dietrich

With "The Big Frame" now in the cutting rooms, Producer Ralph Dietrich is preparing three other stories for early starts at Universal-International.

Democracy?

Vancouver, B. C., citizens may have a chance in December to say whether they want Sunday entertainment or not, Alderman Proctor having given the City Council notice of a motion asking that a plebiscite be held at the same time as the civic elections. The motion would ask the Dominion government to amend the Lord's Day act to legalize picture shows, professional sports and legitimate theatre performances on Sundays. Proctor said he anticipated strong opposition from church groups. The amusement business is neutral on the question, being about 50 per cent for and 50 per cent against.

not in setting up a motion picture bureaucracy or in creating jobs. Allied reserves the right at any and all times to take whatever action it sees fit in the interests of its members." Reportedly some of the Allied suspicion of the public relations plan was that it would place a heavy burden of expense on the Allied organizations.

The convention resolved to admit drive-ins as members, thereby approving the membership of some 300 who have already joined and named a committee to report how Allied can serve its drive-in members with a view to establishing separate departments like the present Caravan Service. The committee appointed consists of Chairman Sidney Samuelson, Mrs. Ethel Miles, John Wolfberg, and O. F. Sullivan. They are to report to the board in January.

The convention further resolved:

1) That all members report any forcing of pictures by distributors to their local organization with full details, the complaints to be carried to national Allied for action if necessary.

2) That distributors abandon at once use of a central auditing agency and for the exhibitor to report evidence of "this invasion of his privacy, . . . as we have every reason to believe this confidential information is made available to all the majors employing the firm."

3) To oppose dictation by any film company in fixing admission prices and ordered directors and officers to collect and file evidence with the Justice Department for action. (This grew out of Columbia's alleged sales policies on "Jolson Sings Again" and rumors of what other companies planned for their big pictures.)—See P. 5.

Says Complaints Received

On the subject of alleged attempts to compel exhibitors to raise admissions for certain pictures and other violations of the U. S. Supreme Court rulings in the Government anti-trust suit, General Counsel Abram F. Myers remarked that he had received many written complaints of distributors' efforts to force admission rises and other attempts to circumvent the Government suit rulings. Myers indicated that Allied might seek to iron this out amicably when he said: "We can iron out complaints without court action where substantiated."

As usual at Allied conventions the question of product and availability occupied attention. On this point Illinois Allied President Jack Kirsch, former national Allied president, arose and said:

"We are in the sellers' market in motion pictures and at the mercy of every picture issued. We should encourage more independent production."

The convention, which is thought to be a record breaker for Allied with an attendance of 623 men and 189 women, opened Monday with an address of welcome by Ben Berger, president of North Central Allied. Berger got off declaring: "We shall make every effort to put someone in jail for violating the Supreme Court rulings." In his regular fiery style, he was followed by Allied President William L. Ainsworth, who cited the Allied record during the past year stating: "No year has been so full of great happenings for Allied."

'Great Happenings'

Among these "great happenings" he cited the Allied fight toward divorce, the decisively successful attack on the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, the establishment of forced buying and conditioning of pictures as illegal. He also pointed to what he termed Allied's great gain in membership.

Distribution chiefs who addressed the convention included 20th-Fox Vice-President Andy W. Smith, Paramount's A. W. Schwalberg and MGM's Distribution Vice-President William F. Rodgers, and Monogram's Morey Goldstein.

Smith pointed to the success of the local autonomy plan for branch managers, claiming that it had boosted Fox's business and made new friends. He pleaded inferentially against industry law-suits and in favor of arbitration and said that the company was working on a new plan to help the print shortage situation. Whether this plan would be similar to Paramount's, Smith would not say.

Schwalberg told the convention that Paramount had no fixed plan for selling "Samson and Delilah" as to terms, etc., and would not attempt to dictate admissions. The Paramount sales chief also pleaded for arbitration by inference, saying he would "sit across the table with anyone and come to a satisfactory conclusion of the particular problem, if meritorious." He also declared against advertising of commercial product appearing in motion pictures.

Reiterates Policy

MGM's Rodgers reiterated the company's sales policies to the meeting, declaring:

"As to terms, we believe from experience that the sliding scale is the most intelligent method of pricing motion pictures. We have not abandoned, nor are we considering adandoning this policy."

The MGM chief added his voice in favor of a talking-things-over policy and deplored the "misunderstandings or disputes being publicized either through the public or trade press."

"We welcome," he continued, "as we have always welcomed, a sane exchange of ideas on problems of mutual interest."

Monogram's Morey Goldstein declared that the "only fair way to sell pictures is on a basis of value and performance, not on a basis of the label the picture carries."

The Allied convention this year presented its first "Oscars"—awards to exhibitors who have done the most for the exhibiting end of the industry. The initial awards went to Harry Brandt, New York exhibitor, organization, booking and circuit head; Ben Berger, president of North Central Allied; and E. M. Loew, head of the New England circuit bearing his name.

Beat Ascap

Brandt and supporting exhibitors beat the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers over motion picture music royalties in the initial round in New York, winning a decision that has nullified Ascap's right to collect from exhibitors for music on the sound track and having the organization declared a monopoly.

Berger and supporting exhibitors beat Ascap and sent it running in Minneapolis where it had sued him to recover such royalties. In the Brandt suit Ascap is reported negotiating; in the Berger suit it gave up the contest by allowing its appeal time to expire.

Loew won a decision, upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court which apparently has nullified the validity of patents on drive-in ramps.

During the banquet which concluded the convention, Myers declared that one of the biggest industry public relations jobs could be done at grass roots level by visiting Hollywood personalities. Myers made these remarks as he presented citations to George Murphy, Carey Wilson, Susan Hayward, Roy Rogers, and Chill Wills, who attended.

National Allied in turn was cited by the Disabled American Veterans who presented it a plaque on behalf of General Wainwright for the organization's activities in behalf of the film, "How Much Do You Owe?"

Board to Decide

The convention closed with matters left over for the January board meeting to decide. At its closing the rumor market was booming Trueman Rumbusch, Allied television authority, as the next president to be selected by the board.

AWARDED ALLIED OSCARS

Better Back Rosen

Action by 20th Century-Fox Cincinnati exchange manager in readjusting rents to exhibitors in areas affected by coal and steel strikes, was warmly praised this week by P. J. Wood of Ohio Allied. Wood termed the move as one which "will do more to create that better understanding between exhibitor and distributor than many hundreds of speeches made by 'top brass' of the industry." He urged Ohio exhibitors to support the branch in its current Joe Rosen Testimonial Drive, since, the Allied chief pointed out, Rosen's action in accepting cuts may seriously affect the Cincinnati exchanges chances of winning.

Chicago Subsequent Runs Claim Product Shortage

Chicago subsequent-run theatre owners were complaining this week over the lack of first-run product for the week of Nov. 4. Claim is that only pictures available to the majority during that period was "Red Light" and "Sword in the Desert."

The complaint attacks extended first-runs in the loops, such as that granted by Federal Judge Michael Igoe to "Come to the Stable," which he exempted from his two-week first-run maximum. Allied Chief Jack Kirsch's list of new film for subsequent-run in November totaled 10 plus 12 reissues.

BRILLIANT HOLLYWOOD 'HEIRESS' PREMIERE. This striking photograph shows a brilliantly lighted scene for the invitational premiere of Paramount's "The Heiress" one night last week at the Carthay Circle Theatre in Hollywood. The elite of filmdom turned out in full force and full dress for the star-studded affair, with more than 500 stars and other celebrities on hand to salute the picture and its stars, Olivia deHavilland, Montgomery Clift and Ralph Richardson. Ten thousand spectators witnessed the opening.

3 Charity Bows Set For 'Fallen Idol'

Three gala charity benefit premieres will precede the openings of David O. Selznick's "The Fallen Idol" in Boston, Philadelphia and New York, according to Sidney G. Deneau, SRO vice-president and general sales manager.

The Boston premiere at the Esquire Theatre on Nov. 9 will benefit the Children's Hospital there, with the picture opening at the Esquire and Pilgrim theatres the following day.

The American Women's Voluntary Service will benefit from the Philadelphia premiere at the Trans-Lux Theatre on Nov. 16, the occasion promising to be one of the Quaker City's highlights of the social season. Regular long-run engagement will start the next morning.

A novel premiere will be staged at the Sutton Theatre, New York, on Nov. 14 for the benefit of the Prescott Neighborhood House. Tagged "A Night in a London Theatre," it will feature all the background of a typical evening at an English theatre, including the cue-line, buskers, orange girls, a doorman in London bobby costume, flags, refreshments, etc. The same motif will be used at the Philadelphia premiere. An extended engagement will begin next day at the Sutton.

That picture which the Associated Press photo wires carried of Vice-President Alben W. Barkley receiving a dignified kiss from Gloria Swanson, now on the road for Paramount, is reported in Washington, D. C., to be the work of Johnny Tassos, Paramount's field publicist in the Capital city territory. Tassos, who only two weeks ago got plenty of space for Marie Wilson's Washington visit, topped that with the Swanson appearance which included a non-stop tour of radio stations, television broadcasts, press interviews, luncheon at the Mayflower for women reporters, and a press cocktail party.

N. Y. Exhibitors at Wilcoxon Luncheon

Leading exhibitors of the New York area were the guests of Paramount Vice-President and General Sales Manager A. W. Schwalberg at a luncheon and special presentation by Henry Wilcoxon last Friday (21) on the Hotel Pierre roof.

Wilcoxon, who has addressed more than 5,000 exhibitors and leaders of civic, religious, women's business and educational groups during his 41-city tour of the United States and Canada, as goodwill ambassador on behalf of Cecil B. DeMille's "Samson and Delilah," discussed the picture with Kodachrome slide illustrations. The presentation also included a discussion of the part Wilcoxon's tour is playing in public relations and a general discussion of exhibitor-producer relations.

SOME BALLYHOO. For the showing of RKO's "Mighty Joe Young" at his suburban 20th Century Theatre, Cincinnati, Willis Vance pressed into a service a red and gold circus wagon, placed a few cutouts on it, added a snow-white donkey, and presto! he had an effective ballyhoo, as you can see.

Activities Begin For 'Seabiscuit' 255-City Premiere

Multiple premiere activities were set in motion this week by Warner Bros. Vice-President in Charge of Publicity and Advertising Mort Blumenstock for the six-state, 255-city opening of "The Story of Seabiscuit" on Nov. 2.

In Cincinnati the Ohio Valley Thoroughbred Association held a special luncheon Wednesday and a screening of the picture for its members, local press and radio representatives, and top-flight turf writers of the Blue Grass Country. A plaque was presented to A. B. "Bull" Hancock, Claybourne Farm, Paris, Kentucky, breeder and the original trainer of Seabiscuit. There was also a presentation of a large photograph of Seabiscuit autographed by the owner, Charles S. Howard, to F. Barbour, president of the Ohio Thoroughbred Club. The Times-Star is carrying a contest, while the Enquirer is putting on a classified ad contest. Special art stories were being prepared by the Times-Star and Post.

Meanwhile over in Indiana at Indianapolis Gov. Henry T. Schricker invited local press and radio representatives to a special screening of the Technicolor film. Radio station WIVC is running a contest on the premiere, and that station's Sid Collins is devoting two weekends of his Hollywood program to the "Seabiscuit" opening at the Circle Theatre.

Race Tip Sheet

Down in Louisville a novel race tip sheet is being prepared for distribution along the route to Churchill Downs by girls dressed in jockey attire. The sheet carries plugs for the picture and its premiere at the Mary Anderson. The Kentucky Thoroughbred Association held a gala dinner and screening Tuesday at the Brown Hotel honoring J. Yeager, former Seabiscuit jockey.

And in Columbus preparations for the Ohio premiere included a luncheon and screening for Gov. Frank Lausche and prominent turfmen. The governor was expected to proclaim Nov. 3 "Seabiscuit Day."

Daly, Mink Win RKO Showmanship Awards

Manager Harold Daly of RKO Proctor's, Yonkers, and Manager Max Mink of the RKO Palace, Cleveland, have won the September RKO Showmanship Awards. Daly scored for his arrangements in connection with the personal appearance of Jeanne Crain, while Mink, a two-time winner, earned honors for his campaign on "Mighty Joe Young." Each manager received $25 and a Showmanship Certificate.

Gathered the Eagles

The Eagles in Delaware, O., yearly hold a big annual gathering with an unusually valuable giveaway as a major attraction. Previously the affair had taken place out of doors. This year it was held on the stage of the Strand Theatre, Manager Lou Marcks having persuaded them to change locale. The giveaway was a $500 television set, in addition to which the Eagles agreed to add a door prize of $100 in cash.

I.M.P.S. Member Report

Schools, Libraries, New Haven K of C Aid Kleper's 'Columbus' Campaign

A campaign that was outstanding from almost any angle that a showman-wise manager can think of was put over for "Christopher Columbus" with excellent results by I.M.P.S. Member Sid Kleper, the very capable and hard-working manager of Loew's College in New Haven, Conn., whose exploitation reports have frequently appeared in STR because of their value to fellow I.M.P.S. members and exhibitors in general.

Brother Kleper took full advantage of the Knights of Columbus, Catholic Youth and other organizations in the city. From a screening for the K of C's VIPs, he harvested much city-wide publicity. Announcement of the "Columbus" playdate was made to 500 K of C members with plugs in three of its state-wide publications. The entire membership gave Kleper 100 per cent cooperation in spreading word of the picture, the theatre and playdate. Kleper's friendly relations with Catholic schools in New Haven again yielded splendid publicity results.

All public schools and lending libraries were equally cooperative, giving special display material and bulletin board announcements. The public libraries distributed 2,500 bookmarks which not only plugged the picture but called attention to seven notable books on the discoverer of America which readers might borrow from any of its branches. The audio-visual head of the city's public schools agreed to permit the distribution of 5,000 heralds through the school system, to post announcements on school bulletin boards and plug the picture in teachers' and principals' bulletins.

Marvin Wilbur, head of Yale's University Christian Association, contacted the city's religious, historical and dramatic heads as well as the heads of the various university organizations on the historical and entertainment value of the picture.

Besides routine and special announcements in the New Haven newspapers, Kleper landed two pages in the Sunday magazine section of the New Haven Register. The first page contained reproductions of nine of the more spectacular "Columbus" stills, with a reproduction of a page of the printed version of Columbus's first letter to the Spanish Court on the discovery of land. The second page gives the translation of the letter in full and contains a large cut of Fredric March and his wife, Florence Eldridge, in their New Milford (Conn.) home. Besides a full-page merchant co-op ad, there was another, about a fifth of a page in size, in which three merchants took occasion to pay a tribute to the great discoverer, including a portrait of March in his Columbus makeup.

Radio stations plugged the picture for three and five days in advance while the Yale radio station gave it 10 days of announcements for university students only. Kleper arranged for the pop tune called Christopher Columbus to be played at music stores which carried window displays and streamers. Special trailers were screened at the Poli and Bijou as well as the College. Lobby display at the College was installed several weeks in advance; five thousand shoe and shopping bags were imprinted with a "Columbus" ad; a boy dressed as Columbus covered the main streets on opening day; navy recruits were invited to be the theatre's guests, various stores carried window displays, and there was a boat-building contest, arranged with the hobby shops. Two special window cards should be mentioned; one red and white, for newsstands and bookshops, urged the public to read the October Coronet in which appears a pictorial synopsis of the story; the other, black on yellow, carried title, stars name and the Technicolor photography in black superimposed on a line drawing of a ship that might have been one of the explorer's.

STR is glad to give this extended account of Brother Kleper's campaign in the belief that it will stimulate other exhibitors to adopt some of his devices and to work out angles of their own.

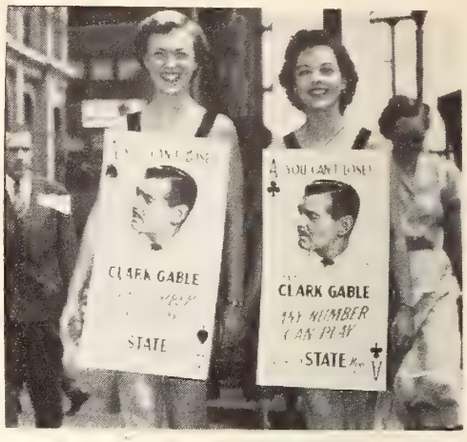
Truman Heads Invitations To 'Battleground' Premiere

The list of invitations for the preview-premier of MGM's "Battleground" at Loew's Capitol Theatre in Washington, D. C., on Nov. 9 is headed by President and Mrs. Harry Truman; Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Mrs. Johnson; Secretary of the Army Gordon Grant, General and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg and many others high in government service.



Invitations went out this week for what promises to be one of Washington's most celebrity-studded premieres.

The Dore Schary film will be exploited by veterans of the 101st Airborne Division in every state, starting Nov. 1, according to Carl Trimble, national secretary of the 101st Airborne Division Association.

The organization has designated representatives in every community to assist in publicizing engagements of the film. The association's monthly bulletin, sent to over 30,000 veterans of his famous Battle of Bastogne, depicted in the film, will plug the picture which was screened for 500 members at their annual convention in Columbus last September.

TV? They Give It Away

Apparently the Monroe Doctrine on television is to give it away. Schine's Clint Young got together with Morris Rosen when he was in Rochester, N. Y., and they promoted a $350 television set, as well as many other items, as door prizes for the Monroe Theatre. Hardly any time had elapsed since the house had given away a similar set.

DEALING FROM THE TOP couldn't produce a prettier hand than this. The two queens were hired from a model agency by Manager Russ Bovim of Loew's State Theatre in St. Louis and the two aces were made with Clark Gable cutouts from 11x14s on the MGM picture. If "Any Number Can Play," what are we waiting for?

'Plains' Premiere Hailed 'Colossal'

When a premiere—whether world, regional, so-many-theatre, territorial or whatever it is—is properly planned and executed, even a theatreman can haul out an adjective like "colossal" to describe it.

That's what happened in connection with the recent world premiere of Nat Holt's "Fighting Man of the Plains" at Topeka, Kans.

In a report to Producer Holt, Edd J. Haas, Kansas City district manager of Fox Midwest Amusement Corp., not only termed the opening "the most colossal success in my 30 years in showbusiness" but also paid high tribute to the seven stars who appeared in person and his theatre staff at Topeka.

"The troupe of seven stars were marvelous," wrote Haas. "They put on an excellent 35-minute show, conducted themselves in a manner which was a credit to all concerned and did everything asked of them, including an extra show at the local veterans' hospital and recordings for radio stations."

Haas called attention to the crowd witnessing the two-mile parade, which he estimated at 40,000 (Topeka police estimated the throng at 48,000) and pointed to the healthy increase in business during the first four days of the film's engagement ($4,705 against the usual average of $2,684).

"All I can say," concluded the enthusiastic Haas, "is that I am 100 per cent pleased with the entire premiere."

Lobby Radio Broadcast Draws Large Crowds

Bob Shapiro, manager of the New York Paramount Theatre, and his publicity and advertising director, Jack McInerny, rolled off an unusual ballyhoo for the theatre's opening of "Red, Hot and Blue."

Shapiro and McInerny transformed the outer lobby of the theatre into a broadcasting studio and had three leading New York disc jockeys spin their platters and run a Betty Hutton quiz from 10 in the morning until 6 in the evening.

Passersby and radio listeners (by means of a telephone) were invited to participate in the quiz. Hundreds of prizes were promoted from local merchants, and the stunt had the theatre lobby packed all day.

Speaking of Industry Public Relations... Now is the time to play

"Hamlet"

Many exhibitors have written us and spoken to us, saying that one of the most effective ways to improve Industry public relations is to blanket the country with HAMLET, the J. Arthur Rank-Laurence Olivier production, which has received every honor that could possibly be bestowed on a motion picture.

Universal-International is aware of this opportunity and is now making HAMLET available for mass exhibition.

The box-office success of HAMLET proves that any movie audience will support and enjoy it immensely.

Therefore we are making HAMLET available to you for a continuous performance engagement or for the type of engagement that best suits your auspices and your community.

We have asked our branch managers and our salesmen all over the country to declare this policy to you in person.

If you want one of the great attractions of all time, if you want to do your community a real service in the way of public relations, then we suggest you make a point of playing HAMLET immediately.

FWC Books "Hamlet" For Entire Circuit

Under a deal with Charles P. Skouras all Fox West Coast Theaters will play Laurence Olivier's "Hamlet," Nate J. Blumberg, president of U-I, announced yesterday. Arrangement is one of the first in U-I's drive for mass distribution of the film. Skouras referred to "Hamlet" as a proved box office attraction, and said its exhibition was an effective way to improve industry public relations, and would be a real community service.

Showmanship Parade

Newspaper tearsheets from Bridgeport, Conn., provide interesting evidence of the publicity promoted for "Come to the Stable" by Manager Matt Saunders of Loew's Poli Theatre there. Matt invited nuns from various Bridgeport convents to be his guests at a special screening of the picture. That netted him a four-column cut and caption in both local newspapers. At the preview the nuns received a bag of doughnuts and a gift of roses (promoted) on their way out. That rated a paragraph in Bailey A. Barnum's "So This Is Bridgeport" column. Fact that the picture was inspired by the experiences of the Benedictine Contemplative Nuns of the Strict Observance who founded Regina Laudis monastery in Bethlehem, Conn., occasioned a full-page layout showing views of Regina Laudis and the nuns performing various duties. Whatever else Matt did in exploiting "Come to the Stable," his newspaper representation was outstanding in itself.

An usher in evening dress, silk topper and cane, but with a black instead of a white bow tie, was sent through the south side shopping centers of Jacksonville, Fla., by the manager of the San Marco Theatre to hand out to passersby the theatre's program and a tiny pair of dancer's shoes—a woman's red slipper and a man's black pump—as a ballyhoo for "The Barkleys of Broadway." The shoe cut-outs were attached by a cord to a card reading: "See the dancing feet of Astaire & Rogers in (title, playdate). Cover of the program advertised "Barkleys" with ads for following attractions inside.

A unique full-page co-op ad was obtained by the Howell Theatre, Palatka, Fla., for "The Stratton Story!" The tieup was with the Huntley Bros. Food Stores and was devoted entirely to its merchandise except for a one-column ad about four inches deep hidden away in the bottom half of the page informing all readers who found their names mentioned in the ad that they would receive free passes to see the picture by calling at the store.

Usherettes of the St. Francis Theatre, San Francisco, distributed 10,000 playing cards and thus created a great deal of comment for "Any Number Can Play." The outside margins of the backs of the cards were stamped with "See Clark Gable 'Any Number Can Play' Now! St. Francis Theatre."

W. C. Fields Ballyhoo

A Keystone Cop outfit and a nose reddened with lipstick made an employe of Bernie Depa a swell street stunter for the W. C. Fields reissues, "The Bank Dick" and "Never Give a Sucker an Even Break," when they played at the State in Lexington, Ky.

Adds Personal Touch

A personal touch was added to those canned star interviews for "It's a Great Feeling" and landed them on the customarily cool radio station in Cambridge, Md., when the Warner Bros. film played at Lou Furhmann's Arcade there. An executive of the station personally asked the stars questions which the transcriptions answered for him.

CINCINNATI CROWDS came in quantity to watch the Arthur Murray dancers exhibit their grace in the windows of the McAlpin store—and while they were looking they saw a window display for Columbia's "Lust for Gold." Credit for this three-point tieup goes to Manager Elwood Jones of the RKO Palace and his publicity manager, Nate Wise.

'Movie-of-the-Month' Formed in Los Angeles

Joseph Meritz and James Nicholson this week united in Hollywood to conduct a new co-operatively advertised day-and-date booking program which will concentrate on playing "off-the-beaten-path" pictures in the Los Angeles area under the trade name of "Movie-of-the-Month Theatres."

The plan, scheduled to go into effect on Nov. 4, will unite the Marcal, Pickfair and Encino theatres on a day-and-date basis, with the trio buying newspaper space together, while a fourth house, the Cinema, will be established as a long-run move-over stand, the duo said. Pictures will be selected after sneak previewing to average audiences.

The "Movie-of-the-Month" idea will also include a registration of patrons into a Movie-of-the-Month Guild which will send out a monthly bulletin on future attractions. First day-and-date booking will be Eagle Lion's French import, "Dedee"; second will be J. Arthur Rank's "Obsession."

Children's Shows in 'Columbus' Campaigns

Special shows for children are figuring prominently in exploitation campaigns for "Christopher Columbus."

In Buffalo, more than 1,000 orphans attended a Saturday showing at Basil's Lafayette Theatre. Arrangements for the party were made between Maurice F. Quinn, chairman of the child welfare activities group of the 40-and-8 Society of the American Legion, and George H. Mackenna, Lafayette managing director.

In Cleveland a Saturday morning show at a special 25-cent price attracted children to Warners' Allen Theatre to see the Technicolor film.—BU.CL.

Shows 'Home of Brave' For Clergy and Unions

"Home of the Brave" garnered widespread publicity in advance of its opening at Loew's Poli, Springfield, Mass., through a special screening given by Manager George E. Freeman for the clergy of the city, representatives of the various labor unions, members of the city council and prominent educators.—HFD.

Window Dancing Tiein With 'Lust'

Manager Elwood Jones of the RKO Palace, Cincinnati, and his publicity manager, Nate Wise, scattered none of their exploitation ammunition in the campaign for "Lust of Gold." Instead, they centered on one three-way tieup of the theatre, the Arthur Murray Dance School and one of the town's leading department stores, McAlpin's. The theatre furnished a blowup of a dramatic scene from the film, two star portraits, stills and credit cards for the window; the dance school furnished the dancers who appeared in the window five times from 12 noon to 4 P.M., while McAlpin's got its share of the resulting publicity by furnishing gowns for the dancers from its fashion shop.

Tieup's value to the dance studio was seen in its increased enrollment of pupils, while the department store stationed a model, bearing a card advertising its fashion shop, at one side of the window while the dancing demonstrations were in progress. Crowds that blocked sidewalk traffic gathered about the window during the window-dancing periods.

Newspaper advertising by McAlpin's and by the Murray dance studio, appearing for a week in advance of playdate, plugged the window dancing and the theatre's coming attraction. The dance school cooperated further by making use of the FM broadcasting system in the city buses to publicize the film at all station breaks.

Jones and Wise used a contest in the Enquirer's classified ad section, through the national Kellogg cereal tieup, got streamers in 300 grocery stores, and free street plugs on a radio man-in-the-street program with free passes as prizes for those interviewed.

Mesibov in Boston To Promote 'Heiress'

Paramount Exploitation Manager Sid Mesibov left last Monday for Boston to set up campaigns on "The Heiress" which is set for the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston on Dec. 25 and at the Center in Buffalo, Dec. 28. The campaigns will be laid out with the company's own field men and with the ad and publicity officials of the theatres, and they will include other "Heiress" locations booked out of the Boston and Buffalo branches.

Bore Down on 'Great'

Manager Milt Baline of the Glove, Gloversville, N. Y., plugged "The Great Gatsby" by having an usher distribute circus-style heralds (as there was a circus then in town), to passersby on the streets.

No Title Tip-Off

In order to get the best publicity he thought possible from a sneak preview of "You Are My Everything," Manager Frank Burhans of the Paramount, Oakland, Calif., decided to withhold the title. He had his phone operators call assorted numbers in the phone directory and tell whoever answered that an unnamed outstanding film hit would be shown on the screen that night. Publicist Hanns Kolmar got newspaper cooperation which announced a "preview of a major studio color musical. . . . Title and cast are withheld, but it may be revealed that the male star was an Academy Award nominee last year and that the leading lady has already won an Oscar."

Forhan Doing Fine Institutional Job

A new recruit to the motion picture industry's Public Relations program is George J. Forhan, manager of Famous Players' Belle Theatre, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Here's how George is keeping his theatre in the public eye:

Four thousand cards have been distributed by local milk drivers. On one side, in large letters, is "No Milk," while on the other is "No Bread." Housewives like them so much that many of the drivers are requesting more.

Of course, Forhan hasn't let pass the opportunity to include some institutional copy on the cards.

On one side: "A Famous Players Creed . . . to surround you with an atmosphere of refinement, to present entertainment that is pleasing to the eye, the mind, and the memory, and to treat you with such courtesy and respect as to insure appreciation from all who call, such is the aim of the Belle Theatre management."

On the other: "Famous Players' Big Show season . . . with the cooperation of the leading producers in Britain and Hollywood the 35 to 40 top features to be shown represent more than $100,000,000 in production costs, and are available to you for a total expenditure of less than $15. Enjoy Belle Free Parking Service. Come dressed as you are (Ed. Note.—This is not a drive-in, remember) . . . in the family car. A courteous attendant in charge."

On the theatre's monthly advertising calendars delivered in Belleville and vicinity, Forhan is giving prominence to the line: "Movies Are Your Best Entertainment . . . "A LOT FOR A LITTLE."

"With so much competition reaching for the elusive dollar," explains the Canadian showman, "I thought it advisable to introduce and keep driving home this slogan."

No one else but George J. Forhan can make that statement. Or can you?

Brandt in Chicago, Then On to Coast for Talks

Following weekend discussions in Chicago with Producer Carl Kreuger on "The Golden Gloves Story," soon to go before the cameras, and discussions with Balaban & Katz Theatres' Advertising Director William K. Hollander on campaign plans for the opening of "Trapped" at the Roosevelt Theatre on Oct. 26, Eagle Lion Ad-Publicity-Exploitation Director Leon Brandt journeyed on to Hollywood where he was to huddle with N. Peter Rathvon, president of the Motion Picture Capital Corp., who is administering EL's multi-million-dollar financing fund under which five major films wholly or partly financed by MPCC have thus far been contracted for EL release.

The five films are "Never Fear," Ida Lupino-Collier Young production; George Templeton's Technicolor film, "Sundowners"; George Pal's "Ruppert" and "Destination Moon"; and "Beloved" (tentative title).

'Yes, Sir,' That's a Diaper (H'burg Tieup)

Manager Glen Lazar in Harrisburg put diapers on the Senate—marquee, that is—and also, for three months, on the first baby born in town after his opening night for "Yes Sir, That's My Baby." The theatre decorating he may have done himself. As for the baby, he made it a three-corned arrangement—brought in the Snow White Diaper Service.

'Task Force' Broadside Given Buffalo by Navy

Finney Does Own Job of Exploiting 'Prairie' Premiere

Producer Edward Finney gave Los Angeles its most unusual exploitation campaign in years last week when he premiered Lippert Productions' "The Prairie," the James Fenimore Cooper sequel to "The Last of the Mohicans."

Opening against competition of four major studio top-budget productions, Finney's low-budgeter took not only the local spotlight but also a play on the nationwide press wires.

Acting as his own press agent, salesman, window dresser, sandwichman, orator, truck driver, Finney found time to pass out handbills on street corners, visit newspapers and civic clubs to talk about his "poor-man's premiere . . . the orphan of poverty row."

He talked the Los Angeles City council into proclaiming "The Prairie" Week; signed over 10 per cent of the historical picture to the American Indian Congress to create a charity fund for needy tribes; obtained free advertising from merchants; took special 16-mm. trailers to boys' clubs; had restaurants put "The Prairie" dinners on menus; led Indian chiefs in ritual dances in department stores; emceed special stage shows at five theatres opening night, and received four coast-to-coast wire service feature stories, a nation-wide radio interview, ballyhooed his film on a television show, and took over a half-hour radio program.

One Klieg Light

"The Prairie" premiered at five neighborhood theatres, the Marcal and the four Academy theatres. Life covered event with a photographer. But one klieg light was used and only at the Marcal theatre. Dozens of kliegs blazed at the major studio theatres, but Finney's "The Prairie" got the press play.

The five theatres made "The Prairie" a kick-off from reissues. General Manager James Nicholson reasoned "the public is tired of 'em."

Finney drove a covered Prairie wagon atop a truck daily throughout Los Angeles.

Indian chiefs, western music band, film stars and one klieg light gave color to the Marcal opening with Finney emceeing impromptu stage show later.

Entire Student Body At Oneonta 'Hamlet'

The efforts of Manager Norm Prager and a special advance man brought the entire high school student body and their faculty to Schine's Oneonta, N. Y., theatre to see the motion picture "Hamlet." Most responsible for this sweep were special student tickets and a letter and circular mailed to 1,300 teachers in the area. There were also an extensive campaign in local and nearby newspapers and considerable-in-work at the local colleges. There the advance man met the presidents, lectured on "Hamlet" before literature classes and spoke to faculty meetings on ways of selling the film.

A Dozen Passes —When Ice Melts

The 300-pound cake of ice in front of the Eckel in Syracuse, N. Y., was such an attention-getter for the opening of "Arctic Manhunt" that Manager Irv Cantor repeated it with a new twist. The first cake contained a sign; the second one, which he placed in front of the five-and-ten cent store, contained a dozen passes for those who waited for the ice to melt.

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

Navajo Trail Raiders

Republic Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A Rocky Lane Western with the requisite ingredients.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Quite satisfactory for the horse-opera adherents.

Cast: Allan "Rocky" Lane, Eddy Waller, Robert Emmett Keane, Barbara Bestar, Hal Landon, Dick Curtris, Dennis Moore, Ted Adams, Forrest Taylor Marshall Reed, Steve Clark. Credits: Associate Producer, Gordon Kay. Director, R. G. Springsteen. Screenplay, M. Coates Webster. Photography, John MacBurnie.

Plot Outlaw raids on shipments to and from a town along the old Navajo Trail prove to be bossed by one of the town's leading citizens. A frame-up puts the wrong man in jail, but fortunately his best friend, Rocky Lane, is competent to put things to rights.

Comment: The brains behind the thugs this time is not the banker, the saloon keeper or a rancher, but (horrors!) the newspaper editor. Since the latter is often present in westerns and almost always a sterling character, this amounts to an interesting switch. His success in capitalizing on a skeleton in the closet of Rocky Lane's best friend and Rocky's own close calls with an honest but suspicious sheriff add a bit of suspense to the heroic western routine. There's a sufficiency of riding, shooting and fighting, and Lane is supported as usual by that crusty old comic, Eddy Waller. With these requisite elements, "Navajo Trail Raiders" should prove quite satisfactory for the horse-opera adherents.

Challenge to Lassie

(Color by Technicolor)

MGM Drama 76 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A good family item, top-notch for kids.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Lassie and Technicolor, as good as ever.

Cast: Edmund Gwenn, Donald Crisp, Geraldine Brooks, Reginald Owen, Alan Webb, Ross Ford, Henry Stephenson, Alan Napier, Sara Allgood, Edmond Breon, Arthur Shields, Lumsden Hare, Charles Irwin and Lassie. Credits: Producer, Robert Sisk. Director, Richard Thorpe. Screenplay, William Ludwig. Based on Eleanor Atkinson's novel "Greyfriars Bobby." Photography, Charles Schoenbaum. Musical score, Andre Previn.

Plot: Jock (Donald Crisp), a kindly sheepherder who has raised a stray collie (Lassie), dies leaving the dog without a license. Only the master may buy such a license and, according to Edinburgh law, this dog cannot possibly have a master now that Jock is dead. Despite the pleas of Jock's friend (Edmund Gwenn) who is caring for Lassie, the court sees no way to avoid her destruction until, after a demonstration of the dog's devotion to Jock, it comes up with an honorary citizenship.

Comment: This film soon develops from its scenic but slow start into a perfect vehicle for the beautiful and talented Lassie. After a bit of cavorting with Donald Crisp and the sheep in the hills and a tussle with would-be robbers, the collie begins her duel with the law in Edinburgh. It is Lassie's only wish to sleep by her now dead master's grave, and come the sunset bugle nothing will keep her from this rendezvous. What with a churchyard regulation, the license law and an officious policeman, however, she is sorely tried. Running from the police she finds haven between columns of marching highlanders—a good scene, as those stalwarts, with their colorful garments and stirring bagpipes, defy the civilian to break their ranks. This success leads to great difficulty, however, for adopted by the soldiers Lassie must, when the sunset bugle blows, leap over the parapet of the fort 500 craggy feet up. Thus Lassie "goes home" again, bruised and weary. At last in court, Lassie has a close thing of it with the red robed jurists, though those upholders of the law must hang on tight when the neighborhood kids come in with the price of a license made up from their own pennies. "Challenge to Lassie" is, of course, a top-notch film for children and a good family item.

Apache Chief

Lippert Prod'ns Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This semi-documentary story of the fight for survival of the Apache tribe against the advance of the white man has an air of historic authority.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Western background and rugged treatment will have the usual action-night draw in the neighborhoods and in rural communities. Has good exploitation possibilities.

Cast: Alan Curtis, Tom Neal, Carol Thurston, Russell Hayden, Fuzzy Knight, Trevor Bardette, Francis McDonald, Ted Hecht, Allan Wells, Roy Gordon, Billy Wilkerson, Roderic Redwing, Dale Blanchard, Hazel Nilsen, Charles Soldani. Credits: Directed by Frank MacDonald. Screenplay by George D. Green. Original story by George D. Green and Leonard S. Picker. Photography, Benjamine Kline. Produced by Leonard S. Picker. A Robert L. Lippert Presentation.

Plot: An Indian tribal chief and his son are robbing and killing white settlers. Another Indian chief and his son want peace with the white man. Climax comes when the friendly Indian brings in the renegade killer and turns him over to white justice to save the tribe from annihilation.

Comment: Photographed with the Garutso lense, the picture gives a sharp, three-dimensional effect that heightens the sense of reality. Sepiatone is well suited to the mood. The musical score and narration are good. Dramatic theme of the picture is the struggle between tribal loyalty and stark survival, and action fans will find plenty of rousing hand-to-hand fights. Though action is slowed by dialog and several sequences of inept comedy, the fights are realistic. The general audience should respond to the Indian problem.

Rim of the Canyon

Columbia Western 70 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Gene Autry followers and other western fans will like this fast-moving action film.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do well where westerns are popular.

Cast: Gene Autry, Nan Leslie, Thurston Hall, Clem Bevans, Walter Sande, Jock O'Mahoney, Francis McDonald, Alan Hale, Jr., Amelita Ward, John R. McKee and Champion. Credits: Directed by John English. Screenplay by John K. Butler. Photography, William Bradford. Produced by Armand Schaefer. A Gene Autry Production.

Plot: Autry, and three robbers his dad sent to prison 20 years before, meet in a deserted community where the men come seeking their hidden money. The man from whom the money was stolen also shows up. Before the picture ends, the robbers go back to prison, Autry wins the gal, and the money goes back to its rightful owner.

Comment: From the box-office standpoint, this can be considered a fine entry in the Gene Autry series, and it should do well where westerns are popular. There are action, speed and songs, as well as gun-fights, fast-riding and tough brawls to satisfy both adult and juvenile action fans. Autry turns in his usual smooth performance, and puts over several songs capably. Nan Leslie does okay in the feminine lead, with Thurston Hall and Clem Bevans doing well in supporting parts. John English, who has been directing quite a number of Autry films, gives this one plenty of what it takes to put over an Autry western.

The Story of Seabiscuit

(Color by Technicolor)

Warner Bros. Drama 96 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Thrilling racing scenes and a slightly saccharine but appealing love story should keep the average audience happily absorbed.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The fame of Seabiscuit, so well publicized a few years ago, should give this picture a natural draw. Barry Fitzgerald and Shirley Temple name-draw promises good business in most locations.

Cast: Shirley Temple, Barry Fitzgerald, Lon McCallister, Rosemary DeCamp, Donald MacBride, Pierre Watkin, William Forrest, "Sugarfoot" Anderson, Wm. J. Cartledge. Credits: Directed by David Butler. Written by John Taintor Foote. Photography, Wilfrid M. Cline. Technicolor Color Consultant, Mitchell Kovaelski. Produced by William Jacobs. Music by David Buttolph.

Plot: An Irish horse trainer sees possibilities in a runty yearling. When the owner sells the horse against his advice, the old trainer becomes ill. He goes to California where he persuades his new employer to buy the horse. The little runt becomes the great Seabiscuit.

Comment: This picture should please generally. As a story of racing, it delivers honestly, with a plentiful supply of authentic track scenes, made especially colorful by the Technicolor photography. The racing sequences, one of which is in Sepiatone, are thrilling and realistic. Shirley Temple and Lon McAllister are good as the young lovers. Though slightly saccharine, their story is still

Guide to Modern Methods in the Administrative and Executive Phases of Theatre Operation

Child Film Series In 2 Reade Towns

Featuring films selected by committees of teachers and parents, and with tickets sold through the school systems, Child Film Library Series have been started in two New Jersey communities by Walter Reade Theatres, with the full endorsement of the local schools.

Guy Hevia, present city manager for Reade theatres in Asbury Park, who first introduced the series two years ago while city manager in Morristown, is starting this third series of such shows at the Asbury Park St. James Theatre on Nov. 5. Schools from Asbury Park and eight adjoining communities are supporting the program and selling tickets for him, and have already tentatively approved plans for a fourth series of five weekly Saturday morning shows as soon as the third series of five is concluded.

In Freehold, N. J., City Manager Joseph Sommers inaugurated a series of six such shows to run bi-weekly from October through Christmas. Attempted for the first time in Freehold, this series won quick report from the Freehold school system.

Similar series are now being planned in Morristown by City Manager Ralph Lanterman, and for the first time in Perth Amboy, N. J. by City Manager Herbert Gordon.

Success of the plan has hinged on its acceptance by the school systems, and willingness of the schools—through their P.T.A.'s and teachers — to undertake sales of tickets. In each case the program has been broached to school authorities as a positive means of bringing selected juvenile screen entertainment to the city's city youngsters, and in each instance school and P.T.A. officials have selected the features and short subjects from the Child Film Library lists of the Motion Picture Association of America.

A series ticket has been sold, priced low enough to be within reach of all students, and only capacity of the theatre has been sold. Police have provided additional protection for each show, and committees of mothers and teachers have served voluntarily as matrons.

The shows have been highly successful in the past from a public relations point of view, as well as box-office-wise, and the new series promise to be equally successful.

Criterion on Broadway Marks 13th Birthday

Said to be the only theatre on Broadway designed exclusively for motion picture presentation, the Criterion is currently marking its 13th birthday. The recent installation of the latest projection equipment and a new screen that affords a clear view from every seat, as well as the installation of television in the spacious lounge, is enabling the showplace to live up to the reputation set for itself at its 1936 opening, "The Theatre of Tomorrow."

The current attraction is RKO Radio's "Easy Living," starring Victor Mature. The opening picture was Warners' "Give Me Your Heart," starring Kay Francis, according to Managing Director Charles B. Moss. Longest-running film: MGM's "Green Dolphin Street (9 weeks), with U-I's "Sword in the Desert" (7 weeks) a close second.

Jack Jackson Show Sense

How Showmen Exploit on Low Budgets

What follows is exclusively for the little fellers who operate theatres in small towns and are handicapped by small budgets for advertising and exploitation.

In the past few months I've spent considerable time with theatre owners who have to look twice before adding a one-sheet to the accessory account. In many situations the popcorn machine represents the difference between making a small wage and running a profitable business. To these, the matter of getting their attractions before the people of the community and covering their natural area of trade presents quite a problem. And, if they fail, to get the required coverage, the results at the box-office are such as to cause scanning of the Sears-Roebuck catalogue to determine the cost of manila rope in hangman lengths. I don't expect most readers of this column to believe it, but I've actually seen reports showing admissions below $5 and several where $8 represented the total ticket sale.

I know you'll ask, "Why do they stay open and how?" Well, in the first place, just about every theatreman is a "hoper" and honestly believes that old Dr. Coue creed about things getting better every day in every way. In the second place, the business of these towns is seasonal and there is usually a three- or four-month period when things get real good—and the box-office take sometimes reaches as much as $500-$700 a week. The owners feel that closing the place will serve to get it entirely off the entertainment schedule of the folks in the community, so they keep open regardless and shout with joy when seven days' return gets over the $200 figure —out of season, that is. Of course, they keep film costs at the lowest possible levels during the "off" season, and those normally hard-hearted distributors seem to be indulgent while waiting for the days of improved attendance. But, and this is an actual instance, I've seen three day receipts on a double feature bill hit the dismal low of $17.80. Running expenses are low. They gotta be.

That these owners and managers are ingenious when it comes to figuring ways and means of accomplishing wide area advertising coverage at minimum cost is proved by the examples—many of them practical and adaptable for other theatremen in similar positions, I hope—reported below:

Has to Garner Business From Surrounding Communities

E. J. "Shorty" Sedlack, a former Warnerite who, after release from Uncle Sam's rifle toters, left Charlie Ryan's Chicago domain and now enjoys the climate, neighborliness, scenic splendor and many other delights of my native Texas (I am NOT biased), is parent to one of the finest examples of "smartie' low cost advertising stunts. Shortie has two theatres in Haskell, and if he wants to keep 'em with their noses above the loss line, has to garner considerable business from surrounding communities. With another theatre less than 10 miles away that is quite a problem, and here's one of the bright ideas that helps accomplish the desired end.

Leading merchants in five neighbor towns—including the one where the opposition operates —are contacted every week to change the copy in a small semi-permanent standee counterpiece. The background of the counterpiece reads simply, "Be Our Guest at the Texas Theatre in Haskell." In the center of the piece is a facsimile of a book cover and this is labeled, "If your name appears inside you get a guest ticket." Lifting the cover discloses a neatly arranged frame containing a typewritten list of some five names of the local citizenry. All of these are after proper identification, given tickets by the merchant which are accepted at the Texas, Haskell, upon payment of the Federal tax. The names are changed every week by the simple matter of mailing a new list of names together with new dated tickets to the store owner.

The storekeepers like the stunt because it causes folks to visit the establishment to see if their names appear on the list. Better still, it occasions no end of comment around town because everybody knows everybody, and as soon as the list is placed the town gossips start their tongues to wagging about "who won." The towns are so small that the use of normal care in the selection of names guarantees farm and neighborhood coverage on a scale that maintains interest at high level. That it pays off at the box-office was proved recently when a "Guest Nite" was instituted and request made for names to be registered. The result showed that better than 35 per cent of those registering were from the towns covered by the counterpieces.

The expense? Oh, I forgot to mention that Sedlack had some schooling as a draftsman and is an excellent letterer. The expense was consequently confined to the cost of the show card board used in creating the displays.

I don't know just where I got this one, but it's another to put in your book for use when good cooperation at little or no cost is needed. It does require a bit of smartness in presentation but, aside from that, the cost can be regulated right down to zero.

There are few, if any, communities that don't boast a merchant who is, or can be induced to, engage in the printing and distribution of circulars on a regular periodic basis. They can always be sold on the value of star or scene art from movies as eye-catchers to command attention to their copy. Here's how a smart theatre manager goes about the job of getting the kind of cooperation from these merchants that will increase the take at the box-office without decreasing the size of the petty cash or advertising fund.

Managing a discussion of the proposed cooperation with the merchant, the manager takes pencil in hand and begins to outline the expense the theatre will incur in fulfilling its end of the co-op deal. The idea that hits best is invariably the numbering of the handbills with a specified percentage of the total printed being acceptable as tickets at the theatre. In this event the manager carefully figures just how many tickets it will take to cover 2 or 3 per cent of the printed total. It is never advisable to exceed the 3 per cent figure because it only serves to lower the value of the theatre admission. As an example: If the number to be printed and distributed is 2,500, he figures 50 or 75 tickets at the net price to the theatre and is careful to inform the merchant that Federal taxes are required of the ticket holder by law. If his net price is 29 cents, the managers uses paper to figure, before the merchant's very eyes, his cost at 14.50 or 21.75. To this he adds the cost of the mat he provides for illustration, cost of mailing, cost of a blackboard and the work of placing the stated number of winning circular holders thereon, etc. He then shows the merchant the exact cost to the theatre and exacts the full price of printing and distribution as the merchant's share.

Get it straight. This is no cheat! It is simply a business-like presentation to guide the sharing of expense on a cooperative endeavor. The only merchandise a theatre manager has to sell are seats and entertainment. If he provides a specified number of seats to accommodate the patrons of a grocer or other merchant, why shouldn't he assess them at full value? The merchant expects nothing but a fair deal, and the theatre manager who gives more than a fair deal is defeating every purpose of his job. Every unit listed above represents an outlay in cash or time or actual revenue to the theatre, and there is no good reason for not letting those who join you in advertising effort know exactly what, in effort and money, you are contributing.

Most unsatisfactory merchant tieups are the result of managers approaching contacts with proposals like: "I'll GIVE 100 passes if you'll let me, etc., etc." Immediately the value of the theatre ticket is depreciated. If a studied and careful presentation, based on percentage of coverage and showing complete theatre costs, is made, any wideawake merchant will grab at an opportunity to tie-in with the place serving more customers than any other place in town—that's the theatre, my friend, in case you never figured it out before.

Most managers take the assets of their theatres for granted and assume them to have no value whatever to cooperators. In instances of conducting merchant giveaways they always leave themselves under obligation to the merchant because they never take paper and pencil to list stage facilities, PA system, master of ceremony duties, stage lighting, cost and value of lobby display, use of theatre equipment and service of theatre staffs in collecting and supervising collection of stubs, and so on ad infinitum. The careless manager assumes that the merchant knows all about these things when, in reality, they possess but a vague knowledge of the work and expense connected with theatre operation. And, to make the point obviously clear, if the merchant were to engage in the effort without the cooperation of the theatre, he would be obliged to lay out hard cash for each and every one of the units of cooperation provided at no cost through the tieup.

Make 'em understand how expensive your theatre equipment is and list every detail ON PAPER when you go about working a co-op deal. Quit talking about your equipment as though it were so much street rubbish and available to anybody for the mere asking. If you were selling farm machinery you'd not be content with telling 'em about the paint job on a tractor. You'd go into details about its expensive innards. Well, the same thing goes when you go after cooperation for your theatre and eliminate every one of those inexcusable expenses for cooperative advertising.

I really wanted to include much more along this line of thought, but time's up. Hope you'll be able to use some of these ideas.

appealing. The match race between Seabiscuit and War Admiral at Pimlico should appeal to horse lovers and racing fans. Barry Fitzgerald, stealing most of the scenes, gets the best out of his part. He delivers expertly the brand of comedy that has kept him in the top rank of character actors. Shirley Temple is young and breathtakingly lovely in Technicolor, and McAllister is clean-cut and likable as the famous jockey. Rosemary DeCamp, Donald MacBride and Pierre Watkin give good support. The fame of Seabiscuit, so well publicized a few years ago, gives this picture a natural draw and this, plus the marquee names, promises good business for the film in most locations.

Alias the Champ

Republic Comedy 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Gorgeous George, the colorful wrestler who puts on a show everytime he goes into the ring, makes his screen debut in this screamingly funny picture. Even those who do not ordinarily find wrestling enjoyable are bound to get many belly-laughs from this one.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Gorgeous George's reputation as a wrestler, plus the fact that this is a good comedy, should help make it pay off in most situations. Don't let the customers be fooled by the title.

Cast: Robert Rockwell, Barbra Fuller, Audrey Long, Jim Nolan, John Harmon, Sammy Menacker, Joseph Crehan, John Hamilton, Stephen Chase, Frank Scannell, Frank Yaconelli, Emmett Vogan, John Wald, Gorgeous George. Credits: Directed by George Blair. Written by Albert DeMond. Photography, John MacBurnie. Associate Producer, Stephen Auer.

Plot: Trouble starts when a fight syndicate tries to get Gorgeous George and other wrestlers to join them. George's manager gets police protection, but there is considerable trouble before all ends happily.

Comment: According to reports, wrestling bouts have quite a following, and if this is true, the returns on this picture should be way above average for the general run of product. For Republic has taken Gorgeous George, a colorful wrestling showman, and put him into a film that suits his talents. Strangely enough, it is a screamingly funny comedy; that is, the part that deals with the wrestling matches. Rest of the picture concerns the romance between a police lieutenant and the wrestler's female manager, and this part is just routine melodrama. But when it comes to the wrestling scenes, where Gorgeous George goes into action, the customers will get many belly-laughs and enough entertainment to spread word-of-mouth and make the picture pay off in all situations. George Blair's direction plays up these scenes and this is to the advantage of the film, while Stephen Auer's production elements gives it plenty of exploitation possibilities. He has lined up many known wrestlers, a good selling point. Balance of the cast, though all good, aren't too important, since the picture's main attraction is Gorgeous George.

Prison Warden

Columbia Drama 62 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Too leisurely-paced for the average patron who wants more action in a prison yarn.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Just another supporting film.

Cast: Warner Baxter, Anna Lee, James Flavin, Harlan Warde, Charles Cane, Reginald Sheffield, Harry Antrim, William "Bill" Phillips, Frank Richards, Jack Overman, Charles Evans, Harry Hayden, John R. Hamilton, Clancy Cooper, Edgar Dearing. Credits: Directed by Seymour Friedman. Screenplay by Eric Taylor. Photography, Henry Freulich. Produced by Rudolph C. Flothow.

Plot: After planning her marriage to a prison warden so that she can be near the man she loves whom she believes innocent of the crime for which he has been convicted, a woman falls in love with her own husband and learns that the man she thought innocent has really committed the crime for which he was imprisoned. Eventually, the convict escapes and is killed through his own recklessness.

Comment: This Warner Baxter prison yarn emerges as a minor supporting film. Leisurely-paced it lacks the excitement and action to make it popular with the average patron. Baxter, Anna Lee and Harlan Warde make up the triangle around whom the story revolves, with Baxter turning in a smooth portrayal as the warden. Anna Lee is charming and convincing in the role of the woman in love with two men and Warde does well as the convict.

PRODUCTION PARADE

By Ann Lewis

James Stewart gets the starring role in Universal-International's filmization of the Pulitzer Prize play "Harvey." With him will be Josephine Hull, famous Broadway character actress, playing the same role she created on the stage. Production is scheduled to start shortly after the first of the year.

Ginger Rogers was signed for the leading role in Warner Bros' "Storm Center" after Lauren Bacall was put on suspension for refusal to appear in the part. Producer Jerry Wald expects to put the film in work shortly with Stuart Heisler handling the megaphone.

Independent Producer Harry Sherman is planning a musical western starring Spike Jones. "Pop" (as the producer is known by most) found that Spike has a tremendous following, so he figures a picture with him will have the folks running to get a visual, entertaining glimpse of the famous band-leader. The title will be "Really, Mr. Greely."

Plans are being completed by Producer Hal E. Chester for a nationwide talent contest to select a blonde girl for the leading role in Monogram's Joe Palooka series. Elyse Knox has withdrawn. Joe Kirkwood, co-starred with Leon Errol in the films, was discovered for the title role, just that way, several years ago.

"My Blue Heaven," the Betty Grable-Dan Dailey co-starring vehicle about which there has been so much controversy, will start Nov. 15. Henry Koster will serve as director. Signed for a top featured spot is David Wayne, the Broadway actor who just finished two important assignments at MGM.

Irene Dunne and Fred MacMurray will co-star and George Marshall direct "Come Share My Love," which Harriet Parsons plans to produce. In this RKO Radio picture Miss Dunne returns to the screen in a gay, romantic comedy, the type that built her a tremendous fan following in the past. Cameras are due to roll early in December.

Sig Neufeld has been signed by Lippert Productions to produce "Western Pacific Agent," a story of railway investigators. Sam Newfield will direct, with production to start the first week in December. Studio is also negotiating with William Berke to serve as producer-director on his own original screenplay of "Return of the James Boys," recently purchased.

"Family Skeleton" has been set as Susan Hayward's first picture for 20th Century-Fox under her new term contract with the studio. She will co-star with Paul Douglas. Early spring is planned as starting date, with Claude Binyon writing and directing for Producer Sol C. Siegel.

John Ford and Merian Cooper are planning "Wagonmaster" as their next Argosy Production for RKO. Ben Johnson and Harry Carey, Jr., who were in Argosy's "She wore A Yellow Ribbon," will be co-starred. Ford will direct.

"Mad With Much Heart" has been purchased by RKO as a starring vehicle for Robert Ryan and will reunite the producer-director combination of John Houseman and Nicholas Ray, responsible for "They Live By Night." Also purchased was "The Marriage Mill," and this was assigned to Producer Lewis Rachmil.

Terry Moore will be co-starred with Glenn Ford in Columbia's "Virgin Island," to be filmed largely in the West Indies in January, with S. Sylvan Simon producing. Screenplay is based on William Maier's novel, "Pleasure Island."

Katzman's Off-Beaten-Track Success Formula

Sam Katzman

"First, I don't kid myself—I know that neither Columbia nor I can compete with studios like MGM, Warners and 20th Century-Fox." This honesty comes from Producer Sam Katzman who, as a veteran producer of serials, B's and A's for Columbia release, is one of the busiest people in the business year-in and year-out.

"Those studios concentrate on production. My answer is to make something off the beaten track. For example, I just finished a picture laid in Chinatown, but one with a psychological twist. I'm preparing another picture about the Napoleonic Days, 'Terror of the Sea.'

"I realize that I can't afford a big cast—a producer of low-budget pictures has to stay within his budget or he's dead. So, I concentrate on an unusual story. Every picture I make has to have an exploitation angle. One on which I'm busy now is a story of Lewis J. Valentine, the late police commissioner of New York."

Katzman tries to sidestep sex and most controversial angles, although he admits that a new controversial angle has some possibilities.

The busy producer doesn't believe in buying previously published material, except in the case of cartoon strips for his serials. He insists on originals.

"When I decide to make an A production, I go into history for my ideas. Sure, I doctor history up a little, but the public doesn't mind and I'm interested in the public's wants, not the historians'."

Katzman musicals, he explains, also emphasize story rather than production where he can't compete with the bigger studios. "I can't give the public lavish production or stars, but I do give them new faces and what's more—I give them entertainment."

'Mystery Street' on Location in Boston

Marking the twelfth distant location jaunt of MGM production units during the past six months, a company for "Mystery Street" was in Boston this week filming scenes at the main gates of Harvard University, the "Yard," Trinity Place Station, section of the Cape Cod area, and the Department of Legal Medicine. Headlining the cast on location were Ricardo Montalban, Wally Maher, and Edmon Ryan, to be joined by Elsa Lanchester and Jan Sterling. Marshall Thompson, not needed in location scenes, remained in Hollywood.

Previous departures from Culver City include "The Miniver Sequel," England; "King Solomon's Mines," Africa; "Ambush," New Mexico; "Devil's Doorway," Colorado; "The Outriders," Utah; "Side Street," New York; "You're Only Young Twice," New Jersey; "Asphalt Jungle," Lexington, Ky. and Cincinnati, O.; "The Doctor and the Girl," New York, with advance crews already in Italy for "Quo Vadis?" and in India for "Kim."

Dorfmann Plans Six On $5 Million Budget

Plans to produce six pictures in Hollywood, New York and London within the next three years at a total budget of not less than $5 million were announced this week by Edmund L. Dorfmann, president of Edmund F. Dorfmann Productions.

The pictures will be produced on the basis of two a year for the next three years. Stories, casts and directors for the first two pictures, scheduled to get underway early next year, will be announced shortly, it was said. Dorfmann intends to star Faye Emerson in one or more of the planned pictures.

Shears Whacking Away On 8 Films at RKO

Four features are being edited and daily rushes are being cut on four others at RKO Radio. Getting the shears are "Weep No More" (tentative title), "Stromboli," "Holiday Affair" and "Dynamite Trail." Rushes are being cut on "The White Tower," "Carriage Entrance," "Blind Spot" and "Gun Thunder." "Dynamite Trail" and "Gun Thunder," incidentally, are Tim Holt westerns.

Gomez in 'Furies'

Thomas Gomez, character actor, has been signed by Hal Wallis for an important supporting role in "The Furies," based on the Niven Busch novel. Anthony Mann will direct.

Schedules 'Balfour'

Monogram Producer Lindsley Parsons plans to make Robert Louis Stevenson's "David Balfour," starring Roddy MacDowall, in England during 1950.

3 in New 3-Color

Cinecolor has made commitments for three feature productions to be processed in the company's new three-color.

Studio Roundup

With eleven pictures getting underway last week, Hollywood was maintaining a comfortable production pace that promised to continue until at least the holiday season.

On the Columbia lot "In a Lonely Place," Santana's Humphrey Bogart vehicle, began filming. Gloria Grahame co-stars with Bogart while Frank Lovejoy, who seems to have set his feet on the road to stardom in "Home of the Brave," has been signed for the second male lead. Jeff Donnell gets her first highly dramatic part in this picture. At the same studio "Riders of Black Mesa," fifth in the current Charles Starrett western-series, featuring Smiley Burnette, also got the "go" signal. Director Lew Landers put his cast to work on location at Santa Monica in "Beauty on Parade," with Robert Hutton and Ruth Warrick in the leading roles and Lola Albright playing an ingenue.

The fifth of MGM's scheduled eight musicals, "Duchess of Idaho," Esther Williams - Van Johnson co-starrer, went before the Technicolor cameras with Robert Z. Leonard directing. John Lund, on loanout from Paramount, is also in the cast. Director John Huston put Stirling Hayden and Jean Hagen through their paces in "Asphalt Jungle," which Arthur Hornblow, Jr., is producing.

Independent producers Mort Briskin and Robert Smith started shooting "Here Lies Love," on the Monterey peninsula, with Robert Young and Betsy Drake in the leading roles. Direction is in James V. Kern's hands.

100% New York Footage

Shooting in New York is Universal-International's "Web of the City" (formerly known as "Confidential Squad") with Richard Conte, Peggy Dow and Coleen Gray. Entire footage is due to be shot in Manhattan without benefit of Hollywood sound stages.

Another Allan "Rocky" Lane western, "Gunmen of Abilene," started at Republic, with Fred Brannon directing.

Set constructions were finished with the erection of two complete blocks of city streets on Warners' "The Glass Menagerie," the Tennessee Williams play which has Jane Wyman, Kirk Douglas and Gertrude Lawrence in the leading roles. Irving Rapper directs.

Director Mel Ferrer (he played the leading part in "Lost Boundaries") has signed two distinguished New York stage figures for important roles in RKO Radio's "Blind Spot." Philip Ober and his wife, Vivian Vance, will make their first appearance together before a motion picture camera in this Claudette Colbert-Robert Ryan suspense drama.

Hope Emerson, six-foot-two character actress who advises women that being "so-big" isn't any detriment to her "man-appeal," was added to the cast of U-I's "Double Crossbones," starring Donald O'Connor. In the role of a woman pirate, it should be very entertaining to see what Miss Emerson can do with little O'Connor, especially if she is called on to throw him around.

Lesser Reveals Program

Julian Lesser, president of Thalia Productions, has announced a multi-million-dollar six-picture program for the company during the next three years. Among the films planned are the Lanny Budd series and several adventure-exploration features, one to be made in Technicolor and photographed in the East Indies.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Variety Tent 36 Holds Impressive Induction Ceremonies at Savoy Hotel; $25,000 Already Raised for Charity Work

By JOCK MacGREGOR

It was a proud day for John H. Harris, Bob O'Donnell and C. J. Latta when Variety Club Tent 36 was inducted at the Savoy Hotel, London. Many doubted the outcome of this first overseas venture, but their fears were groundless. Already over $25,000 has been raised for charity, and after the handing-over of the charter nearly one hundred British and American showmen were initiated as Barkers.

Jock MacGregor

The London Tent was determined to convince the visitors from across the water that there was nothing wrong with showmanship in the old country and the evening was a most impressive occasion. Larry Kent and David Jones spared neither time nor effort to put over the spirit of Variety and were the recipients of heartfelt compliments from all present.

The old-time Barker with his top hat, outsized moustache and diamond studs was there to announce the arrivals who represented all branches of showbusiness The ballroom was effectively decorated with red and white tenting to represent the big top, and full marks for ingenuity went for the original table seating cards. These took the form of miniature cardboard tents with flags on which were printed the names of the guests. Few failed to take these souvenirs home.

Against this colorful background, Chief Barker Robert Wolff presented Ben Lyon as master of ceremonies to introduce the various speakers in his humorously good-natured way. Bob O'Donnell outlined the story of Variety and C. J. Latta spoke with real feeling and emotion on the great work which the tents are doing for underprivileged children. John H. Harris provided the biggest surprise by presenting Donna Attwood as his wife and admitting that he married her back in August. Sir Phillip Warter and Walt Disney replied on behalf of the guests.

Before dancing commenced, Wolff presented O'Donnell with a magnificent silver tray bearing the signatures of all London Tent members. But, as Lyon quipped, Bob's pleasure would be short-lived, as he doubted whether the Board of Trade would ever grant a permit to export it home!

After this brilliant inauguration, it is anticipated membership will increase at even greater speed and that permanent club rooms will be established shortly. In the meantime, the Tent is meeting for lunch in a private suite in the Savoy on alternate Wednesdays. Before long it is hoped the first children's playing field in this country will be opened bearing the name, Variety.

Arriving just in time for the induction was Lew Schreiber, executive manager of 20th-Fox Studios and executive assistant to Darryl F. Zanuck. He had landed earlier in the day from the Queen Mary to look at the various studios and hold conferences on future production activities both here and on the continent.

Lew is adamant that they will not make pictures anywhere merely to use frozen currency. The stories must call for the background to be shot away from Hollywood, and "Night and the City," "Black Rose" and "Prince of Foxes" have been treated as location jobs. "Inside Scotland Yard" will probably be their next production here.

Another distinguished gathering was for the presentation of the gold cups awarded by Picturegoer, Britain's premiere fan paper, to Sir Laurence Olivier and Anna Neagle, who had been voted the best actor and actress in the international field by their readers in 1948. Michael Wilding and Irene Dunne were runners up.

In acknowledging the award, Sir Laurence spoke of the wonderful team which had helped him make "Hamlet." Extremely interesting were his remarks on the difference between stage and screen acting. In his opinion, only on the stage can the artist really create a character; on the screen he is dependent on the understanding of others.

Anna Neagle discussed the entertainment tax and revealed a sound knowledge of the trade. She maintains that it is absurd for the industry to receive a state subsidiary when it is so heavily burdened with this levy. She told how "Spring in Park Lane" grossed £1,700,000 in the U.K. and that the exchequer took the equivalent of three times its production costs.

Newsreels have been strongly criticised recently for politics and plugging artists associated with their groups and this lunch provided a blatant example. Only Rank's GB and Universal News covered the function and I was surprised to hear the cameras' whir stop when Anna spoke. I have since seen the GB reel, the contents bill for which, incidentally, mentions only Sir Laurence. His speech receives adequate coverage, but there are only brief flashes of Anna.

I maintain her speech would have been an admirable means of explaining the entertainment tax situation to picturegoers. It is appreciated that "Hamlet" has just started on general release, but since the independent exhibitor bitterly complains he cannot show the reel he desires and that policy is of greater importance than news, this seems like asking for trouble, to say nothing of being ungracious to Anna.

For the U. K. release of "Little Women," MGM's British publicity department under Leslie Williams have persuaded leading fashion designers to provide modern clothes based on those worn in the film. These were presented at a special show at Galleries Lafayette and attracted much attention. The scheme is to be repeated throughout the country. A new edition of Louisa M. Allcott's story, profusely illustrated by film stills, has also appeared, making thirteen versions available to the reading public.

* * *

Ice cream still occupies a major part of the exhibitors' time and there is the story of the enterprising manager who, to boost sales, raised the temperature by having the boilers stoked.

Vehicle for Lana Turner

MGM is planning to produce, "Three Guys Named Mike," a picture about air line hostesses, as a possible vehicle for Lana Turner. Ruth Flippen is writing the screenplay and Armand Deutsch will produce.

On Forthcoming Product

Outside the Wall (Universal-International) Principals: Richard Basehart, Marilyn Maxwell, Dorothy Hart, Joseph Pevney, Charles Drake. Director, Crane Wilbur. An ex-convict who obtains a job as laboratory assistant in a sanitorium becomes involved with a gang trying to obtain a hidden million-dollar bank robbery haul. A nurse, with whom he has fallen in love, helps frustrate the gangsters' plans.

The White Tower (RKO) Ansco Color. Principals: Glenn Ford, Valli, Claude Rains, Oscar Homolka, Sir Cedric Hardwicke. Director, Ted Tetzlaff. This is the drama of the inner conflicts that drive the individuals in a group of six people to attempt to climb an unscaled peak. Two are killed. One abandons the effort. It all ends when the guide and a young couple forego the fame of climbing to return safely.

King Solomon's Mines (MGM) Technicolor. Principals: Deborah Kerr, Stewart Granger, Richard Carlson. Director, Compton Bennett. An English woman organizes a safari to search for her husband who has been lost in Africa while looking for King Solomon's mines. She and a white hunter find the legendary mines and her husband's body.

You're Only Young Twice (MGM) Technicolor. Principals: Dean Stockwell, Leon Ames, Margalo Gilmore, Michael Kirby, Jerrylyn Alton. Director, William A. Wellman. After repeated expulsion from public school, a boy is sent to a private preparatory school where, after considerable difficulty, he makes good.

Eagle and the Hawk (Paramount) Technicolor. Principals: John Payne, Rhonda Fleming, Dennis O'Keefe, Thomas Gomez, Fred Clark, Frank Faylen, Eduardo Noriega, Walter Reed, Margaret Martin. Director, Lewis Foster. A Yankee spy and a Texas ranger enter Mexico to investigate a revolutionary army. They find that the revolutionists are planning to put Maximillan on the throne of Mexico and annex Texas. The spy and the ranger foil the plot.

No Sad Songs (Columbia) Principals: Margaret Sullavan, Wendell Corey, Viveca Lindfors, Natalie Wood. Director, Rudy Mate. A young wife, mother of a small daughter, learns that she is dying of cancer. Overcoming jealousy, she makes a friend of a woman in whom her husband is interested and prepares her to fill the place of wife and mother in her home.

VIEWS ON NEW SHORT SUBJECTS

MY BLUE HEAVEN (Col.—1656) Community Sing. 9½ mins. Dick Liebert at the organ and the Song Spinners on the vocals render My Blue Heaven, Moonlight Bay, In a Little Spanish Town, San Fernando Valley and Why Don't We Do This More Often in this audience participation musical one-reeler. Release date, 7/7/49.

SILLY HILLBILLY (Para.—E8-8) Popeye Cartoon in Color. 7 mins. City slicker salesman Popeye visits the mountain country of hillbilly Bluto and his work-worn girl friend Olive Oyl and, after complications with his mechanical ware and a terrific beating by Bluto, wins the fair lady. Release date, 9/9/49.

IT'S IN THE GROOVE (20th-Fox) March of Time No. 6. 19 mins. The story is here told of the phonograph industry, from Edison's tinfoil to the current war of turntable speeds. Important recording artists of the last 20 years, including Paul Whiteman, Guy Lombardo, Bing Crosby, cowboy Eddy Arnold and Jascha Heifetz are shown in action. James Caesar Petrillo explains why he stopped new recordings for a year. MOT says Americans will buy some 250,000,000 records this year and calls the scramble for this market "the greatest hubbub in the entertainment industry." Release date, 6/10/49.

STOP—HEAVY TRAFFIC! (20th-Fox) March of Time No. 7. 18 mins. Traffic congestion is one of the nation's most irritating headaches, with 41,000,000 automobiles and a production rate of nearly half a million a month. MOT takes a look at the jammed streets of an old city and contrasts the solutions found elsewhere: express highways, better road signs, parking meters, mechanical garages, city planning boards and driving courses, with attention also to such unclassifiable material as the attitude of women drivers. Release date, 7/8/49.

FARMING PAYS OFF (20th-Fox) March of Time No. 8. 18 mins. The average farmer has struck it rich, and MOT considers this situation in an examination of a small, diversified Ohio farm. The benefits of the business are shown, then the work, mental, muscular and mechanical, that makes it go. The film ends with some estimates of the future. Release date, 8/5/49.

POLICEMAN'S HOLIDAY (20th-Fox) March of Time No. 9. 19 mins. An American policeman on vacation in London visits Scotland Yard and observes the unraveling of a homicide stemming from a whisky truck hijacking. The famous criminal investigation organization reveals training methods in such disciplines as jiu jitsu, the identification of people in a crowd and tracing suspects in London's catacomb of streets. Release date, 9/2/49.

Balmer Gives 'Belvedere' A Collegiate Campaign

Effect from cause was achieved by Manager John Balmer of Reade's Paramount in Long Branch, N. J. (and by other Reade managers) in his campaign for "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College." The effect was entirely collegiate, with commencement day caps and gowns, college pennants, students' "beanies." The doorman was costumed in cap and gown for five days before opening, and an usher in the same get-up, with a date "snipe" on his back, patrolled the town's business section at noon.

City Manager Guy Hevia in Asbury Park decorated the lobby of the Mayfair with college pennants and strung them to lamp posts on two sides of the theatre.

At the Strand in Plainfield, City Manager Hal Martz and House Manager Ann DeRagon had the cashiers and doorman wear "beanie" caps for a week in advance and during the picture's run. They tied up a local radio station for a gratis 15-minute program of college songs suggested by the film.

In Morristown City Manager Ralph Lanterman took a different tack: on the theatre lawn he placed a seven-foot cutout of Clifton Webb, and dressed one of his ushers at the Community Theatre in cap and gown and had him "picket" the theatre with this sign: "If Mr. Belvedere can go to college, why can't I?"

PARDON US FOR BLOWING OUR OWN HORN!

On the opposite page is an M-G-M Studio Chart that we couldn't resist reproducing here.

It represents many millions of dollars in star appeal, in story properties, in production values. It is one of the most ambitious efforts M-G-M or any other studio has ever undertaken.

It has rich meaning for this business. It says there's no let-down at M-G-M. It says M-G-M is your insurance policy. It says the Leader as usual brings enthusiasm, confidence and lift to the industry.

THE GOOD NEW DAYS

During the past few years there were so many annual promises of "the biggest lineup in our history" and so comparatively few deliveries of really successful product that exhibitors and industry observers began to cast a jaundiced eye at the overly-enthusiastic statements and announcements. True, there were some worthwhile films, but the bad outnumbered the good.

Back in the '20s and '30s these seasonal statements and announcements in the trade press electrified the industry. Exhibitors, cognizant of past performances, exploited and ballyhooed their new season lineups with all the showmanship at their command. For the most part, those were lush years in the motion picture industry, artistically and commercially.

We won't go into detail about what happened in the meantime. Suffice it to say that a combination of "economy waves," mediocre product and indifferent public relations, not to mention the steadily growing opposition of other amusements, put Hollywood definitely on the skids.

But it's different this year. The quality of product already completed proves beyond a doubt that Hollywood is returning to the old-fashioned job of making good pictures. For the past few weeks we have been privileged to see some of these new pictures, and they have been of such superior quality that we could liken them only to the product of the good old days. As a matter of fact, it is as if the good old days were with us again.

Believe us when we tell you that Columbia's "Jolson Sings Again"; MGM's "Battleground" and "Intruder in the Dust"; Paramount's "Samson and Delilah" and "The Heiress"; and 20th-Fox's "Pinky" and "The Prince of Foxes," to name only a few, need take no back seat to the Hollywood output of any year. They are truly outstanding productions. To see "Battleground," for instance, is to hark back to the days of "The Big Parade," and old-timers will recall "The Ten Commandments" when they see "Samson and Delilah," undoubtedly Cecil B. DeMille's greatest picture since that other Biblical epic of 1923.

Based on the high quality of the pictures we've already seen, the product yet to come promises a banner year. Intuitively, we'd pick these films as likely to be among the very best: Columbia's "All the King's Men," "The Petty Girl" and "No Sad Songs"; MGM's "East Side, West Side," "Malaya" and "On the Town"; Paramount's "The File on Thelma Jordon," "Dear Wife" and "Sunset Boulevard"; RKO's "Carriage Entrance," "The White Tower" and "Stromboli"; 20th-Fox's "The Black Rose," "Three Came Home," "The Broken Arrow" and "Wabash Avenue"; Universal-International's "Bagdad," "Free for All" and "Woman in Hiding"; United Artists' "Champagne for Caesar" and "The Big Wheel"; and Warners' "Always Leave Them Laughing," "Chain Lightning," "The Inspector General" and "Young Man With a Horn." Perhaps not all of these will score a high rating, but we feel sure most of them will. And if we've omitted a big one or two, the omission is accidental.

Yes, the films we've already seen, and those to come, indicate that this can be the industry's biggest season in many, many years. But if exhibitors are to be stirred into action, this new enthusiasm and confidence will have to be communicated to them through the channel with which they are most familiar—the trade press.

Perhaps Hollywood is clicking, if one is to judge by the current film output. But let's make this sweet music overpower the dissonant noises of economic fears, petty bickerings and lack of industry showmanship.

Glamor Treatment

While the good old movies take many a slap from the enemy, films and theatres where they're shown receive many a grand boost from their friends.

As an example of the latter, consider that eye-taking back cover Coca-Cola adv. in the Saturday Evening Post this (Nov. 5 issue) week. "At the movies entertainment and refreshment go hand in hand," says the caption to a "dream street" scene of glittering theatre marquees with the familiar Coke name and symbols framed in the glamor of movie atmosphere. It's a boost for Coke, to be sure, but also another instance of how a company whose product has won acceptance, and proved its merit at the theatres where films are shown, recognizes the appeal of films and pays tribute to them in pridefully proclaiming an association with The Movies.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

EXHIBITION

Ever since competitive bidding was first suggested by the New York federal statutory court hearing the anti-trust suit—Dec. 31, 1946 — exhibitor leaders have been viewing the bid system with alarm, suspicion and consternation. So when recently the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners passed a resolution which, among other things, called upon distributors to sell pictures through bidding when exhibitors requested them to, Showmen's Trade Review asked its San Francisco correspondent to find out why. The answer came from PCCITO Board Chairman H. V. (Rotus) Harvey, veteran showman, who examines everything he says to make sure that it doesn't say what he didn't mean. Harvey's explanation was that bidding upheld the exhibitor's "right to buy," and that whether exhibitors liked it or not, bidding was probably here to stay since distributors "have the right to license their product in any method they choose." Harvey deplored certain practices connected with bidding and said the PCCITO was seeking uniformity in bids (P. 13).

Meanwhile in Atlanta, Censor Christine Smith approved "Pinky" but continued to withhold approval on "Lost Boundaries" which also deals with one phase of the Negro problem. And while "Pinky" was booked into Atlanta's Roxy, which has a large Negro balcony, STR correspondents were asking exhibitors across the nation what they thought of pictures which dealt with the problem. For the most part exhibitors thought they had a place since they were making money. A few, however, were worried that too many would be made as a cycle developed and public reaction would be had. A few more were worried about community reaction. Several in the south would not book pictures which dealt with subjects that might offend the white southerners. And one exhibitor in a New Jersey town wouldn't book such pictures because he feared it would give him a predominantly Negro audience and thereby classify his house as a colored theatre! (P. 13)

Out in California National Theatre's Charles Skouras, who has been fighting for Daylight Saving Time, came out to answer those who attacked him with a declaration that it would benefit the state and couldn't be beat because the public wanted it. Skouras, who is running trailers favoring the advanced time in his theatres, drew fire from opponents of daylight saving, among whom are exhibitors. Report is that while under-roofers might benefit by the advanced time, it could be murder to under-skyers, an inference which might be justified when it is noted that among the opponents are drive-in owners.

And more seriously the coal and steel strikes were making themselves felt at the box-office, with the coal strike doing a double-play against the industry by curtailing train service and upsetting film delivery schedules. In some areas salesmen were out with their cars hauling film as well as peddling it.

Shea's circuit has added one-night vaudeville to several more houses; in Lake Charles, La., the 1900-seat Pittman got under way as the town's largest theatre, and in Rochester, N. Y., Ben Belinsons' Little Theatre rounded out 20 years of continuous operation as an "art" house.

LITIGATION

Neither Warner Bros., nor the Justice Department would talk, but Washington indicates that Warners is after a consent decree in the Government anti-trust suit, which, if worked out, will probably leave Loew's alone in the fight against divorce, since 20th-Fox wants out too via the consent route. The statutory court in New York has fixed Dec. 16 as argument day for the Government anti-trust suit with Nov. 17 as the last day to file briefs.

In New York depositions had been taken in the Empire suit against the eight majors. In Lexington, Columbia, Universal and United Artists were suing the New Harlan Theatre at Harlan, Ky., over rentals, and in Georgia, the state Supreme Court not only walloped the city of Brunswick's amusement tax, as reported last week, but judicially pointed out that motion pictures were a respectable business such as drug stores and groceries and must be treated like these businesses.

DISTRIBUTION

Twentieth Century-Fox, inaugurating competitive bidding in the Gulf States area, sold two pictures away from Paramount-Richards, which makes a fifth major to leave the Paramount-Richards time. Republic President Herbert Yates, believing that Great Britain will offer splendid opportunities for American films, will release the entire Republic product there and has added 10 special salesmen to the distribution end for John Bull. The Canadian Jewish Congress announced that Quebec Province will not allow "Oliver Twist" to be shown because of the character Fagin, which is also the reason it is not being shown in the United States. Oklahoma is seeking to force distributors to pay a state income tax.

GENERAL

On the production front Universal has decided to raise its "A" program from 25 to 30 pictures for 1950 and to make 12 intended for extended runs; Chester Erskine has formed his own producing company with A. Pam Blumenthal as president and Dave Garber, formerly Universal's studio manager, is going to establish a motion picture center for Kingswood Films, Inc., in the British West Indies. Pictures made there can also be considered as British pictures under the quota.

Rochester University has developed a new artificial sapphire lens said to be better than the present glass lens. The Motion Picture Publicists Ass'n, IATSE Local 818, has been admitted to membership in the Hollywood Film Council.

Financial: Motion picture companies reported cash dividends for September amounting to $7,419,000 compared to $7,280,000 for September, 1948. Payments for the quarter ending September, 1949, amounted to $10,588,000 compared to $4,147,000 for the similar period in 1948. Paramount President Barney Balaban disposed of 1,200 shares of Paramount $1 common to the B & T Association.

Dead: Kay Kamen, 57, merchandising manager for Walt Disney and president of Kay Kamen, Ltd., his wife, Kate, 40, in the AirFrance Constellation plane crash at the Azores.

Coal Strike Hits Film Shipments

The nation's coal strike has not only hit the box-office in areas affected, but has moved out to affect delivery of film shipments in the non-coal producing sections.

Faced with coal shortages, railroads have been cancelling regularly scheduled trains with the result that film has to be shipped either earlier or by other means in several sections. In Boston, suburban theatre exhibitors have been hit by the elimination of the seven o'clock train which carried films to all points west—Worcester, Fitchburg, Framingham, Springfield, Natick, Wellesley. Distributors had to call in salesmen and commandeer their automobiles to make deliveries. In some instances exchange managers themselves were understood to have to travel miles by motor to deliver film for midweek openings.

Closed Coal Mines Worry Cleveland Showmen

Cleveland area exhibitors were worrying this week that the protracted coal strike might shut up shop for them. While most of the city's movie houses aren't worried about heat too much since they operated off the municipal heat, there was some fear that the cumulative effect of both the coal and steel strikes, which is causing widespread unemployment, would be murder at the box-office.

Strikes, Layoffs Hit New Jersey Business

Industrial inactivity due to layoffs and curtailed manufacturing, as well as the effects of the steel and coal strikes were partly blamed this week for some of the worst business in the New Jersey area to date. Television was also partly blamed by exhibitors, who contend that the average run of picture is not strong enough to buck the conditions.

Quebec Said to Bar 'Oliver Twist' Film

The Canadian Jewish Congress, meeting in Toronto, revealed that showing of J. Arthur Rank's "Oliver Twist" had been barred in Quebec province by Premier Maurice Duplessis. The announcement made by a speaker at the Congress, who said he had the authorization of the premier to make the statement, declared that the picture was banned because of the portrayal of Fagin. Neither the premier's office at Quebec nor Eagle Lion commented.

Showing of "Oliver Twist" in the United States has been held up by Jewish protest over the Fagain portrayal on the grounds that it would foster anti-Semitism.

Take Depositions In Empire Suit

While depositions from witnesses have been taken in the $5,076,000 triple damage suit filed by Harry W. Doniger and the Empire Amusement Company in New York federal court against the eight major distributors, trial date for the suit had not been set late this week.

Doniger, as trustee for Empire, and Empire, are suing Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, Warner Bros., RKO, Loew's (MGM), Columbia, United Artists and Universal on the ground that the house could not get product. The petition states that the corporation took over the Empire at Newark, N. J., as a grind house in 1935 under a lease to operate it for five years with an option to renew. After several weeks, the petition alleges, the house had to shut down due to alleged product difficulties.

The sensation expected in the trial is that one or two former employes of one of the defendants are expected to testify in favor of the plaintiffs to back up letters which are to be filed in the case. The suit was filed in July, 1949.

File 3 Fraud Suits

Three separate suits alleging incorrect returns on percentage rentals in connection with the New Harlan Theatre at Harlan, Ky., were filed against Price Coomer in federal court at Lexington this week by Columbia, United Artists and Universal.

Bidding Takes Fox Away From Paramount-Richards

Twentieth Century-Fox this week sold "Oh, You Beautiful Doll" and "Everybody Does It" away from the Paramount-Richards circuit in New Orleans in an act which marked the first use of bidding in that area by Fox. The action also indicates that both films will be sold away from the circuit throughout the Gulf States.

The move marks the fifth major to sell away from Richards, who is scheduled to release the houses in the circuit during early 1950 to Paramount, but who retains important interests in other circuits and booking combines. Prior to the Fox action by years, MGM and Universal sold away in differences over terms, RKO and Paramount followed more recently. Fox and the circuit had reportedly disagreed once before over terms, but the situation was later straightened out in a meeting between 20th-Fox President Spyros Skouras and Circuit Chief E. V. Richards.

Shea's Adds Vaude To Eight Houses

The Shea circuit Wednesday added one-day vaudeville bills to its Shea's in Ashtabula, Ohio, Jamestown, New York, and Bradford, Pa.; the State in Cambridge, Ohio; the Union in New Philadelphia, Ohio, the Colony in Marietta, Ohio, the Weller, in Zanesville, Ohio, and the Auditorium in Newark, Ohio, which will play two days—Friday and Saturday. Vaude policies had previously been established in Manchester, New Hampshire, and Greenfield, Mass. Joe Hiller of Pittsburgh, books.

Philly Price Cut

Philadelphia saw its first post-war admission cut when William Goldman slashed prices at the State Theatre from 70 cents to 50 cents.

Warner Seeks Consent?

Reports from usually reliable sources in Washington this week clearly indicated that Warner Bros. is seeking to escape the Government anti-trust suit by a consent decree which would provide for both divorce and divestiture. Neither the Justice Department, however, nor a Warner Bros. spokesman, would comment on any progress the negotiations might have made. Washington sources nonetheless treated lightly the report that the Warners sought to split the fraternal triumvirate so that two brothers would remain in production-distribution and the third go into exhibition. They inclined to the belief that the Department would reason that so close a family relationship could not be completely disassociated in business. If Warner closes a consent deal with the Justice Department, this will probably leave Loew's alone in the fight against divorce, since 20th-Fox also seeks a consent decree.

Harvey Upholds Bid System, Wants Distributor Uniformity

Competitive bidding strongly upholds the exhibitor's "right to buy," H. V. (Rotus) Harvey, board chairman of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, declared in San Francisco this week as he revealed his organization would seek to have distributors adopt uniform bidding methods.

Harvey, who is one of the few exhibitor organization heads who has a good word to say about bidding, however does not like the way it is administered in the San Francisco area. He claims that each distributor has a different method and that these differences often work to the disadvantage of the exhibitor.

"We ask for a uniform method of selling which will be fair to all," he declared. "I don't believe in the 'auction block' practice of some distributors in calling up several parties and quoting prices to gain raises in offers."

The move to reform the bidding system in his area will be followed through by Harvey himself and PCCITO members, he said.

Asked for It

The PCCITO recently surprised exhibitor circles when it passed a resolution which asked that all distributors establish competitive bidding when it was requested by exhibitors. The reason behind this action is understandable in view of the approach Harvey takes to the subject. While other exhibitor organizations denounce bidding as an evil, he views it as something which is here and which offers exhibitors "the right to buy."

"Whether the exhibitor likes competitive bidding or not," he remarks, "it is here and likely to stay because distributors have the right to license their product in any method they choose."

The PCCITO resolution on the subject, passed at its recent convention at Sun Valley, Idaho, calls not only upon distributors to establish competitive bidding in areas where exhibitors request it, but also to use a sealed bid system only, open the bids publicly before interested parties, make public the contents and then make the awards immediately. It also urges speedier action in the bidding system.

Harvey also told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW that the PCCITO felt that its membership should get into the drive-in field.

"We are urging," he said, "our regular show people to build drive-ins where they are needed rather than bringing in an entirely new group into the business."

Showmen Wary on Problem Pictures; Fear Cycle May Surfeit Audience

Problem pictures and those which the literary group like to refer to as "adult" may be doing fine at the box-office right now but the prejudice the average exhibitor has against anything which is not pure entertainment, is far from extinct, a survey by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW indicated this week.

While the majority of exhibitors agree, in view of the success of such pictures as "Gentleman's Agreement," "The Snake Pit," "Unwanted," "Home of the Brave" and "Lost Boundaries," that there is a place for the problem picture, their general fear is that a cycle of such problem pictures would surfeit the public and convert the theatre from a place of relaxation into a forum for social issues.

No Like

They don't like this possibility at all, despite the fact that a growing body of lay thought, backed by some industry opinion, is convinced that the public is ready for controversial subjects and will welcome the discussion of problems by way of the screen.

Summing up a moderate and liberal view in connection with this type of production is Wilbur Snaper, New Jersey circuit head.

"Fundamentally we can say that the pictures we have had so far had been successful for the public has bought them," he declared.

"There's only one fear," says Snaper, who has bought "Unwanted" and "Lost Boundaries" for some of his outlets, "and that is a cycle—because you can't blame producers for jumping on the bandwagon. All of a sudden we have had nothing but westerns, musicals, and now we have problems."

Snaper believed that problem pictures were welcomed and good ones would remain welcome. Asked if he thought the audience would weary of them he said:

"That only can happen from excess. If we

Up

Box-office receipts for August, as shown by the U. S. Treasury Department reports for September, were $35,287,970 compared to $34,326,269 for the report which reflected the July level, it was revealed in Washington this week.

Divorce Promises Brilliant Future, Predicts Bob Savini

Doesn't Go Far Enough But Is Salvation of the Industry, Veteran Says

By BILL SPECHT

A man who has lived 45 years in show business as an usher, exhibitor, film salesman and distributor looked backward for a brief moment in New York Tuesday and then loked forward to predict a brilliant future for the motion picture industry — now that divorce would split exhibition from distribution and production.

Bob Savini

He's R. H. (Bob) Savini, the six-foot plus monolith of the business who talks slow and soft, thinks fast and sharp, and who has come up with an idea or so at various times which today even makes good listening.

Savini's glad the Government is getting divorce. He's sorry that the Government doesn't go far enough, and he doesn't like the idea that the new distribution companies which grow out of the Paramount and RKO consent decrees, eventually will be able to acquire theatres of their own—provided such acquisition does not foster monopoly. He further thinks something more should be done about non-affiliated chains.

But so far as divorce is planned to go, it is all to the good, he reasons. "That is the salvation of our business," he remarked. "Only the government has not gone far enough."

Separation of theatre and studio, he believes, will open new markets to the producer. It will put a premium on quality and enable a producer of quality pictures "to get his value out of the box-office." This in turn will tend toward encouraging production of salable pictures instead of the system under which "pictures were made by factory method to fill theatres, had to be played, good or bad—and the public be damned."

Survived and Prospered

Savini's faith in the industry's future, he said, arises in the fact that he has seen big ones tumble while other, smaller industries, have survived and prospered. Over the years he has seen General Films, Motion Picture Sales (not to be confused with the present organization), Mutual, Triangle, VLSE (Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Essanay) all grow, dominate the scene, and then vanish.

Savini celebrated his 45th anniversary in motion picture business this year. It was in August, 1904, that he started as a theatre usher. Save for that job and when he worked with Herman Fitcheberg, New Orleans exhibitor and exchange operator whose Pierce Arrow limousine used to attract attention when he went a-calling on relatives who lived on Esplanade Avenue, Savini has been his own boss.

It has been a very interesting business, he'll be the first to say. As an illustration, years ago he left his native Atlanta where he had become a well-known salesman with a somewhat legendary reputation, to come to New York. And immediately things began to happen as a distribution outfit specializing in re-issues sprang up.

Buying Reissues

Years later, major exchanges caught up to what was going on. Savini was buying re-issue rights on hits and keeping the picture on the screen continuously. What's more he was making money.

Eventually major exchanges perked up and the re-issue business was taken into their fold. In addition other re-issue outfits sprang up. But Savini stayed right where he was in the business—and meanwhile started producing his own action pictures to make certain that he would have product should his access to re-issues be choked off. So far it has not been.

But even before that he had startled the South. In those days Charles Chaplin was the best box-office draw in the country. A certain company opened eight Chaplins and also had a line of pictures with feminine stars which were regarded by exhibitors as being as close to Thanksgiving fare as anything in celluloid can get.

Takes Turkeys

Savini made a deal with them to handle the turkeys along with the eight Chaplins. The owners, figuring that the Chaplins, all of which had played the territory at least four times, were about milked, agreed.

After he closed the deal, Savini went to the circuits and offered the eight Chaplins with the turkeys as a tie-in double bill. And very blandly he made a deal that the circuit should average the business of each of its houses over an eight-week period and that he would accept this average as the regular house average. Then, he further agreed that the film rental for the first week of the Savini double-biller would be 50 per cent of whatever the pictures brought in above the house average. This figure would then establish the flat rental for what the other dual bills, riding on Chaplin's popularity, would bring.

B-r-r-

The first bill opened in Atlanta during a blizzard which kept the street cars in their barns from Monday till Thursday afternoon. But at that time, with Friday and Saturday business still to go, the Savini twins had brought in $24 more than the house's average weekly business. The week finally cleared $1,654 for Savini. The story was repeated in varying amounts of money in Birmingham, Montgomery, Jacksonville while the small town of Aniston, Ala., which boasts a nice courthouse square and a bevy of beauties to walk through

Ha! Ha! Ha!

To the Motion Picture Association of America in Washington, D. C., rumors that Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York would succeed Eric Johnston as president of the MPAA are just one big joke. The reports gained added life when New York Candidate for Mayor Vito Marcantonio, who is lambasting the movies, asked O'Dwyer over the air if there were truth to the story that he would replace Johnston.

Boom!

An unestimated number of films were damaged by fire and water in an explosion in New Orleans Oct. 22 in the film inspection room of Dixie Films, Inc. The blast blew out part of a two-inch partition on the third floor of a four-story building at 218 S. Liberty Street.

The damaged plaster wall, which was reinforced with a steel webb, separated the film inspection room of Dixie Films, and a poster storeroom of F. F. Goodrow, distributor of novelty films. There were no people in either room at the time of the explosion. Dixie Films District Manager Robert A. Kelly said that damage to the films by fire and water could not be immediately determined. Cause of the explosion was not known.

Wilby-Kincey Paramount Deal Reported Reached

Paramount this week appeared to be nearing the close of a deal by which it would acquire the 50 per cent interest held by its partner in the Wilby-Kincey circuit of approximately 140 theatres in Alabama, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

Reports from Atlanta quoted a Paramount Theatre spokesman as saying that while the deal had not been actually signed, an agreement had been reached by which Paramount would take over on Jan. 1, 1950 and both Kincey and Wilby would continue as operating heads. The deal is similar to that reached by Paramount with E. V. Richards over the Paramount-Richards circuit in the Gulf area. Here also Paramount takes over full ownership with officials of Paramount Richards remaining in operating charge. In the Wilby-Kincey deal, Paramount, to live up to the consent decree, must release about 48 of the 140 theatres. Paramount owned 50 per cent of the Wilby-Kincey chain and while the purchase price involved in the proposed transfer was not mentioned, it is thought to be in the neighborhood of $3,500,000 and includes contracts with Wilby-Kincey officials for their services at high-salaried figures.

Memphis Strand Goes 1st Run Under Paramount

Memphis' Strand became a first-run house under the Paramount Theatre banner Thursday night with "My Friend Irma" as the first picture under the new policy. The house was formerly part of the Malco Circuit and passed to Paramount under the partnership dissolution.

Attending the opening were Paramount Theatres Service Corporation Vice-President Robert Weitman; South Central Division Manager M. R. (Duke) Clark, and Memphis Branch Manager M. C. McClintock.

To Confer

Weitman is expected to confer here with officials of the Paramount subsidiary—Tenarken Paramount Corporation, which will operate eight additional theatres in Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky which were once part of the Malco chain.

Foresees Brilliant Future

it on a summer's night, broke records with $318.

Today Savini finds that the greatest change in 45 years has been the improvement in theatres—in buildings, seats, decorations, atmosphere, in projection.

Theatres in the early days, he recalls, were flimsy structures, often with wooden benches, sometimes located on second floors of buildings. Booths were not fireproof, the film ran through the projector and was gathered in a barrel.

"We used acetylene gas to light the picture," he remarks.

Only one projector was in use, necessitating delays while the reel was changed for which the management apologized on slides carrying the legend:

"One Moment, Please."

And the films were short, with sometimes two or three subjects included on a 10-minute reel.

Exhibitors, as today, ranged from the stolid types, to the unpredictable genius. In one southern city where a canny exhibitor ran a fruit stand before his theatre, Savini sold a combined bill of "The Passion Play" and a Charles Chaplin. The exhibitor didn't have enough space on his ad board so he billed the picture as:

"The Passion Play"
Featuring J. Christ and Charles Chaplin.

Motor-Driven

On another occasion in Laurel, Miss., Savini noticed the operator had climbed out of his booth and had joined them on the sidewalk to talk.

"Who's running the projector?" he asked the 16-year old youth."

"Motor driven," the boy replied. Savini hauled himself up to the booth where he found the boy had utilized two butter tubs, some sewing machine cable, running to a small motor, and a shaft, which had been squared at one end, to make anautomatic drive for the projector. The smaller tub ran faster and was used for action pictures; the larger ran slower for the more emotional drama.

Later Savini spoke to the Powers projector people and they sent an engineer to look at the device. Eventually Powers brought out a motor-driven projector, but the Laurel experiment, as far as Savini knows, was the first power projector anywhere.

"I don't see how we can improve much further," he reflects today. "We can get an advancement in projection, possibly third dimension. We may get an advancement in color."

Good Old Days

As to showmanship, Savini believes that there's always too little of it, but that it certainly existed in the early days. At the time he recalls there was no paper to advertise the "supers." So distributor showmen bought all the paper they could from the traveling stage companies, cut out the figures, pasted them on cloth and lettered in the name of the movie attraction.

The paper was more carefully guarded than the film. And when it wasn't returned, that was serious with a capital S.

One exhibitor in a southern city was particularly remiss in this matter. So remiss that Savini clambered aboard a day coach and rode up to see him. The exhibitor was apologetic.

He placed the paper out in front the day before the picture was booked, he explained, and at night the cows, presumably attracted by the smell of the paste, came up and ate the displays.

"Cover your paper with chicken wire," advised Savini.

The exhibitor did. And after that Savini got his paper back.

Curfew Fines

Barney Fraundorf, chief of police in Granite City, Ill. has ordered strict enforcement of the city's curfew ordinance in an attempt to curb delinquency and vandalism among juveniles of the city, according to a St. Louis report. The curfew ordinance applies to girls under 15 and boys under 14, who are subject to fines of $1 to $10, while parents who knowingly permit their children to violate the law may be fined from $1 to $25 for each offense. The ordinance has been in effect since 1911 but there hasn't been any real attempt at enforcement of its provisions for many years.

Showmen Wary of Problem Films

are going to have so many of those pictures, that the public will be flooded with them, then the public will get tired of them."

Another exhibitor who finds that problem pictures have an audience, but is skeptical of how many should be made is Ed Lachman of Boonton, N. J.

"There's a market for a certain number of them," Lachman declared, "but my view is that the accent should be on family entertainment. Certainly the other (problem) pictures are worthy of screentime. But a family I was talking to the other night said they had enough problems in every day life." Lachman added the problem pictures had paid off to date, but also expressed fear of a cycle, remarking:

"When you get a whole cycle of them, you know what will happen!"

Exhibitors in the main share this view, with some variations. Southern exhibitors, it is no surprise to learn, have some reservations over booking pictures which deal with Negro themes. But a New Jersey exhibitor expressed a similar reservation. He frankly said that he had not booked one of the Negro theme pictures because he had only a small theatre and he anticipated that the film would draw a large audience of Negroes. If it did, he remarked, they would crowd into his orchestra seats and create the impression that he was running a Negro theatre, which, inferentially, would hurt his business in the future.

NEWSREEL CLIPS

Judicial Back Pat

Not only did exhibitors of Brunswick, Ga., succeed in beating that town's box-office tax, as reported previously by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, but a perusal of the decision handed down by the state supreme court reveals that the motion picture industry in the Peach Tree state enjoys high esteem among the judges of the high court. Here is part of the decision dealing with the history of taxes on amusements:

"Before the day of the moving picture shows as we know them today, there was a time when the show business was almost exclusively circus shows and other itinerant shows. Then the show business . . . could be, and was, classed along with bar rooms, pool halls and other like businesses. . . .

"Not so with the moving picture shows of today. It has become as stable and permanent and as much a part of the business world as the grocery store and drug store; and the power of the municipality to regulate it is no broader than that applying to business concerns of that kind."

Honor Kramer

A plaque citing "Home of the Brave" for presenting "a courageous and vital view of the great dilemma in American life," was presented to Stanley Kramer in New York Tuesday night by the Anti-Defamation League. New York Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink, ADL national chairman, made the presentation to Peggy Ann Garner, who received it for Kramer.

Pittman Opens 1900-Seater

The 1900-seat stadium-type Pitt Theatre opened in Lake Charles, La., last Thursday, becoming the largest theatre in that city. The house is operated by the Pittman Company, a circuit which has houses in New Orleans and Baton Rouge and is headed by T. A. Pittman.

Turk Carter Heads Variety Convention Group

Norman L. (Turk) Carter, general manager of the Paramount-Richards circuit in New Orleans, has been named executive committee chairman for the 14th convention of the Variety Clubs International to be held in New Orleans April 26-29, 1950, International Chief Barker R. J. O'Donnell announced this week.

Carter will recruit a committee of 25 New Orleans exchange area men to work out plans for the banquet which will bring the 37 tents of the organization together and will meet during January with Seymour Weiss, managing director of the Roosevelt Hotel, serving as vice-chairman of the executive committee and chairman of the Humanitarian award banquet which will climax the four-day convention.

'Pinky' to Play Atlanta Roxy

Twentieth Century-Fox's "Pinky," which deals with a "pass" Negress in the south, has been booked into the Roxy Theatre at Atlanta, following approval by Censor Christine Smith after certain deletions had been made. Miss Smith continued to refuse approval to Film Classics' "Lost Boundaries" which deals with a similar Negro theme.

In announcing her approval, Miss Smith said she was sorry Hollywood had started to make racial pictures. The Roxy usually does not play first-run but was used because it has a large Negro balcony.

Erskine Forms Producing Firm

Formation of Chester Erskine Productions, with plans to produce a series of features was announced in New York recently by Chester Erskine, formerly Universal writer-director, who produced "The Egg and I." A. Pam Blumenthal, Wall Street contact on numerous film deals, is president of the new company on an exclusive basis. First picture is to be "My Wife, the Celebrity," a comedy.

It's Winter Now

Ninety per cent of the drive-ins in the Buffalo area closed during the week, thereby officially proclaiming the arrival of winter after a fine Indian summer enabled them to sell tickets right through October. Several under-skyers put on farewell parties in the nature of Halloween shows, with Exhibitors Bill Brett and Bill Rosenow of the Skyway at Athol Springs, giving free cider, apples and popcorn to their patrons.

Skouras Defends Daylight Stand

Claiming that Daylight Saving Time in California "can't be stopped" because "everyone wants it," National Theatres Chief Charles Skouras this week in San Francisco defended both himself and the advanced summer time from attacks launched by the Citizens Committee against Daylight Saving Time.

The committee, which numbers exhibitors among its members, including drive-in operators, had attacked trailers Skouras was exhibiting in his theatres, terming them "a $12,000 movie trailer dreaming up propaganda virtues for the often defeated law."

Skouras, in defending his support for a daylight saving amendment which goes to the voters on Nov. 8, declared this was "the first time in his life that he had answered back charges made against him, and listed the following points which he said favored setting the clock ahead in summer:

1) California is becoming a greater industrial state and industry can use an extra hour of life.

2) The extra daylight will help the state's large tourist trade.

3) Business is stimulated by closer synchonization in time with other national centers of industry.

4) Daylight saving time will lessen traffic hazards.

5) With an hour more for children's play, juvenile delinquency will fall.

6) Business conditions for theatres will be generally better under Daylight Saving Time as evidenced by past trials.

Drive-Ins Affected?

Unconfirmed reports from California indicated that some exhibitors with under-roofers, have swung from opposing the change in time to supporting it because they felt it might lessen drive-in competition. This reports gains some credence when it is noted that several of the exhibitors on the Citizens Committee Against Daylight Saving are under-sky operators.

Universal to Make 30 'A' Films in 1950

Universal International this week announced a production program for 1950 which would consist of 30 "A" pictures, or five more than were produced in 1950.

Of these 30, studio chiefs said, 12 would be designed as "extended-run attractions." They are: "Harvey," "Song of Norway," "The World in his Arms," "Up Front with Mauldin," "Desert Legion," "The Milkman," "Frenchie," "Air Cadet,' "I Love Louisa," "Tomahawk," "Winchester 73" and "Deported."

The program was announced during conferences held in Hollywood by President Nate Blumberg, Sales Chief W. A. Scully and Production Heads Leo Spitz and William Goetz.

Yates Increases British Staff; To Offer Full Release Program

In the belief that Great Britain will offer splendid opportunities for American films in 1950, Republic has added a special staff of 10 representatives to its sales forces in that country and will for the first time in recent years offer its entire current release schedule to British exhibitors, President Herbert Yates revealed this week.

Herbert Yates

This means that Republic will put 32 features, 24 westerns, six serials, six one-reelers in color and possibly some reissues on the British market, whereas in the past it had held its schedule down to its features and the Roy Rogers specials.

Yates based his assumption that business will be good on the belief that British production has sung its swan song and the British quota has collapsed. On the question of quota he says that excepting for the two major circuits—ABC and Rank—exhibitors have practically nullified the system by seeking and receiving exemptions as hardship cases.

The 10 special representatives, Yates said, would be headed by C. Bruce Newberry and would work out of the British Lion offices, which would handle Republic in England, but would not be answerable to British Lion and would apparently concentrate on the extra product.

Yates said that his company's foreign production plans include the possibility of making two Roy Rogers in Scotland, one film in Egypt with the advice of Orson Welles, another in Italy and a fifth in Switzerland. This would cut down Republic Hollywood production, he said, by approximately five pictures. As to British production, he thought it doomed.

"I think it has collapsed already," he remarked. "The production costs are too much. They haven't a world market and I doubt if they could sell them if they had a world market. Two pictures come over and make money and that's it. . . . "

Yates estimated Republic's frozen funds in Britain to be around $500,000 and said the company would not distribute any British imports in 1950 as past experience had proved its sales force was not equal to the problem. He suggested that if Hollywood labor unions, which he said had money, wanted American companies to cease production abroad, that they buy up the companies' frozen funds and thereby indemnify them against the loss which they might otherwise take if they did not use their frozen funds for foreign production. Yates indicated that he did not like the idea of producing outside the United States, "because it's a headache," but that as long as funds were involved, it would be continued.

"I think you're going to see more of it," he remarked of production outside the United States.

"Macbeth," he said was now being redubbed and should be ready for the early part of 1950.

"It's a good picture," he remarked of a film which has been a Republic problem, "If we could only put a title on it like 'The World's First Gangster' we wouldn't have any trouble with it."

'Popcorn-Conscious South' Claims Nation's Theatre Consumption Lead

Now it's New Orleans putting in a claim for the south on the crackling subject of popcorn, with two theatre managers of that city contending that more popcorn is sold in theatres of the magnolia and sweet potato and rice area than in any other section of the country. The city of New Orleans itself is no slouch either when it comes to the salty confection sold, it is pointed out.

E. A. MacKenna, manager of the first-run Joy explains the claim with the remark, "people are more popcorn conscious in the south."

Mr. MacKenna does not attribute this to the gourmet knowledge of a folk accustomed to pompano en papillotte as well as hog and hominy and cold boiled crabs with beer. It is, he thinks, because the southern exhibitor has pushed popcorn sales more vigorously than his brethren in other sections of the country. "They are more aware of the value of the concession business," MacKenna declared. (Angry mutterings from Boston, Milwaukee, Chicago, Minneapolis, San Francisco and Los Angeles are reaching hurricane proportions.)

J. V. Dostal, city manager for RKO's Orpheum, also thinks that more popcorn is sold in southern theatres than elsewhere. Mr. Dostal is an exponent of the theory that people like to bite on something besides their lips when a picture gets exciting and that if theatres didn't sell popcorn, the audience would buy it before they went to the movie, a circumstance which might almost mean a calamity in exhibition.

New Orleans theatre managers believe that children eat more popcorn than grownups, but not necessarily with more noise and that certain types of pictures affect the popcorn appetites of adults. Action pictures, they say, boost sales. But there is no rumor to the report that one subsequent-run exhibitor went shopping for a Roy Rogers to get his concession counter out of the red.

Filmack Buys Plant

Filmack this week announced purchase of the quarters it has been occupying during the past 12 years—a 16,000-square foot area building originally built by Paramount as an exchange and boasting of an entrance which is a replica of the entrance to Paramount studios. The purchase price was not disclosed by President Irving Mack in his announcement.

Dual-Use Popcorn

Believe it or not but popcorn has more uses than one in New Orleans where patrons in the Orpheum, finding that the cooling system was pumping too much cool air up from the floor for the happiness of their feet, seemed to have bought popcorn boxes, chewed up the contents and placed the boxes over the vents to block off the cold air.

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

Town Morale Low, So Dandrea Holds A Football Rally

The season had gotten off to a poor start for the Bridgeton, N. J., high school football team. There had been two straight losses. Morale was low. And coming up was the invasion of Collingswood High, one of the strongest grid machines in South Jersey, with a record of 15 consecutive victories.

Can you think of anything worse? The team felt low. The town felt low. Oh, what was the use?

Something had to be done. And who do you think set about doing it? Not this leading citizen; not that leading citizen. It had to be a man trained in the importance of taking an active interest in community affairs—religion, educational and civic.

Nothing to guess about now. It had to be a theatre manager. And it was.

With the assistance of the Bridgeton Merchant's Association, Manager Dan Dandrea of the Stanley Theatre contacted school authorities and made his house available for a peprally to show the team that the town was still behind it despite two straight losses.

And so one morning recently the Stanley doors were thrown open wide to all Bridgeton-

'King's Men' Author Here for Premiere

Robert Penn Warren, author of the Pulitzer prize-winning novel, "All the King's Men," was scheduled to arrive in New York Thursday to attend the world premiere of Columbia's screen version of his book at the Victoria Theatre on Nov. 8.

While in the big city Warren is also slated to be heard on a number of important radio programs, discussing the film, and will be interviewed by representatives of New York newspapers and syndicates.

HALLOWEEN TOYS.. Kiddies of St. Albans, L. I., had a lot of fun at Manager Leonard Tuttle's Halloween Party at the St. Albans Theatre. They all received comic books and competed for the toys shown above, which Tuttle promoted from local merchants.

Students on Parade For 'Fullback' Comedy

Manager Jack McDougall of the Fox Theatre, Oakland, Calif., in cooperation with the local Rhonda Fleming Fan Club, invited the Oakland Technical High School football team and rooters to the opening day of "Father Was a Fullback."

The gang formed a parade at the school and marched to the theatre, with a band playing football songs and the youngsters wearing rooters' caps. The excitement and sound furnished lively exploitation for McDougall's engagement of the comedy and launched a successful run.

Wilcoxon Suspends Tour

Henry Wilcoxon this week suspended his nationwide ballyhoo tour for "Samson and Delilah" upon doctor's orders.

CIRCUS FRONT FOR 'SAVAGE SPLENDOR.' Utilizing practically every inch of facade space, the management of the Melba Theatre, Dallas, created a circus-like display for RKO Radio's "Savage Splendor." There was plenty of color and "sensationalism" in the colorful front. The theatre also had a man dressed in Zulu costume and beating a drum, but he apparently had gone hunting when the above picture was taken.

Boston Campaign Sets Pattern for Drama, Comedy

A campaign on Eagle Lion's dual bill of "Trapped" and "Down Memory Lane" which many exhibitors throughout the country will follow as a pattern, adapting some features to the requirements of their locations, was set up at the Pilgrim and Mayflower theatres in Boston, Mass., by EL Exploitation Chief Lige Brien and Paul Levi, publicity director of the two Boston houses. It was an out-of-the-ordinary campaign, embracing humor and fantasy as well as fact. The Treasury Department tieup made by EL Director of Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation Leon Brandt and his staff formed the basis for the "Trapped" part of the exploitation.

Private advance screenings were given for officials of the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Boys Club of America, Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Women's Clubs which assured widespread publicity as committee members of those groups distributed thousands of heralds throughout Boston, obtained photo layouts and announcements on all school and club bulletin boards and invited specially prepared lecturers to address various club meetings on the counterfeiting of U. S.

Special Selling Aids Offered on 'Heiress'

Three special selling aids have been developed by Paramount for theatres playing "The Heiress." The first is a special 40 x 60 poster stating that the theatre has "exclusive first-run showing" of the picture, which is to be displayed as far ahead of the engagement as possible. Another poster states that no one is to be seated during the last seven minutes of the picture in order to receive full satisfaction from the suspenceful ending. Also available is a special advance trailer announcing the theatre's exclusive first-run showing. The 40 x 60s are available on request from the Paramount Press Book Editor and the company's branches.

'Free for All' Bows At Warner, Milwaukee

Backed by an all-out promotional plan, the world premiere of Universal-International's "Free for All" was scheduled to take place Friday (4) at the Warner Theatre in Milwaukee, with Ann Blyth, co-starred with Robert Cummings in the film, making a personal appearance. Miss Blyth arrived in Milwaukee Tuesday for several days of advance publicity and exploitation appearances.

Mixed Nuts

"It's the nuts," said Bernie Depa's herald for a special laff-show at the State in Lexington, Ky. "We're nuts, too," said the Renfro Valley Nut Hut, a store specializing in the edible variety, in a cost-paying ad at the bottom of the herald.

ians. In attendance were 1,500 Bridgeton High students who marched to the theatre in orderly fashion and took part in an hour-long pep-rally.

"The pupils themselves conducted the first part of the program," according to a news report in the Bridgeton Evening News, "staging a mock burial of Collingswood with appropriate ceremonies being performed over the Colls' 'body' and going through a spirited cheering session which virtually shook the building.

"Dandrea informed the team of the manner in which everyone was behind it, then introduced Judge David L. Horuvitz, who reminded the team of various major college upsets that stunned the entire nation, putting the Bulldogs in the position of being able to do the same thing on a local basis.

"A series of films showing the top plays from the outstanding college games of recent years, several including Bridgeton's own Bob Deuber and Harry Wettlaufer, completed the rally."

Both Dandrea and the merchants were highly praised by Rowland H. Mulford, superintendent of city schools, who referred to the fact that for the first time it was possible for all of the high school students to participate in a pre-grid rally at the same time.

Results of the Bridgeton-Collingswood game are not known. But, win or lose, the students and townsfolk were grateful to Showmen Dandrea for making it possible to whip up enthusiasm for the big game.

Hevia Wins Reade Showmanship Award

Guy Hevia, city manager of Walter Reade theatres in Asbury Park, N. J., won the circuit's "Manager of the Month" award in August for his special work on the premiere engagements of "I Was a Male War Bride" and "Sword in the Desert." First prize in the circuit's "Candy Stand of the Month" competition went to Mrs. Ann DeRagon, manager of the Paramount, Plainfield, N. J.

In the showmanship contest, second prize was split between Thomas Phelan, manager of the Strand in Long Branch, and William Knauss, Park, Morristown. Candy stand second prize went to the Majestic, Perth Amboy, and third to the Park, Morristown.

Pre-Tested Campaign Folder on 'GI Joe'

A campaign brochure embracing "the cream of pre-tested promotion angles and showing exhibitors how they can line up the mass strength of local veterans' groups behind their playdates" has been prepared on Eagle Lion's reissue of "The Story of GI Joe" by the company's advertising - publicity - exploitation departments under the direction of National Director Leon Brandt. The folder has been planned so that the veterans' section, listing all the stunts and promotions which the veterans' groups themselves are to work out, can be detached and given to the veterans for their own guidance.

Napkins, Shopping Bags

Ten thousand imprinted table set-up napkins and 5,000 imprinted shopping bags were used by Lou Cohen, manager of Loew's Poli, Hartford, Conn., to promote "Father Was a Fullback."

CLAYTON-NUTT'S FOYER DISPLAY. With a cutout of Esther Williams, amidst tropical foliage, as the center of attraction, flanked on either side by attraction boards containing star and scene stills, Manager H. Clayton-Nutt of the Broadway Cinema, Eccles, England, had an eye-catching display on MGM's "On An Island With You." Clayton-Nutt, by the way, put over a swell campaign on the picture (see below), which did a better Saturday business than "Easter Parade."

Briton Licked Weather, Football, With Energetic 'Island' Campaign

A run for "On an Island With You" that took in fully 25 per cent above average and enjoyed a better Saturday than the magnificent "Easter Parade" was experienced in Eccles, England, and this in the face of extremely uncomfortable weather and a pair of important football matches. The success was the result of an energetic campaign—listed in an attractive report under no less than 18 headings—by Manager H. Clayton-Nutt of the Broadway Theatre.

Events make news and no less than three sizable events were arranged by this showman. Most impressive, perhaps, was a Mayor's reception, with that official and some 30 guests attending a tea party in honor of MGM's 25th anniversary. The event that directly touched most people took place on the Broadway's stage, where for a week prior to playdate local lassies posed in bathing suits and were measured for comparison with the film's star, Esther Williams. If there's any doubt about British tastes, let it be noted that this event led all else newspaper-wise, with the Eccles Advertiser using a pair of photos. An Esther Williams dance was held the Saturday night prior to playweek.

Pulchritude Parade

Gramophone records played during the pulchritude parade and at the time of mass audience exits enabled the manager to address the public about the coming movies at the same time he went about his other duties. Their rapid manufacture by an Eccles concern, incidentally, provided another newspaper angle. Also hitting the public right at the theatre were flags and streamers, a floodlit cutout and product tie-in showcases.

Impregnated With Scent

A soap company had cards imprinted with film copy and impregnated with the scent of their product. A group of cooperative stores printed 6,000 slips with film copy for insertion in tea and sugar bags and various ads paid for 4,500 leaflets using the MGM star gallery photo and plugging "Island." The cooperatives and six hairdressers used window tieups and 30 shops used door-cards which notified "We close tonight at 5:30 P.M. sharp because we're going to see (etc.)." A tie-up about the Isle of Man had posters near the railway station.

Cost to the Broadway of the whole extensive campaign was less than £10. It paid, says Clayton-Nutt, and apparently it did enable him to collect the sheckels in Eccles.

Bond for Baby

Manager John DiBenedetto of Loew's Broad, Columbus, Ohio, presented a $25 U. S. Savings bonds to Jack Lininger, star center of the Ohio State football team, to give to the expected addition to the Lininger family. The baby, whom Lininger hoped would be a boy and become a fullback, was expected to be born about the time "Father Was a Fullback" opened at the Broad. Stunt broke the papers, with art.

Prizes for 'Reporters' In 'Deadline' Contest

They're doing this one in New York. But it could probably also be done in your town, with perhaps a variation or two.

The New York Journal American has a long-standing policy of providing bonuses to readers who supply news tips and photos for publication. (Now if this is not true of the paper in your town, don't worry, the stunt is still good.)

Well, Paramount has made a tieup with the Journal American whereby the former will supplement the bonus during the first week's run of "Chicago Deadline" at the Paramount Theatre with a prize of a portable typewriter each day to the person who submits the best story or picture. A grand prize of a 1949 Austin two-door sedan will be awarded to the person who submits the best story or picture during the contest's duration.

The newspaper, of course, is affording the promotion liberal news and feature space, and a display of prizes and feature coverage will be set up in the lobby of the theatre.

Better grab hold of this idea and use it when you play "Chicago Deadline."

Veterans' Fathers Sponsor 'Menace'

Solid exploitation embracing the use of many varied slants was used by James C. Skelly, manager of Warners' Ohio Theatre in Sidney, Ohio, in his campaign on "The Red Menace."

Skelly arranged for the production to be "sponsored" by the Dads of Foreign Service Veterans in Sidney, and E. W. Moon, president of this organization, provided valuable assistance in obtaining publicity breaks and merchant co-operation.

A gratis two-color co-op page advertisement publicizing the picture was provided by local stores as a patriotic gesture. In addition, the Dads of Foreign Service Veterans arranged for an advance ticket sale, with tickets available at banks, Savings and Loan associations, restaurants, insurance agencies and the Shelby County Fair.

A stunt that garnered lots of attention was worked by having the film met at the railroad station by an escort of policemen, who delivered it to the theatre with a procession of siren-screaming police cars. A newspaper photographer waiting at the theatre took a shot of the mayor, Manager Skelly and the armed guards which was printed in the next day's paper. Members of the National Guard in full uniform patrolled the lobby and guarded the projection booth during the run of the picture—an angle good for town-wide word-of-mouth publicity.

Strong support for the campaign was also registered by religious groups in town. A Roman Catholic Church released students from homework to see the picture and make a written report on it for school study. The local Methodist and Lutheran churches plugged it in their church bulletins. Letters were sent to all ministers in Shelby County requesting their support of the picture, and they unanimously responded by encouraging their congregations to see it.

Mayor Helps Open New Show Season

Nothing like inaugurating a show season in style, with no less than the mayor participating!

That's what William Monnat did at Darnells Rialto Theatre in Massena, N. Y.

You see, Monnat prevailed upon Mayor Jerry Reagan to officially open the Rialto's "Only the Best in Motion Pictures" season.

How was it done?

Well, Monnat posed with the mayor in front of the theatre while the mayor apparently carried a container with a print of the Rialto's first film of the new season, "Sword in the Desert." The title was clearly painted on the container. A local newspaper photographer was on hand.

Result: a newspaper publicity photo captioned "Mayor Opens New Picture Season."

Good publicity, and something you ought to be able to do, too.

Goes All Out for 'Love Happy' in 'Frisco

The United Artists Theatre in San Francisco went all out on extensive tieups for the Marx Bros. comedy, "Love Happy." Included were personal appearances of Harpo and other stars at the opening of the new section of the Macy Store, radio announcements and commercial tie-ins.

COLD SEAT. I.M.P.S. Member Joe Brite, manager of the Rialto, Alamosa, Colo., had a happy promotion idea when he placed on a 300-pound ice cake in front of the theatre a cut-out of the eye-appealing, bathing-suited figure of Esther Williams from the "Neptune's Daughter" six-sheet as the basis for a guessing contest for that MGM picture. Ten pairs of passes were offered for those guessing nearest to the day and time of day when the 300 pounds of ice would melt away. Closest guess was but two hours ahead of the actual melting time.

Series of 'Battleground' Premieres Start Nov. 9

The invitational preview-premiere of MGM's "Battleground" at Loew's Capitol Theatre in Washington on Nov. 9 will launch a series of other premieres of the film.

First showings to the general public will take place simultaneously in New York, and Bastogne, Belgium, on Nov. 10. General Maxwell Taylor, commanding officer of American troops in Europe, has been invited to attend the Bastogne openings at the General Patton and Ardennes theatres.

On Nov. 11 four cities in the Belgian area menaced by the Germans in their Bastogne drive will start the picture. These cities are Liege, Antwerp and Brussels, Belgium; and Luxembourg, Luxembourg.

Producer Dore Schary, Writer Robert Pirosh and players Denise Darcel, George Murphy and John Hodiak will be guests at both the Washington preview-premiere and the American premiere in New York. Director William A. Wellman is unable to leave Hollywood, where he is making "You're Only Young Twice."

Schary will be in New York about two weeks during which time he will meet with trade paper editors and reporters and speak at a seminar at Town Hall for the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. He will also take part in a Town Hall meeting on another visit there. While in Washington, Schary will address the National Women's Press Club and also attend a dinner at which Eric Johnston, MPA president, will be host.

Registers Out-of-Towners For His Mailing List

A small table with a note book has been placed in the lobby of the Meriden Theatre at Meriden, Conn., by Paul S. Purdy, general manager of the Kournaris-Tolis-Ulyssis Theatres in Meriden and Newington as a means of keeping out-of-town patrons in touch with the attractions at the Meriden. Near the table is a small sign requesting out-of-towners to register their names and addresses in order that the theatre programs may be mailed to them. By this method the Meriden's mailing list keeps growing, with the result that patronage from nearby communities also continues to increase.—HFD.

Boston Campaign Sets the Pattern

money, that being the theme of "Trapped."

Large frames depicting spurious money, borrowed from the Treasury Department for display purposes, were placed in the city's public libraries and in the lobbies of both theatres which drew crowds throughout the day and evening, studying the various samples of counterfeit money. Double-page photo layouts appeared in the Boston newspapers as well as editorials, in addition to the usual stills and announcements. Radio station WHDH got a luggage dealer to sponsor a contest for the best letter detailing the moment when "you were 'Trapped' without your luggage," offering more than 100 pieces of luggage as prizes.

"Down Memory Lane," a feature reviving several old Mack Sennett comedies including the early Bing Crosby two-reelers, gave full scope for zany exploition stunts, such as outlandish costumes, five men on stilts dressed as were the Sennett Keystone Cops placed at strategic street intersections, and the oldest jalopies to be found in Boston which were filled with bathing beauties in the period costumes of around 1920. The bathing beauty motorcade proved a traffic-stopper. Newspaper feature writers seized upon these old nostalgic screen comedies to prepare features on the stars of the old comedies embedded in "Down Memory Lane," and did not overlook the chase which was featured in most of them, nor the custard-pie slinging which evoked guffaws from movie patrons of that day. Radio lent a hand by playing the early Crosby recordings of songs with plenty of credits to "Down Memory Lane."

Critics Invited to N. Y. For 'Samson' Preview

Drama and motion picture editors and critics of nine cities east of the Mississippi have been invited to New York by Max E. Youngsteim, Paramount director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, for a series of preview showings of "Samson and Delilah" and interviews with Producer Cecil B. DeMille. Two screenings have been set for Nov. 11 and 14 at the Museum of Modern Art—the former for the press, the latter for radio people.

Editors and critics from the following papers have been invited: Buffalo Courier Express and News; Albany Knickerbocker News and Times Union; Boston Globe, Herald Traveler, Post, Record American and Advertiser; New Haven Journal Courier and Register; Philadelphia Inquirer, Bulletin and News; Baltimore American, News Post and Sun; Washington News, Post, Star and Times Herald; Cincinnati Enquirer, Post and Times Star; Cleveland News, Press and Plain Dealer.

Bregoff Dines Aides Who Helped Win Drive Award

Manager Spencer Bregoff of the Fabian Palace, Port Richmond, S. I., who won the second award for the metropolitan district (Brooklyn, Port Jervis, Middletown and Staten Island) in the Fabian Theatres 35th anniversary jubilee during the month of August, recently gave a dinner and party at Gus's Restaurant in Port Richmond to his entire staff of 18, including projectionists, who helped him put over the many attendance-promotion stunts that won second prize for him.

The Threat

RKO Radio Gangster Drama 65 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) This gripping gangster melodrama with a ruthless killer running rampant i suspenseful entertainment for general audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Though it has no name draw, this offering can be considered a minor league "White Heat" and so should bring in satisfactory grosses wherever gangster dramas have a following.

Cast: Michael O'Shea, Virginia Grey, Charles McGraw, Julie Bishop, Frank Conroy, Robert Shayne, Anthony Caruso, Don McGuire, Frank Richards, Michael McHale. Credits: Directed by Felix Feist. Screenplay by Hugh King and Dick Irving Hyland from a story by Hugh King. Photography, Harry J. Wild. Produced by Hugh King.

Plot: A convict escapes from prison and seeks vengeance on the people responsible for his incarceration.

Comment: This is a minor league "White Heat" because of lack of names and less costly production values. Otherwise, it is just as gripping a story, has just as tough a leading character and violence running rampant. The well-contrived screenplay by Hugh King and Dick Irving Hyland gives the picture plenty of gripping suspense; so much, in fact, that most spectators will find themselves perched on the edge of their seats more than once, as the action unfolds. The title role is played by newcomer Charles McGraw and he does an outstanding job as the ruthless killer. Only here and there does one get the feeling that he is acting. Most of the time his performance is so natural that he doesn't seem to be acting at all. Plight of Michael O'Shea and Frank Conroy, captured detective and district attorney upon whom the ex-con has sworn vengeance, provides most of the apprehension and suspense, and this holds true for Virginia Grey, the convict's ex-girl friend. Supporting players have been well-chosen, each conntributing good characterizations. Capable direction by Felix Feist keeps the story moving and the suspense at a high pitch throughout. Production credit goes to Hugh King, who wrote the story and collaborated on the screenplay. Exploitation possibilities and word-of-mouth should arouse interest and result in satisfactory grosses wherever gangster dramas have a following.

Captain China

Paramount Drama 97 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT (Family) Cram-jammed with action, this typhoon thriller is guaranteed to hold audiences spellbound due to capable production, direction and acting and particularly to the very realistic photography of a typhoon at its worst.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A good bet for any theatre, with the typhoon the real "hero." Exhibitors should center campaigns on the storm, the several good marquee names and, for the women, the "choppy" love story.

Cast: John Payne, Gail Russell, Jeffrey Lynn, Lon Chaney, Edgar Bergen, Michael O'Shea, Ellen Corby, Robert Armstrong, John Qualen, Ilka Gruning, and, as seamen: Lawrence Tibbett, Jr., Paul Hogan, John Bagni, Denver Pyle, Walter Reed, Don Gazzaniga, Reed Howes, Lee Roberts, Wally Scott and Charlie Regan. Credits: Produced by William H. Pine and William C. Thomas. Directed by Lewis H. Foster. Photography by John Alton. Screenplay by Lewis R. Foster and Gwen Bagni from a story by John and Gwen Bagni. Song, Oh, Brandy, Leave Me Alone, by Josef Marais. Musical score, Lucien Cailliet.

Plot: In a typhoon in the China Seas, John Payne, "Captain China," saves the ship commanded by his former mate, Jeffrey Lynn, who swore Payne had set a wrong course and driven his vessel upon rocks. Lynn then promises to tell the truth, that he himself had changed the course when Payne was drunk. On board are two sailors, Lon Chaney and John Qualen, who had locked Payne in his cabin and believed he had perished in the sinking of his ship. They plan to kill him, but Chaney is crushed to death by an engine in the hold that the storm has loosened. Love story is between Payne and a passenger, Gail Russell, who deserts her fiance for him.

Comment: Cram-jammed with action, this Pine-Thomas thriller will hold audiences spellbound with the mighty struggle against a typhoon which threatens to engulf the sailing vessel on which John Payne takes passage to force his former mate, now Captain Jeffrey Lynn in command, to admit having wrecked his own vessel while drunk. The story, while somewhat far-fetched, is made altogether believable by the furious storm, good production, the generally excellent acting, and by the exceptionally good photography which covers every angle of the typhoon's savage strength with such apparent verity as almost to make seasick those witnessing it, though none of the passengers on the ship are so affected. The story, with first aid from the typhoon, keeps interest at a high pitch, and there is a rough-and-tumble fight between Payne and Lon Chaney which makes most land fights pale into near insignificance. Payne acts his role competently and with proper authority and wins audience sympathy which he seems often on the point of losing in his grudge against his former shipmates. Gail Russell is good to look at and acts with considerable charm as the heroine who gives her long-time fiance the go-by for Payne. Capable performances are turned in by Jeffrey Lynn, Robert Armstrong, Lon Chaney, Edgar Bergen, Ellen Corby, John Qualen and Michael O'Shea. "Captain China" is a good bet for every theatre, even for those with land-lubber patrons who shy away from most sea yarns. The storm is the real "hero" of the film, just as it was in Joseph Conrad's "Typhoon," to which "Captain China" should make a grateful bow. Exhibitors should play up the typhoon, the savage fight, the several good marquee names and, for the women, the "choppy" love story.

The File on Thelma Jordon

Paramount Drama 100 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Splendid peformances by a wisely-chosen cast headed by Barbara Stanwyck and Wendell Corey in tense, exciting situations providing edge-of-the-seat suspense, make this a powerful drama for any audience. Feminine patrons, in particular, will find it appealing, for it has some thrilling love scenes.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should attract considerable attention because of Miss Stanwyck's large following and the drawing power of the top cast names. A fine offering for any situation.

Cast: Barbara Stanwyck, Wendell Corey, Paul Kelly, Joan Tetzel, Stanley Ridges, Richard Rober, Minor Watson, Barry Kelley, Laura Elliot, Basil Ruysdael, Jane Novak, Gertrude W. Hoffman, Harry Antrim, Kate Lawson, Theresa Harris, Byron Barr, Geraldine Wall, Jonathan Corey, Robin Corey. Credits: Directed by Robert Siodmak. Screenplay by Ketti Frings. From a story by Marty Holland. Photography, George Barnes. Produced by Hal Wallis.

Plot: A jewel thief makes a play for an assistant district attorney so that he will be in a position to help her when she becomes involved in a planned jewel robbery. Instead, when she is arrested for murder and he ruins his future by weakening the prosecution's case, thus saving her from punishment, she dies because of her love for him.

Comment: Producer Hal Wallis has made a powerful drama with Barbara Stanwyck in the title role, a picture that should attract considerable attention because of the star's large following. Miss Stanwyck portrays a woman jewel thief whose plans go awry because love unexpectedly enters the field. There are splendid performances by a wisely-chosen cast in tense, exciting situations providing edge-of-the-seat suspense. Feminine audiences, in particular, will find the film appealing, for it has some thrilling love scenes. Co-star Wendell Corey is exceptionally fine as the assistant district attorney who becomes innocently enmeshed and then has to pay for his philandering. Paul Kelly turns in a smooth, capable job as the district attorney and Joan Tetzel, as Corey's wife and the mother of his two children, is appealing and proves herself a capable actress. Stanley Ridges, Richard Rober, Minor Watson and Basil Ruysdael, in supporting roles, impress with their convincing, thoroughly satisfying jobs of acting. Robert Siodmak's direction is excellent, for he manages to arouse sympathy for the transgressors, in spite of their failings.

Show Sense

Public Relations No Part-Time Job

This is written immediately after the close of the 40th Annual Convention of Tri-State (Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi) M.P.T.O. Convention in Memphis, Tennessee. It was a four-day shindig whose scope of discussions and determinations anent industry ills and corrective measures was best illustrated by "Bigs" who attended and/or addressed the assembly.

Without regard to industry importance or position on the program, here were some of Movieland's better informed personalities who gav liberally from their enviable treasures of experience to make each session elucidative and entertaining. After four days of getting their ears pounded with advice and admonition from such an imposing array of talent, it is needless to say that members and visitors alike left the convention with a better understanding of the importance of themselves and their business to the American way of life and the community responsibilities that go hand-in-hand with the holding of such an imposing post.

On of the many outstanding highlights of the session was the appearance of Memphis' famous woman judge, Camille Kelly, who gave out with some 30 minutes of highly enjoyable and extremely beneficial data about what the public (our customers) see in, expect from and hope for from the motion picture industry. Judge Kelly has been the subject of much national printed comment as a leading authority on juvenile delinquency. She is the author of many articles as well as "Delinquent Angels," a book of which she is extremely proud, and her remarks deserve every consideration as coming from a dependable and experienced source of constructive criticism. In a future discourse I hope to give you a small portion of the wealth of advice Judge Kelly handed out about how best to keep the theatre and its attractions foremost in the minds of its customers. Incidentally, Al Lichtman, after listening to a session of Judge Kelly's court, contracted for her life story to be made in celluloid.

Subjects Pointed to Show Importance of Public Relations

The subjects discussed ran the gamut,from the selection of story material in Hollywood to the making of the daily box-office report in Socktown, Hoophole County, with television, censorship, 16-mm., print condition, transportation, rental terms, production values and no end of other important subjects bowing to the importance of the newly embarked-upon public relations program. Practically every subject discussed was pointed to show the importance of public relations as a means of solidifying our position in the public minds and placing dependence on consistent effort in the interest of public good as the safest and surest manner of elevating box-office receipts and insuring long-range public favor.

So much was said that it's practically impossible to cover the subject and give credit to those responsible, for the remarks or ideas appearing in succeeding paragraphs. So-o-o, with a plea for forgiveness for not properly crediting the source, let's summarize:

The success of the Baltimore Co-op campaign, Sam Pinanski's Boston venture, the Arkansas Movie Parade of Sam Kirby directive, and others, seems to indicate that the best results accrue from effort in which ALL theatres in a community participate. Since the intent of these campaigns is to build goodwill for the industry as a whole—and in doing so increase box-office returns—all theatres should participate and all planning and effort directed toward a joint goal of better business for everybody. A joint campaign seems to offer the multiple advantages of many minds and many hands dividing the many details into such fragmentary portions that the participation of each is reduced to a minimum of work producing the maximum in results at minimum expense. That the many minds working on a single project will serve to eliminate the expensive and unproductive and confine effort to what-will-count-most-at-the-box-office is taken for granted. In addition, there is the added factor that if all have a say-so in what goes, all will be more enthused; and consequently work more intelligently and assiduously for the common good. That newspapers, radio and other media will lend a cooperative ear more readily to the clamor of many than to the plaint of the few is obvious. Show a combined front and you'll get combined cooperation on a scale that practically guarantees stimulation in the marts of pasteboard exchange.

From what is written above and from much that is being preached by disciples of the Industry Public Relations program, it may be construed that public relations is a part-time job that can be thoroughly accomplished on a once-in-a-while basis. Nothing could be further from the truth. It's just that we've been eating so high on the hog for such a long time that many of us have forgotten—and there are still more that never knew the importance of big "flash" periodic campaigns as a customer magnet. "Flash" campaigns, such as described above, only serve to mark the starting point of the kind of public relations program laid out at the TOA Convention in Los Angeles.

A consistently productive public relations program—and most certainly that is exactly what the industry expects from its combined effort—cannot be predicated on the activities or accomplishments of a "flash" campaign or on a series of "flash" campaigns. It cannot be conceived or perpetrated on a "hit or miss" basis. It must be born in an atmosphere of unselfish sincerity and, while many factors are germane in principle, every step must be designed and engineered to a community pattern that will reflect everlasting credit and build prestige for you, your theatre and the attractions that are your stock in trade. A good public relations program is not a part-time job but one of the plodding day-to-day variety that requires constant study and unrelenting attention to details. It must be pliable and maneuverable to fit the ever-changing format of public wishes and desires as they apply to the community you serve. Contrary to the impression conveyed in the various published stories about the TOA aims, it is impossible to lay a format or cast a design that will be wholly applicable to your theatre or the customer potential of your community.

You can only hope that TOA plans will be sufficiently comprehensive to generate ideas on the level of your local situation to enable you to blend your effort with the overall industry scheme. It is well to remember that you, as an individual, are totally incapable of enacting a good public relations program for your theatre and the community. You need help and lots of it. You need help from your civic clubs, from your newspaper, from the religious and fraternal groups. And above all you need the help of your cashiers, ushers, doormen, etc. The smile of your cashier, the courtesy of your service staff members, the pleasant appearance and friendly voice of your concession attendants are every bit as important—yes, even more so—than what you or visiting industry do-gooders

Coronet First New 'Frisco House in 15 Years

Giving San Francisco its first major theatre opening in 15 years, the San Francisco Theatres circuit of neighborhood houses opened its new Coronet Theatre this week. The deluxe house is the first conventional theatre to be newly constructed within the city in more than a decade. It seats 1,350 and is equipped with all-loge type seats, with the rocking-chair type featuring the majority. A special television auxiliary auditorium is maintained within the building for waiting patrons or those who wish to observe special events.

Walter Chenoweth, experienced showman and former manager of the Alexandria, is managing the new house.—SF.

tured cast whose names should be played up. Word-of-mouth will take care of the rest.

Cast: Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn, Judy Holliday, Tom Ewell, David Wayne, Jean Hagen, Hope Emerson, Eve March, Clarence Kolb, Emerson Treacy, Polly Moran, Will Wright, Elizabeth Flournoy. Credits: Directed by George Cukor. Screenplay by Ruth Gordon and Garson Kanin. Photography, George J. Folsey. Song: Farewell, Amanda by Cole Porter. Produced by Lawrence Weingarten.

Plot: A woman attorney and her assistant district attorney husband are antagonists in a "shooting-with-intent-to-kill" case. Strange goings-on in the court-room don't help the love between husband and wife, but it all ends happily after they arrive at the answer as to "who wears the pants?"

Comment: MGM has a definite box-office winner in this screwball, sophisticated comedy that brings back the co-starring team of Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn. The picture is loaded with laughs and laugh-provoking situations which occur so fast and frequently that much of the dialog is crowded out. Although the performances of Hepburn and Tracy are capable and convicing, they are seriously challenged by the work of the supporting players, especially Judy Holliday, who became famous when she starred in the Broadway play, "Born Yesterday." Making her screen debut, Miss Holliday reveals such remarkable acting talent and ability that she wins enthusiastic audience approval. Her performance here should put her at the top of the list of screen newcomers, and moviegoers will be eagerly awaiting the opportunity to see her again. Excellent also are Tom Ewell, as her two-timing husband, and Jean Hagen, as the other woman. Another newcomer from Broadway, David Wayne, also impresses in a manner that portends a successful screen future. Credit for the film's laugh-provoking entertainment values goes not only to the well-chosen cast but also to Ruth Gordon and Garson Kanin for their screenplay, to George Cukor for his skillful direction and to Producer Lawrence Weingarten for the completed production. There is little necessity for extra plugging of the two stars' names, but special emphasis should be placed on the supporting cast names, for there is little doubt but that they will attract considerable attention and bring in extra business, once word-of-mouth spreads.

Dancing in the Dark

20th-Fox Musical 92 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This film has about everything audiences want in their screen entertainment—comedy, good music, light and frothy dialog with a tug at the emotions, some spectacular settings, beautiful Technicolor photography and several masterly acting performances.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will draw the "tired" business men, the youthful seekers for romantic entertainment—in short, this is just what theatres need to attract crowds. Cast names alone should draw patrons in large numbers, but exhibitors also have exploitable angles in the Kaufman play on which the film is founded, charming sets, Technicolor photography and a romantic story acted to the hilt by outstanding players.

Cast: William Powell, Mark Stevens, Betsy Drake, Adolphe Menjou, Randy Stuart, Lloyd Corrigan, Hope Emerson, Walter Catlett, Don Beddoe; Jean Hersholt and Sid Grauman as themselves; Helen Westcott, Marion Marshall, Frank Ferguson, Charles Tannen, John Berkes, Harry Crocker and many others. Credits: Produced by Georgee Jessel. Directed by Irving Reis. Screenplay by Mary C. McCall, Jr., from Marion Turk's adaptation of the George S. Kaufman stage musical, "The Bandwagon." Lyrics by Howard Dietz. Music by Arthur Schwartz. Photography, Harry Jackson. Technicolor color consultant, Leonard Doss. Special photographic effects, Fred Sersen. Musical director, Alfred Newman.

Plot: William Powell, a down-and-out Hollywood star, hated by everyone ever associated with him, is sent by Studio Manager Adolphe Menjou to New York to induce Powell's former vaudeville partner, Walter Catlett, to allow Catlett's daughter, Randy Stuart, to star in a Hollywood musical. Powell ecounters Betsy Drake, recognizes her as his own daughter, gives her a tryout and books her for the 20th-Fox musical. There is hell to pay when Powell returns to the studio with Betsy and a signed contract, but he overcomes Menjou's opposition and is selected to direct Betsy in the musical.

Comment: "Dancing in the Dark" has about everything audiences want in their screen entertainment—comedy, some good music, light, frothy dialog with a tug at the emotions, beautiful Technicolor photography, several spectacular settings, topnotch direction and production, and excellent acting, masterly in the case of some old-timers in the cast—William Powell, Adolphe Menjou and Walter Catlett—and standout performances by two younger players, Betsy Drake and Mark Stevens. Howard Dietz's lyrics and Arthur Schwartz's music will add measurably to audiences' enjoyment of the musical. It will be a curmudgeon indeed who does not surrender to the charm of the story, settings and photography and to the capital acting of the leading cast members. It is just what the doctor ordered, not only for "tired" business men but also for the youthful seekers of romantic entertainment—and for the box-offices of theatres throughout the country. Not even the 20th-Fox institutional advertising, in evidence throughout most of the footage, can detract from audiences' enjoyment of the film. Powell gives one of his deftest performances as the old film star who has been "at liberty" for 10 years and makes a theatrical comeback, not as an actor, but as a director for his daughter's film debut. Menjou's performance as studio head runs Powell's a close second. Betsy Drake's film stature is greatly heightened by her acting, singing and dancing, and Mark Stevens is very good as the publicist long in love with Betsy. Cast names alone will attract patrons in large numbers, but exhibitors have other exploitable angles in the Kaufman play, the Technicolor camera work, charming settings, and a romantic story so well acted and directed that it becomes plausible if not quite credible.

Begin your public relations program right within the four walls of your theatre by having a heart-to-heart talk with your employe organization. Make them understand the purpose of the national program and how their support and effort is a MUST if the utmost is to be gained in the local segments that go to make up the national whole. Set up a good-deed-each-day scheme where some tab is kept of the diligence or delinquency of staff members with periodic prizes to those manifesting the most sincere interest in the handling of their jobs. Make it an incentive program so far as the staff is concerned and watch your "patron relations" improve. We all know the value of word-of-mouth advertising, so make it worth while for your employes to exert themselves to get the customers you already have talking about, and sending their friends to, your theatre. Once more, remember that you, as an individual, can never hope to accomplish this task. Remember that the first and most important step in any public relations program is successfully catering to and satisfying the customers you already have. Start today on a THEATRE—your theatre—public relations school to get your employe members on the beam.

I don't know who said it first, but here it is again: "You, Mr. Theatreman, are Hollywood so far as your community is concerned." The conduct, appearance and attitude of yourself, your ushers, your cashiers, your operators and your cleaners reflect to the credit or discredit of the attractions you play and exercise great influence on the number of tickets you sell. You and your staff must accept full responsibility in your community for the sins and virtues of Hollywood. The trouble, as of today, is that too few theatremen are familiar with—and practically none appraise their employe organizations of—Hollywood's many virtues. And, much to our discredit, there are entirely too many owners, managers and staff members who are inclined to lend voice to infrequent news of scandal and reluctant to loudly proclaim the industry's enviable accomplishments in the field of public good.

For more than four years this column has consistently advocated the need of public relations at the local level supported by a national program sponsored by all three industry branches—production, distribution and exhibition. Now that such a national program seems in the making, a forthcoming article will review what's been said before as a sort of "refresher course" to assist the individual theatre owner in the building of a local framework that will supplement and support the national effort.

All of us know that the motion picture industry is a wonderful instrument to promote good for everybody. Let's follow Gael Sullivan's advice and go about the job of convincing our customers and potential customers — and that means everybody — of our enviable past record and the ambitious aims we have marked for our future targets.

PRODUCTION PARADE

By Ann Lewis

Samuel Goldwyn has signed Norman Mailer, author of the best-selling novel "Naked and the Dead," and Jean Malaquais, French novelist and scenario writer, to write the screenplay of their original story idea, "Night Wind."

"Miss Androcles and the Lion," an original story by Mort Braus, has been purchased by Republic and assigned to William Lackey as his initial production under a recently signed contract as an associate producer. Lackey, a former producer at Monogram and Paramount, was signed by Republic in July.

Alex Nicol, Broadway stage actor, was given a long-term contract by Universal-International. He will make his screen debut in "Confidential Squad" presently being made in New York, with Richard Conte, Coleen Gray and Peggy Dow in the starring roles and George Sherman directing.

Joe DeBona, winner of the 1949 Bendix air race and holder of the trans-continental speed record for propeller-driven aircraft, has been signed by Producer Lindsley Parsons for a leading role in "Smoke Hunters." Parsons recently purchased the story from actor-writer Kirby Grant, who will also star in the film.

Having settled on four location sites around the Mt. Whitney area for the next Gene Autry picture "Beyond the Purple Hills," President Armand Schaefer plans on starting the picture the middle of November with John English directing . . . for Columbia release.

"Vengeance Valley," a romantic action story by Luke Short, has been purchased by MGM and put on Producer Nicholas Nayfack's schedule. Nayfack is currently producing "Devil's Doorway," also a western action story, starring Robert Taylor.

Bob Osgood, nationally known square dance authority, will assist Nick Castle, dance director for "Summer Stock," on the square dance sequences in this MGM picture which teams Judy Garland and Gene Kelly. Production is being handled by Joe Pasternak, with Charles Walters directing. It is currently in the rehearsal stage.

Jose Ferrer, the Broadway actor who scored an outstanding hit in his first film "Joan of Arc," simultaneously signed two important contracts. He reports to MGM shortly for a top role in "Crisis," which stars Cary Grant, and next March joins 20th Century-Fox to begin a five-year term contract arranged with Darryl F. Zanuck.

Producer Ken McEldowney, president of Oriental-International Films, Director Jean Renoir and Star Tommy Breen left for New York on the first leg of their trip to India where "The River," Renoir's dramatization of the Rumer Godden novel, will be filmed in Technicolor. This picture is the first of a series of four films the company plans to make in Technicolor, in India, for world-wide distribution.

Jack Carson gets the most dramatic role of his career with his assignment in Warner Bros.' "Bright Leaf," Gary Cooper starrer. He will play Cooper's partner in a worldwide tobacco empire. Director Michael Curtiz is presently conducting extensive tests for two top feminine roles. Henry Blanke produces.

Auer Sees Benefits in Wise Foreign Production

"Foreign production is inherently indicated in some story properties," says John H. Auer, Republic associate producer-director, who recently returned from the Argentine.

"When a picture can effectively utilize the native background of a foreign locale, such filming not only yields a tremendous advantage in the production values of authentic atmosphere, but eliminates costly set building at home. Careful preparation can cut the expense of going on location to a point where it will be offset by the saving in set construction."

Referring to "The Avenger," which was shot in Argentina, Auer says: "The stars, John Carroll and Adele Mara, were the only Hollywood personalities to accompany me. We recruited our supporting cast and technicians on the spot. We shot what amounted to two pictures in only forty-eight days—an English and Spanish version."

John H. Auer

The finest of native materials were also made available at a nominal cost so that the costumes, not only for the principals but for the entire cast, have a richness that would not have been possible, for the price, in the states.

"From a personal viewpoint," Auer continues, "shooting a picture on foreign location is a refreshing experience. The situation provides a constant challenge to a producer's ingenuity and ability. And from the exhibitor and box-office standpoint, a picture that has been shot in a native locale, with new faces and unknown players in the supporting cast, contains an added amount of interest and curiosity for the average patron. It is a challenge to them to see if they can uncover promising personalities."

"I do believe, however, that only those pictures that can take full advantage of natural settings, should be produced out of the states," he added.

Foreign shooting is not new to Auer He directed the first American production filmed in Mexico and has since made several Spanish-language pictures there. Now he would like to make a film in England, if he can find the right story.

'Flying Fish' Deals With Guided Missiles

"The Flying Fish," which S. Sylvan Simon will make for Columbia, will deal with the possible use of guided missiles launched from submarines in any war involving this country. Up until this time plans concerning the project had not been revealed because of secrecy imposed upon Columbia by the United States Navy. The picture must receive final Navy approval before it can be shown.

Jerry Bresler will produce the film under Simon's supervision. The screenplay is by Harry Haislip and Richard Nash.

'Hornblower' Decisions To Follow Walsh Return

Decision as to location of filming and who will star in "Captain Horatio Hornblower" is expected to be made shortly at Warner Bros., following the return of Director Raoul Walsh from England this week. The studio acquired screen rights to the C. S. Forester novel about 10 years ago as a possible vehicle for Errol Flynn.

Walsh scouted possible location sites while in England and also discussed with Richard Todd, young English actor, the possibility of playing one of the leading roles.

Ward to Play Self In 'Golden Gloves Story'

Arch Ward, dean of American sports editors whose daily Chicago Tribune column, "In the Wake of the News," is read by more than a million people daily, has been signed to make his motion picture debut portraying himself in "The Golden Gloves Story," which Carl Krueger is producing for Eagle Lion release. Cast will be headed by James Dunn, Gregg Sherwood, Steve Andrews and Kevin O'Morrison.

Ridgeley Signed for 'Beauty on Parade'

John Ridgely has been signed for a role in Columbia's "Beauty on Parade," which Lew Landers is directing for Producer Wallace MacDonald. The cast includes Ruth Warrick, Lola Albright, Hillary Brooke, Robert Hutton, Wally Vernon and Jimmy Lloyd.

Wallis Borrows Arthur

Hal Wallis has borrowed Robert Arthur from 20th Century-Fox for the key role of Joseph Cotten's son in Paramount's "September," in which Cotten co-stars with Joan Fontaine.

'High Stakes' Next

Monogram Producer Jan Grippo has announced "High Stakes" as the next production in the Bowery Boys series starring Leo Gorcy with Huntz Hall.

To Script 'Hiawatha'

Arthur Strawn has been signed to write the screenplay of "Hiawatha," which Walter Mirisch will produce for Monogram in Cinecolor.

Studio Roundup

With their respective champion still arguing the laugh-provoking merits of the flying pie and the flying word, and no decision reached, it is interesting to note that Chester Conklin, one of Mack Sennett's Keystone Kops of silent days, has been signed by Universal-International for a spot in the Donald O'Connor comedy, "Double Crossbones." One can speculate whether Conklin's return indicates a victory for those who contend that the silent comedies of two decades are still uproariously funny. At any rate, Conklin and his walrus mustache will be back.

On the Monogram lot, "Joe Palooka in Honeymoon for Five" started shooting last week. "Honeymoon," next in the Palooka pictures produced by Hal E. Chester, has Jean Yarbrough directing. Donald MacBride has been signed for a featured role in this chapter of the series which stars Leon Errol and Joe Kirkwood.

At Republic, "Tarnished" rolled with Arthur Franz and Dorothy Patrick in the stellar roles.

'Baron' Launched

Launched last week at Nassour Studio, the Robert L. Lippert production, "Baron of Arizona," is based on an historical fact, a gigantic swindle perpetrated on the government in 1872 by James Addison Reavis, played by Vincent Price. Also starred is Ellen Drew, who just finished "Stars In My Crown" at MGM. Carl K. Hittleman is producing. Samuel Fuller has the direction assignment.

Under way, too, last week was Lippert's "Radar Patrol," starring John Howard. Adele Jergens and Tom Neal are cast for featured roles. Barney Sarecky will produce. Sam Newfield directs.

The new Richard Widmark vehicle, "No Way Out," rolled at 20th Century-Fox with Linda Darnell co-starring. Steven McNally has been signed for a top role. Joseph Mankiewicz will handle the direction.

Mike Raffeto, so well-known to radio fans in the role of "Paul" in "One Man's Family," was signed last week to play the sheriff in U-I's "Shoplifter."

Shooting ends this week on RKO Radio's "Carriage Entrance," Robert Mitchum, Ava Gardner, Melvyn Douglas starrer, with location filming at Baldwin lake and the studio ranch in Encino.

Paul Kelly, who drew acclaim for his performance in the New York stage production of "Command Decision," has been signed by Producers Jack H. Skirball and Bruce Manning for a top role in "Blind Spot." Kelly will play the part of a district attorney who prosecutes the star of the picture, Claudette Colbert, for murder.

"Golden Gloves," story of amateur boxing, is currently being directed by Felix Feist in Chicago at the fight arenas.

2 More Trucolors Added at Republic

Republic has scheduled two additional Trucolor productions to go before the cameras before the end of the year, making a total of 12 pictures to have utilized Republic's color process during the year. The two planned Trucolor features are a Roy Rogers film, "Trigger, Jr.," slated for a Nov. 28 start, and a comedy romance starring Estelita Rodriquez, now being prepared for late November production. One Trucolor picture, "Singing Guns," is now being filmed.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Driscoll Appeal Against British Court Conviction Is Lost; Disney Cancels Plans to Bring Child to England Next Year

By JOCK MacGREGOR

Walt Disney was a puzzled man when I met him in the Screenwriters. He had just returned from the continent with brother Roy and had heard that Bobby Driscoll's appeal against his conviction for appearing in "Treasure Island" had been lost. Fortunately, by quick switching of schedules, Bobby was able to finish all his scenes before the court made its decision.

Jock MacGregor

As a result, Disney has had to cancel his plans for bringing Bobby over again next year to make another Technicolor offering which would have provided added work for the British technician. He is extremely disappointed, as he is pleased with the results of his first all-live action picture and is positively raving about Robert Newton's performance.

He has now decided against combining artists with animation which he introduced as a wartime measure and is concentrating on the production of feature-length cartoons. Soon after the New Year, he will start on the story of "Peter Pan" and revels at the thought of creating "Tinker Bell."

Incidentally, Walt has become an addict of the English tea habit and welcomes the unions' insistence on morning and afternoon breaks.

Under English law, the studios come under the Factory Act which forbids the employment of children, though this is often flaunted in the hopes there will be no common informer. In Bobby's case, he was charged with a contravention of the Aliens Order.

I thought it would be interesting to find out how the government's sponsored Film Finance Corporation aligned itself with helping "One Night" in which young Bobby Henrey of "The Fallen Idol" fame plays the lead. Their spokesman was not to be drawn, appeared personally satisfied that no laws would be broken. I spoke to London Films. Their answer was that the film would be shot abroad and by not using actual studios, but houses and barns and the like, it would still qualify for quota.

It is rather remarkable that while an eleven-year-old child is not allowed to make a film in this country, producers can take one abroad and receive government financial backing for such a venture.

The fabulous Filippo Del Giudice, now back in his native Italy, has produced an amazing manifesto dealing mainly with his associations with a "monopolistic gentleman" and his "aide de camp" and his solution for the British film industry.

Hearty congratulations to Andrew Neatour on being appointed manager of publicity to Associated British Cinemas by Jack Goodlatte. . . . Formerly with Warners, he came to England with the U. S. Army, married an English girl and took his demob here. Recently he has been public relations executive with the London office of Foote, Cone and Belding. This new appointment will considerably strengthen the publicity side of this group. F. B. Prior continues as advertising manager.

The Rank Odeon balance sheet will now be published on Nov. 7.

Rank's second-run West End houses have been having a certain amount of chopping and changing. Recently the Astoria was linked with the previously first-run Tivoli to give the ABC program an airing before going on release, but certain renters did not like the scheme. This week it is paired with the New Victoria which normally shares the Dominion's GB release program, while the Dominion and Tivoli play the same bill. It would appear that finding films for the Tivoli will continue to be a problem.

Exhibitors, while doing well with "Snake Pit" on release, have not done the outstanding business they anticipated, and blame the "No Under 16s" ban. Old-timers reflect on the times when to announce a film as "Adults Only" was to draw the business.

David Rose has once again changed the title of his first independent British picture. It is now "The Witness," and wits are wondering whether William Shakespeare really had something when he wrote "A rose by any name . . ."!

TEA TIME. Everything drops for tea on the set of RKO-Walt Disney's "Treasure Island" at the Denham Studios in England. Above, Producer Disney joins a pirate and Bobby Driscoll for a "cupper char."

Half 20th-Fox 1950 Releases Virtually Ready

With 12 pictures already completed for 1950, three more before the cameras and scheduled to be finished by the first of the year, virtually the first half of the 20th Century-Fox 1950 releasing schedule has been completed, the studio announced this week.

Films set for 1950 release and in various final stages after completion of shooting are "Twelve O'Clock High," "Whirlpool," "Dancing in the Dark," "When Willie Comes Marching Home," "Three Came Home," "Oh Doctor," "Two Corridors East," "A Ticket to Tomahawk," "Night and the City," "Broken Arrow," "Love That Brute," "Wabash Avenue." Films currently shooting include "The Big Fall," "Cheaper by the Dozen" and "The Gun Fighter,"

Probably Ava Gardner

Ava Gardner will probably be the feminine star in MGM's forthcoming fight film, "Right Cross."

On Forthcoming Product

Cheaper by the Dozen (20th Century-Fox) Principals: Jeanne Crain, Clifton Webb, Myrna Loy, Betty Lynn. Director, Walter Lang. An efficiency engineer, with twelve children, applies his science to running his home.

Yellow Cab Man (MGM) Principals: Red Skelton, Gloria De Haven, Walter Slezak, Edward Arnold, James Gleason. Director, Jack Donohue. A zany inventor becomes a cab driver in order to sell his unbreakable glass to the cab company.

Captive Girl (Columbia) Principals: Johnny Weissmuller, Buster Crabbe, Anita Lhoest. Director, William Berke. A tribe of African natives are in terror of a wild girl whom they call the leopard woman. Jungle Jim saves her from the tribe's witchmen, solves the mystery of her identity, and returns her to civilization.

Reformer and the Redhead (MGM) Principals: June Allyson, Dick Powell, David Wayne, Cecil Kellaway. Producers-directors, Norman Panama and Melvin Frank. A lawyer runs for mayor with the support of a crooked political machine. Influenced by the daughter of the director of the city zoo, he breaks away from the machine. Prowling lions from the zoo supply comedy.

Miniver Sequel (MGM) Principals: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon, John Hodiak, Cathy O'Donnell. Director, Henry Potter. The end of the war finds Mrs. Miniver very ill. Her doctor tells her that she has not more than a year to live. She spends the year straightening out the personal problems of her family.

Box-Office Slants

All the King's Men

ficant entertainment quality demand the best in showmanship. The film has almost unlimited exploitation possibilities not the least of which is the fact that it was adapted from a popular novel, and efforts in its behalf should be amply rewarded at the box-office. This looks like a sleeper.

Cast: Broderick Crawford, John Derek, Joanne Dru, John Ireland, Mercedes McCambridge, Shepperd Strudwick, Ralph Dumke, Anne Seymour, Katherine Warren, Raymond Greenleaf. Credits: Directed by Robert Rossen. Written for the screen by Robert Rossen. Photography, Burnett Guffey. Based on the novel, "All the King's Men" by Robert Penn Warren. A Robert Rossen Production. Associate producer, Shirley Miller. Musical score, Louis Gruenberg. Musical direction, Morris Stoloff.

Plot: The courageous fight made by a farm-county politician against a crooked political machine attracts the attention of a newspaper reporter. When his paper refuses to print his articles in support of the fight, the reporter quits his job to join forces with the politician. Within a short time they have gained enough strength in rural districts to win the governship of the state. However, the politician's ambition grows with his success, until in his ruthless quest for power, he destroys his family, the reporter's family, and brings about his own assassination.

Comment: "All the King's Men" is Americana with the strength of legend, although contemporary to this generation. It has been held fresh in general interest through the best selling novel of the same name. The popularity of the novel and the closeness with which the picture follows the life of Huey Long offers almost unlimited exploitation possibilities. High production values, and strong performances make the film look like a sleeper. Lack of marquee strength demands that the picture be sold, but it deserves the best in showmanship, and should pay an ample reward at the box-office. Broderick Crawford's skillful character delineation of the man who almost succeeded in setting up a monarchy in one of America's 48 states during the last decade, is a notable performance. John Ireland does a commendable job as the reporter who, disillusioned and uncertain, puts his faith in Crawford. Joanne Dru is lovely and her performance is convincing, while Mercedes McCambridge is outstanding as the cynical young woman who deserts the machine to ride Crawford's political bandwagon to the top. Robert Rossen's direction takes full advantage of the meaty material with which he worked.

VIEWS ON NEW SHORT SUBJECTS

THE HUNTER (20th-Fox—9802) Movietone Specialty. 8 mins. More effective photography by the Swedish Arne Sucksdorff, whose "Symphony of a City" and "Struggle for Survival" excited comment. Like the others, this one is unaccompanied by narration. A scene of pastoral peacefulness is established; it is broken by the entrance of a hunter, but he finally is caught by the peaceful spell and puts down his gun. Release date, Aug. '49.

FUTURE CHAMPS (20th-Fox—9304) Sports Review. 9 mins. Young skiers in Michigan and swimmers in Florida go through their paces while Mel Allen narrates. Release date, July, '49.

Paramount Building Notes:

Leonard Goldenson strolling around the 13th floor trying to find some additional space to take care of United Paramount Circuit personnel. He's the wonder man of the industry if he can find any spare footage at this time. We've been looking for the same thing for two years.

George Skouras and Bill White getting ready to move into their own building off Times Square but the exodus isn't going to help Leonard because Si Fabian and Sam Rosen have staked a claim on all of the old Skouras space.

Bill German taking advantage of the quiet Saturdays by slipping in to catch up on accumulated work as do we on almost all Saturdays. Did anyone ever stop to consider the many things that Bill is always doing to help others? Some day we're gonna make him mad by revealing what a swell guy he is.

Max Youngstein and his Paramount advertising department just completed a series of moves that switches them from the 12th to the 11th floor. Just another sequence in the split-up of Paramount into separate distribution and exhibition companies.

Luncheon Note: If you've been wondering where all of the movie industry executives and who's who are eating the mid-day meal, drop in at Dinty Moore's and you'll find them crowding the place from wall to wall. On one day we clocked George Dembow, Harry Brandt, Sam Rinzler, Fred Schwartz, Dave Levy and a host of others all trying to develop stomach ulcers via fast eating and faster shop talk.

Notes From The News:

Leave it to the Warner Bros. to come up with a brand new slant on divorcement. According to report their suggestion was that the Justice Department let them split the Warner empire into pieces with each of the brothers taking a large hunk. Were that to come true you'd undoubtedly have Jack heading the production company, Harry the theatre company and Albert, distribution. Wonder if the same idea would work in Reno divorces.

Picture Pioneers' Tenth Anniversary Dinner looks like the real gathering of the movie clans. Every other letter ends up with something along the lines of "will be seeing you in New York at the Pioneers' dinner." The Waldorf Roof couldn't possibly hold that many.

Greek invasion of England. With Spyros Skouras back home from abroad, brother Charlie, accompanied by Rick Ricketson and Elmer Rhoden, has flown to London. If J. Arthur thinks he has had some strenuous experiences, wait until he meets up with Charlie and his side-kicks. Making flour will seem like child's play after that.

On the eve of the event, the "Battleground" premiere at the Astor, New York, shapes up as a sure-fire super-duper affair of lights and glamor.

According to Walter Reade, Jr., children's shows are bouncing back in a manner that is most encouraging for some extra goodwill and profits. Too many theatremen have neglected this important activity. There are so many angles to kiddie shows, no exhibitor need go hungry for ideas on keeping them novel and interesting.

Another outstanding premiere heading towards Times Square, is the double-theatre opening for Paramount's "Samson & Delilah."

Variety Club Representatives who journeyed to Saranac Lake to see their organization's Will Rogers Hospital, are still raving about the way the institution is being operated and put into tip-top condition. They visited with most of the patients and got a preview of the Hospital's brand new X-Ray equipment and the newly reactivated laboratory, both the best to be found anywhere.

Speaking of the Hospital reminds us that AGVA's Henry Dunn is formulating plans to take a big flesh show up there during Christmas Week for the first stage entertainment they have seen in over ten years. If this rumor reaches the patients, their cure will be accelerated and their spirits raised by many a percentage point.

By the way, Mr. and Mrs. Reader. How would you like to help give these industry patients a real Merry Christmas? You know, that's the one time of the year when they need a bit of cheering up and we've figured out a way to do it through giving them a happy Christmas with all the trimmings.

Do you want to help too? Then send a little contribution for the Xmas Fund to the undersigned at 1313 Paramount Bldg., New York. It needn't be much but whatever the amount it will go a long way towards helping to make those guys and gals up there in Saranac Lake feel that they haven't been forgotten.

Thanks.

WHAT'S NEWS

In the Film Industry This Week

LITIGATION

Back in the post Civil War days, when a nation split by dissension was struggling to reunite under conditions made difficult by chaos and distrust, the Congress of the United States, after a stormy period of uncertainty, passed a resolution which declared the 14th Amendment to be a part of the Constitution. The amendment, whose ratification had been a major headache for the administration, had been rejected by Delaware as well as by 10 southern states and coldly acted upon by New York and New Jersey. It has come through the litigious years to be known as the "due process of law" clause. One section reads:

"No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

The amendment, passed to insure the rights of the recently freed Negroes, may soon be called upon to insure the freedom from censorship of a motion picture dealing with a Negro problem — "Lost Boundaries" —, and if successful, may additionally free motion pictures throughout the United States from censorship. This became known Thursday when it was confirmed that Producer Louis de-Rochemont, with the concurrence of Film Classics, had engaged Judge Louis Rosenman to fight the ban placed against his picture in Atlanta by Censor Christine Smith. Rosenman's office declared that he would attack the censor's action on the ground that it violated the constitution's provision regarding freedom of speech but that he would seek to use the 14th Amendment as the basis of his argument. Presumably the 14th Amendment makes mandatory upon the states the same provisions which the "Bill of Rights" amendments to the Constitution would impose upon the U. S. Government. (P. 11)

Meanwhile in Washington, Hollingshead Park-In Theatres, owners of drive-in ramp patents, whose suit for royalties against an E. M. Loew underskyer at Providence was won in a Boston federal court and reversed in the First U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, again asked the U. S. Supreme Court to review the case. The high court had denied a request for a review.

And in Cleveland, federal court there granted the G & P Amusement Company, which is suing a buying combine — Co-operative Theatres of Ohio—along with Columbia, 20th Century-Fox, Warner Bros. and Universal and the Regent Theatre, for $525,000 damages under the anti-trust statutes, the right to inspect all transactions pertaining to films between Co-Operative, its theatre clients, and the defendant distributors.

In New York the federal statutory court granted Paramount three years to dispose of its holdings in the Butterfield circuit apparently for the reason that the circuit, which had once been owned by both Paramount and RKO, had changed its status when RKO sold out to independents. In Washington, the Justice Department granted RKO from Nov. 8 to Nov. 18 to comply with certain divestiture parts of the decree. In Washington, Warner Bros. asked the U. S. Court of Appeals to allow its "counterclaim" in the Kogod-Burka suit over the MacArthur Theatre, which, if granted, would order dissolution of the company and sale of its assets to be divided by K-B and Warners. Meanwhile the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers asked the Justice Department to investigate Fox West Coast as a monopoly, the first of several such moves the Society wants at local levels against theatre circuits.

In Baltimore the Appeals Court there permitted an appeal brought to it in the Meiselman case of Charlotte, to contain the Government anti-trust suit rulings on the distributor defendants. Meiselman lost his suit in the federal court when the judge found no conspiracy against the majors and Wilby-Kincey and refused to permit inclusion of the U. S. Supreme Court findings in the Government suit.

EXHIBITION

Boston's Pilgrim Theatre will use its large screen television to present four Notre Dame football games televised by DuMont. The Theatre Owners of America is appealing to all exhibitors to start ringing the front doorbells of their congressmen and senators vacationing at home to get a repeal or reduction of the federal amusement tax. Meanwhile the Treasury Department ruled again that the full amount of tax must be paid on tickets sold at reduced prices for students.

In Washington, TOA was lining up exhibitors to petition the Federal Communications Commission to hold hearings on theatre television, with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of West Virginia the first to come under the wire arguing that theatres might be the only places where whole communities might be able to see television for even the FCC allocations would give only "fringe" home service to some territories and in others it was economically impossible to set up video stations.

On the exhibition front Tom Edwards was reelected president of the St. Louis MPTO; A. Julian Brylawski was elected president of the District of Columbia MPTO for the 28th consecutive year; and Lloyd E. Rodgers was elected president of the West Virginia Managers' Assn. New York will be down to three newsreel theatres when the Embassy goes feature this month.

GENERAL

J. Arthur Rank quit his attempt to fight Hollywood for mass markets this week with an order reducing production to a maximum of 10 by the end of June, 1950, as the 1949 financial report of the company showed a net loss of $2,090,891.60. The collapse of English production, blamed by Rank on the British ad valorem policy, on amusement taxes, and the lack of quality in his own product, was attributed by Motion Picture President Eric Johnston in Washington to Rank's attempt to go too far too fast. Johnston reiterated the importance of the foreign market to American production.

Meanwhile in New York MGM Production Chief Dore Schary forsaw a brilliant future and said MGM would probably produce 40 in 1950. (P. 13). In New Orleans Paramount Production Chief Henry Ginsberg declared that today's audiences like realistic stories.

Review Ramp Suit, Park-In Asks

Hollingshead Park-In Theatres, holders of patents on ramps for drive-ins, this week asked the U. S. Supreme Court to reconsider its refusal to review the U. S. Court of Appeals judgment which in effect invalidated the patent because of a "want of invention." The Appeals Court ruled in the suit for royalties which Park-In had brought against the E. M. Loew Circuit on an under-skyer at Providence, R. I. Park-In won in the Boston federal court but was reversed. The U. S. Supreme Court refused to consider the Park-In appeal on Oct. 10, and it is against this refusal that Park-In is asking reconsideration.

Get Together, Zorn Warns Exhibitors

A warning to exhibitors that distribution was a well-organized tightly-knit segment of the motion picture industry and that it behooved theatremen to be as well organized, was issued in St. Louis this week by Ed Zorn, regional vice-president of the Theatre Owners of America in a talk before the meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

Zorn, one of several prominent speakers, declared that exhibitors were becoming more association-minded and declared that distributors' sales policies were geared to get the last exhibitor dollar, even if the theatreman went broke in the process. He urged a sales system that would be fair to producer, distributor and exhibitor, and a system of collective thinking by the three branches on industry problems.

The directors of the St. Louis organization decided to open an office in film row with a full-time secretary in charge. President Tom Edwards, presided and outlined the organization's work in legislative matters, especially in fighting taxes. TOA Executive Director Gael Sullivan again issued his attack on box-office taxes and suggested united exhibitor effort for repeal or modification.

Reelects Edwards

Tom Edwards was reelected president of the MPTO. Other officers are Vice-Presidents Tommy James, Tom Bloomer, Charles Weeks, Mrs. Bessie Shulter; Secretary Lester Kropp; Treasurer, Joe Ansell. Directors are Russell Armentrout, Frank L. Plumlee, Bill Williams, Dean Davis, Ed Long, Bob Marchbank, F. A. Mercier, T. D. Medley, Carson Rodgers, Loren Cluster, Edward Fellis, Will Griffin, Sam Pirtle, George Kerasotes, James Frisina, Izzy Wiensheink, John Meinardi, Russell A. Bovim, Frank Speros, Sam Levin, Paul Krueger, Arthur Kalbfeld, Maurie Davis, Louis Jabolonow, Ben Lueken, Christ Efthim.

No Trust Action

The Motion Picture Association of America has apparently taken no open steps to bring about the decrease of anti-trust suits, which it seems to regard as bad public relations for the industry, it was learned in New York last Friday. Queried on this subject, President Eric Johnston reminded the press that he had been abroad and referred the question to MPAA Vice-President Francis Harmon.

"No," Harmon replied to the question, "I don't know that there has been any spicific moves in the last 60 days."

Asked if a plan to eliminate such suits would be part of the all-industry public relations programs, Harmon replied that it was not. Asked further if arbitration had been considered, he replied that the "committee has not had any discussion of that to date."

Civil War Amendment Looms As Weapon to Fight Censors

That the post Civil War Fourteenth Amendment, enacted to insure the rights of Negroes, might be invoked in an effort to free films from censorship, was likely this week as it became known that Producer Louis deRochemont had retained Judge Ben Rosenmann to fight the Atlanta censor ban on "Lost Boundaries."

Judge Rosenmann's office, confirming the engagement of the veteran attorney, said he will attack the Atlanta censor action on the grounds that it banned the picture before it was shown and as such violated guarantees of free speech and "due process of law" clauses of the constitutional amendment. The attorney is said to plan his attack under the various U. S. Supreme Court rulings which have grown up around the 14th Amendment, which, it is said, makes applicable to the states the same civil rights guarantees that the first 10 Amendments to the Constitution impose upon the U. S. Government.

A previous challenge to motion picture censorship, based on the First Amendment (free press and free speech), met with defeat several years ago in the U. S. Supreme Court. However, this was in the days of silent pictures and that the Supreme Court has somewhat different views today may be gleaned from the remarks it made during a ruling in the anti-trust suit. Here Justice Douglas said in passing:

"We have no doubt that moving pictures, like newspapers and radio, are included in the press whose freedom is guaranteed by the First Amendment."

Film Classics was reliably reported this week as joining Producer Louis deRochemont in the fight. Before that FC President Joseph Bernhard had disapproved going to law over the ruling, apparently believing that once the Atlanta censors saw how the film was received elsewhere in the South, the ban on "Lost Boundaries" would be removed. This opinion was apparently strengthened when the censor approved "Pinky." However, when she proved adamant on the Film Classics picture, he decided to take off his coat and fight, reliable sources said.

Right to Look Upheld in Co-op Buying Suit

Federal Judge Paul Jones this week granted the G&P Amusement Company the right to inspect all records of transactions between a buying combine—Co-Operative Theatres of Ohio—its theatre clients, and the following distributors—20th Century-Fox, Warner Bros., Columbia and Universal.

The judge's order, granted over opposition in what is said to be the first anti-trust suit against a buying outfit, sweepingly covers an 11-year period from Sept. 1, 1937 to April, 1949, when G&P, operators of the Moreland, a Cleveland, neighborhood house, filed suit.

Buying Power Monopoly?

The action for $525,000 damages names as defendants Co-Operative, the four distributors and Paul Gusdanovic, head of the Regent Theatre, a Co-Operative client and a competitor of the Moreland. It charges that the Moreland has been unable to get suitable product since 1939 when Co-Operative was organized; that through buying power, Co-Operative has created an illegal monopoly, and that all the defendants have "aided and abetted in the use and abuse of this monopoly power."

According to the petition, Exhibitor Defendant Gusdanovic of the Regent acquired the Moreland in 1930 and closed it. When the owners refused to renew the Gusdanovic lease, G&P took over the house in late 1937 and operated it on a full-time basis. Product difficulties then developed, it is claimed. Attorney Samuel T. Gaines represents G&P; Milton Mooney heads Co-Operative.

Rank Halts Hollywood Competition As Net Loss Reaches $2,090,891.60

J. Arthur Rank's organization Monday called a halt to any effort to compete with Hollywood in mass production of motion pictures for world markets as the company's financial report for what Rank himself termed an "unhappy" year revealed a net loss of 746.747 pounds ($2,090,891.60.) The actual production loss for the year, which ended June 25, 1949, reached 3,360,000 pounds ($9,390,000) but income from the theatres and other sources brought this down to a net loss of $2,090,891.60. In addition the Rank bank loans and overdrafts increased from 13,589,858 pounds ($38,051,602.40) for 1948 to 16,286,581 pounds ($45,602,426.80) for 1949.

In a report to his stockholders Rank revealed that the company would make six to 10 pictures in the six months ending June, 1950, and that production in the future, would seek "fewer films of better quality." The directors, he declared, had considered abandoning production altogether but had rejected this proposal in view of the dollar situation which made it "unreasonable" to assume that we could rely almost entirely on American films for our theatres."

Rank blamed the loss, which is in contrast to a profit last year of 4,175,732 pounds ($11,692,049.60) on several factors, including the British policy on the ad valorem tax, amusement taxes, decrease in theatre attendance, and his own product much of which he termed "not of the quality to ensure even reasonable returns."

In placing part of the blame for his company's position on the ad valorem tax policy, Rank pointed out that after the tax had been imposed, the American industry quit sending films over to Britain thereby throwing the entire burden of providing product for British theatres, including the 559 of the Rank chain, upon British production.

Then after the British went into mass production, he continued, the ad valorem tax was repealed through the Anglo-American agreement and British production was subjected to a flood of competition from American product.

"Even if all our films had been of the quality we had hoped, this usually strong competition," Rank remarked, "would have made it difficult

Warners Appeal In K-B Action

Warner Bros. Stanley Company this week asked the U. S. Court of Appeals in Washington, D. C., to reverse the federal district court and allow its "counter-claim" against the Kogod-Burka, a partner, in the long-standing MacArthur Theatre battle.

The appeal added another page to a case which finds none of the interested parties satisfied with what the lower court did. When it bacame evident as a result of the Government anti-trust suit that the Warner Bros. subsidiary had to give up its joint ownership with

Boston Pilgrim to Televise Four Notre Dame Games

The American Theatres' Pilgrim in Boston, one of the first theatres to present the World Series over large-screen television, was scheduled to take another pioneering step Nov. 12 when it was to present the Notre Dame-North Carolina game which takes place in the Yankee Stadium, New York. The pickup will be made from the DuMont network Station WNAC in Boston.

The large-screen instantaneous broadcast, the first to be held of any major football event in the country, is one of a series of four involving Notre Dame. The others include the Irish versus Iowa, Nov. 19, at Iowa; Southern California, Nov. 26 at Notre Dame, and Southern Methodist at Southern Methodist, Dec. 3.

Boston, which reportedly is cool to the football sluggings of its own Boston University, Harvard and Northeastern, is hot for Notre Dame, presumably because of its large Irish and Catholic population, Hub sources said.

Boston Price Cut

In a move to aid Boston theatre business in the forenoons and afternoons the Pilgrim, key theatre here of the American Theatres Corporation, has slashed prices. Forenoon prices have been dropped from 44 cents to a new low of 25 cents; after 1 o'clock and until 6 o'clock the prices, which have been 50 cents, have been slashed to 35 cents. Prices for the evening shows remain at the former level of 55 and 65 cents. The Pilgrim is located in the heart of Boston's theatre district.

Brilliant Future for Industry Seen by Schary; May Make 40

The future prospects of the motion picture industry look bright to MGM Production Vice-President Dore Schary who Monday in New York found that product from all companies on the whole was better and that the industry had survived some telling blows.

"I think the prospects are good," he declared, speaking of the future. "I was an optimist even last year. We've gone through this go-round without any company going down the drain as we did in the last depression. I think our competition is keener, but that our pictures are getting better."

Schary said that MGM, as usual, had no fixed number of features scheduled for production in 1950, but anticipated that the company would complete approximately 40, with about the same percentage in Technicolor as were made in 1949. He announced acquisition of "The Magnificent Yankee," biography and stage play which is to be filmed with Louis Calhern in the part of Justice Holmes.

Waste Time: 20 to 25%

Schary estimated that MGM had been able to trim from 20 to 25 per cent off production costs by eliminating "waste and second guessing." Most of this was achieved through carefully prepared scripts, which the MGM production chief termed "the most important factor" in economy. By analyzing the script before the cameras start to turn, MGM is "as certain as we can be that we haven't anything in the script that we won't have in the picture," Schary remarked. Other savings, he pointed out, followed through studio cooperation.

"Everyone in the studio knows how to save a dollar—costuming, sets, etc.," he declared.

MGM's ability to eliminate waste from scripts, he continued, lay in its large backlog of stories which gave the studio leisure to work on each story and eliminate the oversights attendant upon rush schedules. These tactics, he claimed, had enabled MGM to produce "Battleground" for under $2,000,000.

Schary told the press conference that MGM had entered the field of experimental pictures with such films as "Border Incident," "It's a Big Country," "Standoff," and "The Next Voice You Will Hear," a story of what happens when God's voice is heard in today's world.

He believes there is a "satiety" of pictures dealing with Negro problems and while the problem continues to exist, that there is a limit to how much any one medium can treat of it. "It is best to let the pictures now circulating do what they can," he said.

Story's the Thing

But he is not academically ruling out a subject for this reason, believing that the story is still reason for making a picture.

"Let's look for a good story," he suggested. "If it will make a good picture, let's make it."

As to international production, MGM, he announced, would start the delayed "Quo Vadis" in Italy during May, while it will produce "Ivanhoe" in England and possibly "Tahiti," the Esther Williams musical, in the Pacific.

Schary came to the defense of Joe Breen, head of the Motion Picture Association of America's Production Code, saying that he had "found him in no way a bad influence on pictures."

"I believe," the MGM executive continued, "Goldwyn sounded off about him. . . . I think it is ridiculous. You can grab off a lot of free space by that. . . . I don't know of any good provocative subject that can't be handled with taste.

'Lot of Nonsense'

"There's a lot of nonsense circulating about pressure groups," he declared, coming to the defense of another attacked group. "I think that pressure groups have in some instance helped the motion picture business. I mean legitimate pressure groups."

By "legitimate" Schary made it plain he did not mean groups that wrote letters of protest that he was against dogs when a dog was pictured biting a man or that he was threatening the coffee percolating industry because he showed an old-fashioned coffee pot in one picture.

Nothing Nude Goes

The Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors could not see eye to eye with Producer Hans Richter when it came to allowing his "Dreams That Money Can Buy" to be shown in the province. Richter claimed it was a new screen experiment but the board took the view that nudity was not experimental and ordered the scenes out prior to showing.

No Soap

Theatres admitting students at reduced admissions must still collect taxes based on the full price of the ticket, the U.S. Treasury Department has ruled in response to a query made by the Theatre Owners of America.

Reality, Audience Magnet—Ginsberg

Realistic stories are the magnet which pull audiences to today's box-office, Paramount Vice-President Henry Ginsberg declared during a recent stop-over in New Orleans on his way to a Havana vacation from Hollywood. Audiences go to realistic pictures, he added, because they like to sit down in a theatre and "live" the film.

"Nobody in the industry knew how the public would receive such a picture as 'Home of the Brave'," he pointed out, "yet the public response to the film was enthusiastic, even in many parts of the South."

Ginsberg claimed that Hollywood was concentrating upon fully satisfying the American public's taste, adding:

"However, our main problem is still that we can't be sure of what the public really wants."

Ginsberg was accompanied by his wife. They spent one day in New Orleans before departing for Havana, Cuba.

McEldowney Off to India on Rupee, Pound and Dollar Film-Making Union

J. K. McEldowney left New York Saturday for Bombay where he will supervise production of "The River," second of two productions which Oriental-International Films will produce in and around Calcutta. The first, "The Keddar" is nearing completion.

The McEldowney arrangement is not only unusual in that it brings dollars, pounds and rupees into harmonious congress for a three-way production deal which technically will be a British quota picture, but it is actually bizarre in the number of different nationalities represented in the actual filming. In the first place "The River" is based on a tale by Rumer Godden. It will be produced and directed by Jean Renoir, the French director who has "Grand Illusion" to his credit. The director of photography will be Claude Renoir, another Frenchman. The actual camera work will be under Ram Sem Gupta, an Indian who is now studying the mazes of Technicolor in Britain. The star will be Tom Breen, an American who is the son of Joe Breen, the man who makes the movies moral for the Johnston office. The guiding spirit is McEldowny, an American who may have overtones of Scotch and Irish. And the whole project has the implied blessing of the United Nations, which is seeking to sponsor more international production along the lines of the McEldowny project.

If observers think McEldowny's story of uniting Indian maharajahs, British and American financiers to produce a series of features in India as something of a feat, they ain't seen nothing yet.

Color Camera Problem

In the first place there was the problem of Technicolor cameras. The Indian Government declared, in accordance with sterling trade plans, that the cameras must be bought in Germany. Evidently this would use up some sterling commitment there. But Germany had no Technicolor cameras. McEldowney finally got that one solved and brought in his cameras. Then there was the question of film stock. As the unexposed film came into the country, custom officials wanted to have a look.

Might as Well—

"You might as well dump the shipment in the water," McEldowney told them, explaining what exposing film would do.

That was problem number one. Numbers two came as film was shot on "The Keddar," which incidentally is about an elephant. McEldowney had arranged to fly each day's footage to Britain, get it processed and fly it back. The Indian Government, sensitive of how India might be portrayed, wanted to look at the exposed film this time, telling McEldowney in effect: "We won't let one foot of film out of the country that we haven't seen." He explained this one away finally.

But then there were other problems. All camera work has to be done between monsoon seasons. For this reason "The River" will start shooting Nov. 30. The film stock has to be kept in cooled vaults to prevent the gelatin from coalescing and for this reason location shooting has to be done in areas comparatively near to the vaults. Most of "The River's" location shooting will be within 20 minutes of storage places. Further dampness causes fungus growths on the lenses, which means that they have to be stored in cabinets kept dry by electricity. For interiors studios of the Famous Cinema Laboratories at Bombay and Movietone at Calcutta are used, together with Denham in England.

Kaput

New York's oldest newsreel theatre —the Embassy—will drop its news policy Nov. 18 and switch to feature pictures with the English "Quartet" going into the house following conclusion of its eight-month run at the Sutton. This leaves New York with only three newsreel houses—two belonging to Embassy and one to Trans-Lux.

Rank's Net Loss Tops $2 Million

to achieve satisfactory results. Unfortunately many of the films we produce were not of the quality to ensure even reasonable returns. It can now be seen that our plans to meet an unexpected and critical situation were too ambitious; that we made demands on the creative talent in the industry that were beyond its resources. . ."

In attacking the effect of the British box-office tax Rank claimed this levy in the past year had taken in from his pictures approximately $9,380,000 or some $2,800,000 more than his production loss of $9,380,000.

(In attacking the box-office tax, Rank has the support of Tom O'Brien, secretary of the National Association of Theatrical and Kinema Employes and a member of Parliament, who has been demanding that the Government put back half of the 40,000,000 pounds collected annually from amusement taxes into assisting British production.)

Rank expressed the hope that the Government would do something to alleviate this tax burden, warning that if it were not done, his organization might have to stop producing. If help were granted, he saw a future for production in England but warned that "we shall not again embark on a large program but will ensure that we make only as many films as the creative talent available to us can reasonably produce."

Reports to the effect that Rank would seek more partnership production with the aid of American money via American producers and that his circuits might even welcome American investment were not confirmed.

RKO Drop 2 Sales Districts; Realigns Towns

RKO this week realigned its sales staff, dropping the Northeastern and Prairie Districts and realigning their cities into other districts.

Under the revision, the Eastern district, comprising Philadelphia, Washington, and Pittsburgh, will add the Northeastern district cities of New Haven and Boston to its territory. The Eastern Central District which consists of Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, and Indianapolis, has acquired the Northeastern District's cities of Buffalo and Albany. The Mid Western District, comprising Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and Sioux Falls, has added St. Louis, former seat of the Prairie District, and the other Prairie District town of Kansas City has been put into the Rocky Mountain District which now has Denver, Salt Lake City, Kansas City, Omaha and Des Moines.

Gus Schaefer, former Northeastern district manager has quit to look after his theatre interests, Sales Vice-President Bob Mochrie announced.

Foreign Market Vital to U. S. Industry, Johnston Declares

Importance of the foreign market to the United States film industry was again emphasized in New York last Friday by Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, in his first press conference since his return from abroad.

Johnston at first said the foreign market represented 38 per cent of the American distributors' grosses, but later amended the statement somewhat when a check showed that different bookkeeping practices of different distributors, made an accurate figure almost impossible. He pointed out, however, that other manufacturers who sell as much as five per cent of their product abroad consider themselves in the export business.

Johnston also revealed the extent of the cooperation which the MPAA had given the British in their efforts to establish a market for their pictures in the United States when he said that the MPAA had spent $125,000 of its own money in a campaign to induce teachers and other educators to encourage their students to see "Henry V" and "Great Expectations." This campaign was put on in the spring of 1947, Johnston said, presumably by the MPAA's Community Service department.

Dissonance

A somewhat sour note on American expectations from European markets came as John McCarthy, managing director of the MPAA's international department, told the same press conference that due to world devaluation, the American industry would have to increase its foreign gross from 50 to 55 per cent to hold present revenues. McCarthy also revealed that the MPAA had appointed its first representative for Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Finland in the person of Carl York, former Paramount representative, who will headquarter in Stockholm.

The MPAA foreign chief also told the press conference that his organization had been successful in persuading Denmark to drop its 10 per cent ad valorem tax, which had been based on the anticipated earnings of a film and was collected in advance, and to substitute a tax based on the weight of the film at the straight rate of 30 kroner per kilogram. Speaking of taxes abroad, he and Johnston claimed the tax on theatres in Greece was unjustly high and yielded the Greek Government five per cent of its national revenue.

In discussing the "request" of the Bank of England that it be given the power to approve or reject whether American frozen sterling should be used for certain types of purchases in England, Johnston declared that the controversy was "a tempest in a teapot," and an "intra-governmental problem" similar to those in the United States.

No Difference

He and McCarthy explained that actually under the law the Bank should have charge of all deals involving exchange but that the Anglo-American agreement, which set up a joint committee to study to what uses the frozen sterling could be put, had failed to note this.

Later in the conference he declared that he had no objection to the Bank's taking over this function and under questioning said he felt the MPAA directors agreed with him. (The MPAA directors however, have apparently not acted on the Bank's request; neither has the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, which is also a party to this agreement.)

In answer to a question as to whether he had discussed the matter of whether the British would permit the American industry in future Anglo-American agreements to take out as much as the present $17,000,000 from the country in dollars, Johnston said that he had deliberately avoided such a subject. Asked if he had heard rumors to that effect, he replied: "I heard all kinds of rumors from smaller remittances to nothing."

Approve Plan

Directors of the Motion Picture Association met in New York last Friday, went through the technicality of approving participation in the all-industry public relations plan which it has fostered, thanked those who had participated in the Chicago initial meeting, and passed a resolution bemoaning the death of E. B. Hatrick, former director.

Public Relations Group Meets Dec. 12-13

The Conference Committee of the Motion Picture Industry (the all-industry public relations organizing group) will meet in Washington, D. C., Dec. 12-13, Chairman Ned E. Depinet announced Wednesday.

Studio Cooperation Abroad Is Good—Rod Geiger

Production conditions in England were found to be very good by Rod E. Geiger, producer of "Give Us This Day," upon his temporary return to the United States this week. He particularly commended studio cooperation. Geiger, who is residing at 34 West 73rd Street, New York, said he intended to return to Europe to produce at least two more, with at least one, for which he has the story, to be made in England and Germany. "Give Us This Day" is a picturization of Pietro Di Donato's novel "Christ in Concrete."

Arnall Asks Justice Dept. To Investigate Fox West Coast

The Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers this week formally called upon the Justice Department to investigate the 234-house Fox West Coast circuit, a subsidiary of National Theatres, as a monopoly.

The move was coupled with a request that the Justice Department investigate monopolies on a local level everywhere with specific attention to theatre chains, in view of the rulings in the Government anti-trust suit, SIMPP President Ellis Arnall told Showmen's Trade Review.

"We say that the Fox West Coast Theatres are a good place to start," Arnall declared, adding that list of 82 situtions where FWC operates without competition had been furnished the Justice Department. He said that his organization would press for a thorough break-up of theatre monopoly, especially of those houses that are the "fruits of monopoly," for otherwise the Gvernment anti-trust suit would be meaningless.

NEWSREEL CLIPS

Bid Deal for Little Folks

More than 3,000 boys and girls crowded the Balaban and Katz Uptown recently on Saturday to see two hours of Roy Rogers and cartoons and to give the candy and popcorn stands a whale of a job. The attendance was so large that staffs from the other B&K houses nearby had to be called in to help out. B&K Ad Director Will Hollander says that increased community interest in the shows, along with that of Parent-Teacher Associations and women's clubs, have resulted in larger turnouts generally for kid shows.

More Inspections Than . . .

If you take it from the testimony of Andrew Spheeris in federal court at Chicago, his Towne, in Milwaukee, must have passed more inspections than an army recruit in his first three months. The Towne, which is suing the eight majors for $1,050,000 triple damages in connection with alleged monopoly was, Spheeris declared, inspected first for rubbish. Then plumbing inspectors came in and wanted more plumbing facilities. Then along came the electrical inspector. But the payoff, Spheeris may think, came when an assistant inspector of marquees reportedly told him that a poster under glass was inflammable. Spheeris claims the inspectors told him that the rival exhibition chain, which originally had the Towne, had complained about his situation.

Warners Increase 1950 Shorts Production

Warner Bros. this week announced a shorts production plan of 50 two-reelers and 30-one reel cartoons, which tops last year's total of 43 two-reelers and 28 cartoons. The schedule includes eight two-reelers in Technicolor; six black and white two-reelers; six Vitaphone Novelties; six Joe McDoakes, 10 Sports Parades, six sports novelties and eight band shorts. The 30 cartoon program consists of Bugs Bunny, Merrie Melodies and Looney Tunes.

Jack Broder Heads Realart

Jack Broder, former vice-president of Realart succeeded his brother Paul as president this week. Other officers elected are Board Chairman and Treasurer Norman Eisenstein; Executive Vice-President Budd Rodgers, and Secretary Alex Alexander.

Ring Doorbells In Tax Campaign, Urges TOA

The Theatre Owners of America this week appealed to its members and to exhibitors in general to carry their campaign for the reduction of the federal amusement taxes to the front doors of their senators and congressmen as the solons go home in the Nov. 15-Jan. 1 vacation period.

In his suggestion for this door-to-door campaign TOA Executive Director Gael Sullivan makes seven points for exhibitors to follow: They are:

1) That movies are mass entertainment serving 90,000,000 people weekly and hence not a luxury.

2) The majority of movie patrons are in low and middle income brackets, hence the tax on those least able to pay it.

3) Remission of admission taxes would make for more spending money to be used on other commodities in the communities:

4) Movies rank with newspapers and radios. There are no excise taxes on the latter.

5) Seek aid of Parent-Teacher Associations and other civic welfare groups who may believe that movies help by keping children off the street and get them behind the tax reduction or remission movement.

6) Seek support of Chambers of Commerce by pointing out that movies bring trade to towns from surrounding districts.

7) Get out after local newspaper support; point out that excise taxes deprive the community of purchasing power.

Paramount Decree Gets Added Time For Michigan

The New York federal statutory court this week further amended the Paramount consent decree so that Paramount will have three years to dispose of its joint theatre holdings in Michigan, Detroit excepted.

Legal circles regarded the move as designed esepecially to cover the Butterfield circuit situation and to change the decree to conform to present day conditions. They buttress this view by noting that Detroit is not included in the extension and thus United Theatres, a Paramount partnership, does not come under the terms.

Originally Butterfield was partially owned by Paramount and RKO, both of whom had been anti-trust suit defendants. Under the consent decree, where Paramount held a circuit or a theatre with another defendant, such as it did with RKO in the Butterfield situation, it had until Nov. 8, 1949, to divest. However, RKO has since sold its Butterfield interests to non-defendants in the anti-trust suit and this places the circuit from a practical view in the same category of those in which Paramount has an interest with other non-defendants. These situations had a three year divestiture limit, with the houses to be disposed of at the rate of one-third for each year.

Warners Appeal In K-B Action

K-B in the MacArthur, K-B sued to force a dissolution which would have been accomplished by forcing Stanley to sell its 50 per cent interest to K-B at book value. The lower court dismissed this request.

Stanley countered with a request that the corporation be dissolved, its assets sold on the market and the receipts divided between Stanley and K-B. The lower court denied this.

A third party, the Kass Realty Company, attempted to intervene over a contract to build another theatre. The court dismissed this.

All three are now before the Court of Appeals.

Theatre Television Petitions to be Filed

First of a series of approximately 25 petitions from exhibitors and their organizations asking for hearings on theatre television were due to be filed with the Federal Communications Commission in Washington this week.

The move, spearked by the Theatre Owners of America and its television counsel, Marcus Cohn, will highlight individual needs and problems. Non-TOA organizations are also participating, Cohn said.

Orchids for Mr. Writer

Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas (D. Calif.) this week read into the Congressional Record a tribute to the Screen Writers Guild's aid in a campaign to build a $5,000,000 polio hospital at Los Angeles. Commenting on the move, she declared that "few groups of professional workers in America have contributed so freely of the time and talents of its membership to public causes than the Screen Writers Guild of America."

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

Lost Youth

(Italian Dialog—English Titles)

Lux Film Drama 90 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Well performed story of a cold-blooded young criminal.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Theme and title qualify for grinds as well as foreign situations.

Cast: Carla Del Poggio, Massimo Girotti, Jacques Sernas, Franca Maresa, Diana Borghese, Nando Bruno. Credits: Producer, Carlo Ponti. Director, Pietro Germi. Story, Pietro Germi. Photography, Carlo Montuori. English titles, Clare Catalano.

Plot: A university student leads a group of his friends in several robberies, one of which results in an accidental death. Later the boy cold-bloodedly kills the girl who loves him when she becomes a dangerous witness. It is his sister's boy friend, a detective, who sets the trap in which the hoodlum dies.

Comment: This is for a long time more a report that clucks its tongue than a drama that creates suspense or highlights violence. Competent performances, however, and the latter part of the film with the deliberate murder and the police trap pull it through satisfactorily. The theme and the title, of course, well qualify it for the grinds as well as the foreign houses. Massimo Girotti, who plays the detective, is one of the better-known performers in Italian films ("The Iron Crown") and Jacques Sernas as the hoodlum is a very cool, arrogant, good-looking blond.

Without Honor

United Artists Drama 69 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) This dramatic offering should appeal particularly to the women, for the main character will arouse their sympathy and keep them deeply engrossed, and tense. Good entertainment for those who like strong dramatic films.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Fine performances in an interesting story makes this drama a good choice paired with a comedy. Cast carries enough name-draw for general audience interest.

Cast: Laraine Day, Dane Clark, Franchot Tone, Agnes Moorehead, Bruce Bennett, Franke Marlowe, Harry Lauter, Peter Virgo, Margie Stapp, Lester Dorr, Patricia Ann Ewing, Joan Dupius, Harrison Hearne. Credits: Directed by Irving Pichel. Screenplay by James Poe. Photography, Lionel Lindon. Produced by Robert and Raymond Hakim.

Plot: The jealous, psychopathic hatred of a brother-in-law causes untold trouble and agony to a young housewife who thought herself in love with another man. Tense situation arises when the other man is accidentally stabbed in her home, and the brother-in-law tries to present her in a bad light to her husband, so that he and his brother can spend the rest of their lives together, without her around.

Comment: Limited locale makes this drama somewhat slow and static, for most of the action is confined to the inside of a small house. But it does have lots of tension and suspense, and the performances are first-rate. Subject matter makes it a good dramatic offering for the women, whose sympathy will be aroused by the predicament of the leading character, and they'll probably have a good time shedding a tear or two in her behalf. Laraine Day gives an excellent portrayal of the young housewife whose quiet existence is suddenly upset when she becomes involved in a set of peculiar circumstances. Dane Clark is rugged and convincing as the psychopathic, revengeful brother-in-law and Bruce Bennett gives an understanding delineation of the husband whose wife has fallen for another man. There's fine support by Franchot Tone and Agnes Moorehead, the only other members of the cast who have anything much to do. Irving Pichel directed; Robert and Raymond Hakim produced.

The Golden Stallion

(Trucolor)

Republic Musical Western 67 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Has all the varied elements that make a good Roy Rogers picture.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do well wherever westerns can be used, with the Roy Rogers name and color to pull them in.

Cast: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans, Estelita Rodriguez, Pat Brady, Douglas Evans, Frank Fenton, Greg McClure, Dale Van Sickel, Clarence Straight, Jack Sparks, Chester Conklin, Foy Willing and the Riders of the Purple Sage, and Trigger. Credits: Associate producer, Edward J. White. Director, William Witney. Screenplay, Sloan Nibley. Photography, Jack Marta. Music, Nathan Scott.

Plot: Roy Rogers does a three-year stretch with the road gang after confessing to a charge that threatened his horse, Trigger, with destruction. A man had been killed, actually by a newly caught horse he was attempting to steal from Rogers' corral. Later Roy is able to prove that the man and his gang had been using that horse to lead a free-roaming wild herd back and forth across the Mexican border—with diamonds smuggled in a specially designed shoe.

Comment: Wherever westerns can be used this picture should do well, for it's a good Roy Rogers vehicle with all the elements that have made him so eminent among screen cowboys. There's action, including a fight by Roy and plenty of good wild horse scenes (and the beautiful Trigger gets a chance to show the tricks a tame horse can do); music, with songs by Foy Willing and the Riders of the Purple Sage, Roy and by the lady stars; a square dance called by Roy; comedy, with Pat Brady riding the range crazily in a jeep; a hint of romance for Roy and Dale Evans; and Trucolor. The plot provides a good background for all this, and even protrudes itself a bit with the surprising angle of the hero, for the sake of his horse, actually spending a long time in jail.

Free for All

Univ.-Int'l Comedy 83 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Generally good all-around comedy entertainment for average audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good to balance a strong dramatic feature and may well prove strong enough, based on cast names and local area conditions, to play alone in certain situations.

Cast: Robert Cummings, Ann Blyth, Percy Kilbride, Ray Collins, Donald Woods, Mikhail Rasumny, Percy Helton, Harry Antrim, Wallis Clark, Frank Ferguson, Dooley Wilson, Lester Matthews, Murray Alper, Bill Walker, Kenneth Tobey, Harris Brown, Willard Waterman. Credits: Produced and screenplay by Robert Buckner. From a story by Herbert Clyde Lewis. Photography, George Robinson. Special photography, David S. Horsley.

Plot: Having developed a tablet that changes water into gasoline, Robert Cummings becomes involved in several complications in Washington as he seeks to patent his new invention.

Comment: Although in a number of instances it struggles too hard to draw laughs, "Free for All" is generally good all-around comedy entertainment for average audiences. The spontaneity of some situations provokes chuckles and occasionally belly-laughs, but there are other times when the efforts to amuse are too forced. Nevertheless, as an offering to balance a strong dramatic feature, this comedy can serve exhibitors satisfactorily, and it may well prove strong enough, based on cast names and local area conditions, to play alone in certain situations. Robert Cummings and Ann Blyth are capable, and good jobs are turned in by Percy Kilbride and Ray Collins.

Dear Wife

Paramount Comedy 90 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: This delightful, domestic comedy, made as a sequel to "Dear Ruth," should please generally. Audiences will be amused and their sympathies pleasantly titilated by the perplexities that arise when a young man, living with his wife's parents, is drafted to run against the father for the state senate.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Exploited as a sequel to "Dear Ruth," this picture may be expected to cash in on the popularity of the previous film. Recent well publicized Holden comedies ought to give the William Holden name added box-office draw, and Joan Caulfield and Edward Arnold will have power in most situations.

Cast: William Holden, Joan Caulfield, Billy De Wolfe, Mona Freeman, Edward Arnold, Arleen Whelan, Mary Philips. Credits: Produced by Richard Maibaum. Directed by Richard Haydn. Written for the screen by Arthur Sheekman and N. Richard Nash, as a sequel to Norman Krasna's "Dear Ruth." Photography, Stuart Thompson, A.S.C.

Plot: A young man finds his domestic life complicated when he is forced, not only to live with his wife's parents, but to work for her rejected suitor at the job she had previously held. His difficulties increase when his wife's teen-age sister starts a movement to draft him to run for the state senate, and he finds the opposing candidate is his father-in-law. His wife's loyalty to her father causes a rift in the marriage but the story ends happily when the campaign issue, which had led the young husband to accept the nomination, ceases to exist so that he can honorably withdraw from the race.

Comment: This is delightful, domestic comedy in the "Dear Ruth" manner and as a sequel, should cash in on the popularity of the previous film. The story, which yields plenty of laughs, is based on the amusing perplexities that arise when newly-married William Holden, living with his wife's parents, is drafted to run against his father-in-law, Edward Arnold, for state senate. To add to the complications, the movement to draft Holden is started by his young sister-in-law, Mona Freeman. William Holden, with his relaxed, easy flair for comedy, gives an excellent performance, while Joan Caulfield is satisfyingly attractive and does a competent job. Edward Arnold is given ample opportunity to display the talent that has kept his name prominent in pictures for many years. Miss Freeman is good as the precocious youngster whose interest in politics precipitates the complications. Billy De Wolfe, as Miss Caulfield's ex-suitor who has never given up hope, adds to the pace of the film. The entire cast does an excellent job and the production values are good. The picture should do good business in all situations.

Riders of the Range

RKO Radio Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) One of the best in the Tim Holt series, with action, humor and a hint of romance.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should be able to do anything anywhere that earlier Tim Holts have done.

Plot: Two cowboys go to work for a girl rancher whose brother tries to rustle her cattle to pay his secret gambling debts. They straighten him out, incurring the enmity of the gambling impresario and of the desperado who handles his cattle deals. Through a misunderstanding, the desperado kills the gambler and the cowboys are arrested as the murderers. They escape and capture the desperado and the necessary evidence.

Comment: The above plot summary only begins to suggest the complications as two separate packets of $3,000 change hands several times. Thus an unusual number of situations are produced, each resulting in violence with fists or six-shooters, on foot or at full gallop. The action fans have been well attended, never fear, but a wider group than that central core will be pleased by the strong measure of non-action incidents here. New scope is given to Richard Martin's comedy and his talk of senoritas, romance is hinted for Holt and Jacqueline White and a provocative painting appears in the gambling den scenes. Out front this can only be another Tim Holt western, but audiences inside will find it one of his best.

Deadly Is the Female

United Artists Drama 87 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A strong dramatic offering that has the quality, the performances and the direction to make it satisfactory entertainment for those who relish film fare on the heavy side.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Though the cast has little marquee strength, there is the provocative title to give the picture some exhibition power. Word-of-mouth will help put it over.

Cast: Peggy Cummins, John Dall, Berry Kroeger, Morris Carnovsky, Anabel Shaw, Harry Lewis, Nedrick Young, Trevor Bardette, Mickey Little, Rusty Tamblyn, Paul Frison, Dave Bair, Stanley Prager, Virginia Farmer, Anne O'Neal, Frances Irwin, Don Beddoe, Robert Osterloh, Shimen Ruskin, Harry Hayden. Credits: Directed by Joseph H. Lewis. Screenplay by MacKinlay Kantor and Millard Kaufman. From the Saturday Evening Post story, "Gun Crazy," by MacKinley Kantor. Photography, Russell Harlan. Produced by Frank and Maurice King.

Plot: A youngster who goes to reform school because of his strange fascination for guns, grows up to be an honest man until he falls in love with a cold-blooded woman killer. After a short life of crime, he is forced to kill her, and is himself killed when she tries to kill his two best friends.

Comment: Strong dramatic performances by the cast toppers and the skillful direction of Joseph Lewis, who keeps the suspense and action at a high pitch throughout, makes this melodrama exciting entertainment for the average audience. Though the cast has little marquee strength, there is the provocative title to give the picture some exhibition power. Once seen, the adroitness and credibility of the plot should bring about the kind of word-of-mouth to put it across in any situation. Peggy Cummins, as the cold-blooded woman killer who has chosen a life of crime because of her desire for "better things," turns in a convincing performance, while John Dall does an exceptionally fine job as the man she marries, who is constantly torn between his love for her and his innate desire to be honest. In lesser roles are such capable performers as Berry Kroeger, Morris Carnovsky and Anabel Shaw. The film is based on a Saturday Evening Post story, "Gun Crazy," by MacKinley Kantor, who also collaborated on the screenplay, and this gives the picture a large pre-sold audience. Entire quality of production by the King Bros. makes this excellent fare for those who relish their entertainment a little on the heavy side.

'Silent Dust'

A war deserter, whose father worships his memory in the belief that the boy died a war hero, returns for money and all the family try to shield the blind old man from disillusionment. This, as Jock MacGregor put it (Jan. 29, 1949) after a London trade showing, makes for a human story building to a powerful climax —a useful offering for most houses. Sally Gray and Derek Farr are the strongest names; as the father and son, Stephen Murray and Nigel Patrick excel. It's an Associated British Picture released here by Monogram. Running time, 82 mins.

Rusty's Birthday

Columbia Drama 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This picture will be liked by the family audience. Its appeal is heavily sentimental. The virtues of simple honesty, understanding and sympathy are deftly displayed.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Like all dog stories, this latest in the Rusty series will draw with the kids and parents alike. It holds up well to the standard of its predecessors.

Cast: Ted Donaldson, John Litel, Ann Doran, Jimmy Hunt, Mark Dennis, Ray Teal, Lillian Bronson, Ronnie Ralph, Teddy Infuhr, Dwayne Hickman, David Ackles, Robert B. Williams, Myron Healey, Raymond Largay, Lelah Tayler, Flame. Credits: Directed by Seymour Friedman. Screenplay by Brenda Weisberg. Based upon the characters created by Al Martin. Photography, Henry Freulich. Produced by Wallace MacDonald.

Plot: The dog, Rusty, is found by his owner in the possession of an itinerant farm worker and his two sons. A strong attachment has already grown between the younger boy and the dog. The plot then hinges on the contest between the two boys for the affection of the dog.

Comment: This little picture is frankly and heavily sentimental. Jimmy Hunt, as Jeff, is appealing as a motherless five-year-old who has had an imaginary dog since he can remember, so that when he finds Rusty he fastens all his loneliness and love on the dog. Ted Donaldson does a pretty good job in the role of the dog's owner and John Litel gives solid support. Picture, because it sells tolerance, understanding and the essential brotherhood of man, within the scope of small-town audience, is bound to attract the general run of moviegoers. Several scenes bring audible and sympathetic comment. Used on the lower-half of a double bill, it should take care of its running time satisfactorily.

The Big Wheel

United Artists Drama 92 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) For those patrons who haven't seen the Indianapolis Speedway, and the annual 500-mile race, here is an opportunity. The speed classic is shown with spills on every lap. The story is schmaltzy but the action fans will hardly notice it.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Naivete of story line seems to weaken the picture for metropolitan theatres. However, it should suit well as the action half of a double bill. The Mickey Rooney name may be expected to draw in most situations, and the picture offers exploitation possibilities.

Cast: Mickey Rooney, Thomas Mitchell, Michael O'Shea, Spring Byington, Mary Hatcher, Hattie McDaniel, Steve Brodie, Lina Romay, Allen Jenkins, Dick Lane. Credits: Directed by Edward Ludwig. Original screenplay by Robert Smith. Photography, Ernest Laszlo. Produced by Samuel H. Stiefel and Mort Briskin. A Popkin-Stiefel-Dempsey Production.

Plot: A brash youngster's ambition is to emulate his father, a famous race driver, who had been killed on the Indianapolis Speedway years earlier. He goes to California, where he works for a race car mechanic, who had been his father's friend. The boy drives on the midget tracks and becomes a sensation until he accidentally kills another driver. He goes East where he redeems himself with his sportsmanship and courage in the Indianapolis race.

Comment: Naivete of story line would seem to weaken this picture for top spots in metropolitan theatres. However, it should suit well as the action half of a double bill. With the action fans, at least, the realism of the racing sequences, loaded with thrills and spills, will more than compensate for any lack in this respect in characterization. As a thrill fest, this film might well have been called "A Day at the Auto Races," and delivers almost a crash a minute throughout the hour-and-a-half of its showing. The love story

Contest Benefits Merchants, Theatre

With so many of the current overall circuit—to say nothing of the many similar independent—advertising campaigns giving evidence of the same amount of brain exercise used in the "shake, rattle and roll" routine of a sidewalk crap game, what follows should prove of prime interest.

I've checked over several of the array of Jingle Contests and merchant tieups of recent months and found practically every one to be in the costly brackets, from a money and time expenditure, while rating fair to penurious in box-office results. The principal fault seems to have been that the coiners of the slogan fests failed to consider the mental capacity of the folks to whom the campaign was directed. Seemingly, they contented themselves with making a grab into the soap-wrapper and box-top practice heap and depending on dollars instead of brains to make their catch-as-catch-can plan go over with a group of potential ticket buyers resentful of being asked to indulge in housemaid and kindergarten practices. Result; high expense and low returns with annoyance rather than amusement visited upon patrons. Cooperators and customers alike were repelled rather than attracted.

By contrast, the following scheme—suited for metropolitan biggies and country mites alike—illustrates how a genuine box-office magnet can be made of an interesting game (not a game of chance, but of skill) where cooperator and participant receive the ultimate in satisfaction and reward. Here's how it works:

Minimum of Paraphernalia and Accessories Required

A minimum of paraphernalia and accessories are required for conducting "Merchant's Quiz Nite." These consist of a P.A. system, participation blanks, 1-sheet in lobby carrying names of cooperating merchants (no screen trailer) and a large facsimile of the participation blank for use on stage. This last can be either black board, window shade, oil cloth or blank paper. Just make certain it's large enough to carry figures of sufficient size to be visible throughout the theatre.

Blanks are of low grade paper stock with contest title and theatre name at the top and a line of 10 perforated boxes or triangles (depending on the stock of your printer) down either side. The center lists "Question No. 1" and so on to 10, without any reference to the content of the question to be asked. The opposite side carries the names of the cooperating merchants. Above one column of perforations appears the word "Yes" and over the other "No."

Ten questions are asked each night of the contest (preferably one for each of ten cooperating merchants, but subject to graduation to conform to the number of cooperators or the number of questions they wish propounded about their business).

All participating merchants are required to contract for the entire duration of the Quiz Nite program. (Six, eight or ten weeks, whichever the theatre manager considers best for his situation.)

The cost of participation to merchants is on a per-tenth-per-week basis, according to the number of questions propounded. A merchant requesting two questions pays double, etc.

The dollar charge per week to each merchant is determined by totaling the amount set aside as a weekly award to successful contenders, the cost of presentation, accessories, etc. As an example: cost of blanks $5, cost of M.C. $15, weekly cash award $50, or a total weekly expense of $70 would place the participation cost at $7 per week per question.

If newspaper ads, radio, window cards street ballyhoo, etc., are used, the cost should be added. If the manager performs the M.C. job, the sum should be placed in the cash award pool.

The awards will, of necessity, vary, according to communities and theatres. The number of merchants participating will also be a deciding factor. However, it is advised that the former be kept as high as possible and the latter limited to 10 for most satisfactory results.

All questions propounded MUST be subject to "Yes" or "No" answers and concern some unit of merchandise appearing on the counters, in the news ads, or in the windows of the cooperating merchants. For instance: Is the red and white dress shown in Smith's window priced at $12.95? Has the center pair of baby shoes in the window of Jones' Top Shop pink bows? Did White's Hardware advertise wire fencing at 10c per lineal foot in today's paper?

These questions are gathered by the M. C. on the afternoon of the contest. He visits each cooperator and requests information about three items the merchant would like to advertise. Without telling the merchant his selection he coins a "Yes" or "No" question about one of the three items and proceeds to the next contact. In this way the only person knowing the questions and answers is the M. C., thereby eliminating all chance of cheat or fraud.

Cooperating merchants are requested to hold the items of merchandise selected for inclusion in the contest at the same price and in the same position on their counters or in their windows for 24 hours after stage completion to permit participants to check the correctness of their answers.

On the night of the contest, blanks (numbered in duplicate and stapled together) are given to all adult patrons.

To Avoid Resistance

It should be pointed out here, however, that to avoid possible resistance from law enforcement authorities, the cashier should be permitted to give blanks to any adult who requests them, whether he buys a ticket or not, and sidewalk participation should be permitted via a lobby loudspeaker.

When the contest hour arrives, the M.C. takes the stage and instructs the audience:

That only adults are permitted to participate.

That each participant must tear the perforated portion of both the original and duplicate blanks, according to his judgment about the answer being "yes" or "no."

That no awards will be given unless one of the blanks is on stage before the answers are revealed.

That the perforations of the blanks on stage must match those of the blank held by the participant when claiming reward.

That all ten questions must be answered and that partially answered entry blanks will be eliminated from the contest.

That, in order to win a prize, the contestant must comply with all rules.

He goes on to explain that all questions are subject to check by visiting the merchants listed on the back of the participation blank but that such check must be made within 24 hours. A reward is offered to the first person discovering an error and reporting same to the theatre box-office with proof of claim.

Propounds the Questions

He then unfurls the large facsimile of the participation blank and proceeds to propound the questions in numerical order. After all ten questions have been put to the audience he again asks that all blanks be examined to make sure that originals and duplicates are marked alike and cautions about conformance with other contest rules.

Members of the service staff are then requested to gather one of the two blanks held by each adult.

While the collection is being made the M. C. tells how the contest is run, how the questions are gathered from the establishment of each merchant, and the precautions against anybody having advance information. There are liberal plugs for the cooperating merchants.

When the blanks are brought to the stage he asks not once but two or three times if all who intend participating have sent up their entries. When no further response is obtained, he declares the contest closed and proceeds to read the original questions. As each is read in numerical order, the answer is given and plainly marked on the facsimile of the participation blank.

When all ten answers have been announced, he asks participants holding blanks marked correctly to identify themselves. If more than one has the correct answers, amount of the award is divided equally. If no participant has answered all ten questions, the last question is eliminated from the contest and the reward given those correctly answering the questions one to nine. The contest progresses downward until the award money is distributed.

There is opportunity for revamping here, with reductions from the weekly award entering a jackpot for future distribution, but conditions in your own community will have to dictate action on this possible phase.

It is important that the name and address of all successful participants be announced to the audience and a record kept at the theatre. It is recommended that the "error reward" be held to $10 and that merchant or theatre (whichever is responsible) be penalized to cover the expense.

Tremendous Ad Value

From perusing the above, you will quickly recognize the tremendous ad value to cooperating merchants as well as the appeal of hard cash to theatre patrons. News of the big weekly cash awards spreads quickly, and the traffic examining the merchant windows, counters, news ads, etc., will multiply times over. That this interest will reflect in added sales goes without saying.

Of extreme value is the fact that all award money is immediately given to local people for spending in local establishments, with the participating merchants holding rail position due to the appearance of their names on the reverse side of the participation blank. Add to this the fact that the lobby board remains in preferred position at the theatre day-in and day-out, and the sales plugs given from the stage during the contest becomes highly desirable to all classes of merchants. For this reason, it is advisable that you hold to an exclusive merchant pattern with only one cooperator from each line of business. In some towns Merchant's Quiz Nite has enjoyed two and three repeats, with a waiting list of merchants desiring to participate holding over from one period to another.

The "error award" has the effect of sending unsuccessful contenders on an additional visit to the merchant's establishments to check the "right" and "wrong" of their blanks and gives the merchant still another chance at their patronage.

Best Business-Getter

I've talked personally with merchants who hold places on this type of program and found each to be enthusiastic with many declaring it to be the best business-getter they ever employed and the "tops" among theatre tieups in which they have taken part.

Its ramifications are numerous with radio and newspaper support among the most promising. Its formula of operation and presentation is such as to instantly preclude any criticism or instant check of "right" and "wrong," enhances the prospects of participation and makes for audience entertainment. The duplicate blanks serve to avoid embarrassment for unsuccessful contenders, since only the successful are required to identify themselves.

In brief, Merchants Quiz Nite seems to be perfectly designed and engineered for the desirable triangle target of box-office revenue, customer amusement and cooperator satisfaction that theatres should always be shooting at. Why not give it a try in your situation?

between Thomas Mitchell and Spring Byington is schmaltzy but the average audience will probably find it pleasant. Mickey Rooney handles well a part tailored to his breezy style. Mary Hatcher is pretty and does a good job as the tomboy who suddenly becomes aware of her femininity when she falls in love with Rooney. Steve Brodie stands out as Happy, the driver whom Rooney kills. The entire cast does well with the material handed them. Picture offers good exploitation possibilities. For the action house, it's a natural.

The Story of Molly X

Univ.-Int'l Drama 82 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An absorbing drama and worthy documentary film with the California Institution for Women at Tehachapi as its principal locale. Story holds the attention throughout its running time. Should please general audiences in all situations.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: This is the kind of picture exhibitors can sink their showmanship teeth into, and it will surely have the backing of law enforcement officials wherever it plays. Smart exploitation should pay off at the box-office.

Cast: June Havoc, John Russell, Dorothy Hart, Connie Gilchrist, Cathy Lewis, Sarah Berner, Sandra Gould, Katherine Warren, Charles McGraw, Elliott Lewis, Wally Maher. Credits: Produced by Aaron Rosenberg. Written and directed by Crane Wilbur. Photography, Irving Glassberg. Special photography, David S. Horsley. Art direction, Bernard Herzbrun and Emrich Nicholson. Music, Milton Schwarzwald.

Plot: Sent to the California Institution for Women at Tehachapi following her conviction for a series of crimes committed in San Francisco with the aid of confederates, Molly X (June Havoc) is bothered by her conscience. She had shot one of the confederates, Rod Markle (Elliott Lewis) when he admitted killing her husband back in Kansas City because of his love for her. Molly is further harassed by Anne (Dorothy Hart), who had loved Rod and seeks to help to find the revolver which had killed him. When Molly is paroled, she learns that another confederate, Cash Brady (John Russell) has been arrested for the Markle murder. She recovers the gun from its hiding place and goes to police headquarters to give herself up. There she learns that the shot she fired hit Markle's revolver belt, knocking him out only temporarily. A little later Brady had found him and had shot him again, this time killing him. Molly is free now, completely rehabilitated.

Comment: Besides being an absorbing drama, "The Story of Molly X" is also a worthy documentary film about the California Institution for Women at Tehachapi. Filmed on actual location sites, the picture shows the progressive penal methods that have been established at the institution, and one is impressed with these methods, which should serve as models for other women's penal institutions. The story itself, which concerns a hardboiled girl who outwits the law until it catches up with her, holds the attention throughout its entire running time. The early crime scenes are melodramatic enough, while those within the C.I.W., to which the woman "gangster" has been committed, are attention-compelling for their informative documentary quality. June Havoc is excellent as Molly X. She's tough in those early crime scenes, and though she later maintains this hardboiled exterior for a while in the institution, meanwhile plagued by her conscience, she wins the audience's sympathy. When she finally does become rehabilitated, one shares with her the joy of her new-found freedom. It's an assignment which Miss Havoc carries through with flying colors. Dorothy Hart is despicable, and therefore effective as the girl who seeks revenge for the murder of her boy-friend, and Elliott Lewis scores a hit as the boy-friend who is in love with Molly. Lewis, who makes his debut in this film and is well known to radio audiences, is "rubbed out" in the early scenes of the film, but the impression of his competent performance nevertheless lingers on. Good performances are also contributed by John Russell, as one of Molly's confederates; Cathy Lewis, as her room-mate at the institution; Connie Gilchrist, Sara Berner, Sandra Gould and others. "The Story of Molly X" should find a receptive audience in most situations.

Deputy Marshal

Lippert Productions Western 72 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) The combination of husband-and-wife team Jon Hall and Frances Langford, plus the strong western supporting cast, in an outdoor film with the required amount of western ingredients, should be found satisfactory entertainment by the fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good product for most situations, especially where the Jon Hall and Frances Langford names have a following.

Plot: Trouble starts when a dying man turns over a railroad map with a planned right-of-way to a deputy marshal. There are quite a number of people interested in the whereabouts of this map and it takes a lot of killings and other nefarious deeds to clear the matter up.

Comment: Because it boasts the name-draw of Jon Hall and Frances Langford and includes in its running time the usual assortment and quantity of established sagebrush ingredients, this outdoor action film is one that should satisfy. Jon Hall does a good job as the Deputy Marshal who cleans up the town and Miss Langford presents two catchy tunes between riding chores. The strong supporting cast—among whom are such well-known western players as Russell Hayden, Clem Bevans and Dick Foran—add to the entertainment value of the film. Photography is especially good for a new lens has been used, one that clarifies everything in sight, taking away the usual fuzziness of backgrounds. This is known as the Garutso Balances Lens, a new optical principle which creates a three dimensional effect. Direction was by William Berke. William Stephens produced.

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

Premiere Series On 'Battleground' Start This Week

With Dore Schary, MGM vice-president in charge of production, on hand for the special activities, accompanied by George Murphy, John Hodiak and Denise Darcel, who appear in the picture, "Battleground" got off to an impressive start Wednesday evening when a preview-premiere was held at Loew's Capitol in Washington, D. C.

The special activities included a salute by the 3rd Infantry Regiment, one of the oldest in the Army, having served continuously since 1784. The color guard wore uniforms of the 1776 era. The Army Ground Force band of 100 played in front of the theatre as the distinguished guests arrived. More than 100 Army and Navy officers accepted invitations to the special performance.

Prior to the showing, Schary and the three members of the "Battleground" cast were scheduled to make a personal appearance on the stage with Major General Anthony C. McAuliffe, famous for his "Nuts!" rebuttal to a German General at Bastogne.

Schary arrived in Washington on Tuesday where he spoke before the Women's National Press Club at the Statler Hotel and then met with newspaper film critics. In the afternoon he spoke on the "Time for Defense" program at Lisner Auditorium, when General McAuliffe presented him with the Army Certificate of Merit for his outstanding contribution in producing "Battleground."

Early Wednesday morning the MGM executive conferred with Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin at the latter's office, after which he was presented with a special plaque by the 101st Airborne Division.

For luncheon he was guest of Eric Johnston at the Motion Picture Association of America's headquarters. In the early afternoon he met with film critics from Baltimore, Harrisburg, SPECTACULAR is this display on RKO Radio's "Mighty Joe Young" at the Gaumont Marble Arch Pavilion in London's West End. And spectacular, too, is the business the picture did, as you can tell from the lineup at bottom of picture. Film also played concurrently at the Haymarket.

Butler Homecoming Spurs 'Seabiscuit' in S.F.

Homecoming of San Francisco's native son, Director David Butler, highlighted the opening of Warners' "The Story of Seabiscuit" at the Paramount Theatre in that city this week. Buildup for the film, which began when Butler met more than 75 Bay Area sports writers, columnists, radio commentators and editors on his arrival last week, was featured by the director's appearance on eight radio shows and a long distance mass interview between local sports writers and Charles S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit. Howard was in Hawaii.

On Friday of last week Butler unveiled a plaque in memory of Seabiscuit at the 50th anniversary meeting of the Tanforan Race Track, while Mrs. Butler presented flowers to the winning jockey in the "Seabiscuit Stakes." sixth race on the day's card.

Cleveland Bow Set for 'Molly X'

Marking a "homecoming" for Dorothy Hart, one of the film's stars, Universal-International's "The Story of Molly X" will have it world premiere Nov. 17 at the Palace Theatre, Cleveland. Miss Hart, a native of Cleveland, will arrive several days in advance to participate in a round of civic events and promotional and personal appearances. John Russell, another star of the picture, is scheduled to accompany her.

On the day of the premiere Nancy Craig will originate her ABC network program, "Woman of Tomorrow," from Cleveland.

'Hidden Book' Contest

Raymond MacNamara, manager, Allyn, Hartford, Conn., used a "Hidden Book" contest, planted through local libraries as advance promotion on "The Black Book."

New Paramount Co-op Plan Based On Rent and Run

A new system of cost sharing on cooperative advertising, based upon the percentage the distributor receives for rental, was announced this week by Paramount.

The plan, as conceived by Exploitation Manager Sid (Mr. Rabbit) Mesibov, and outlined by National Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation Director Max Youngstein would apparently not confine cooperative ads to top houses in key cities and would:

1) Throw the support of Paramount behind the picture's first run in any location, regardless of its size, in order to get "the picture off to a good star," as Youngstein explains it.

2) Change the method of estimating the distributor's share of the costs. Hitherto, it was customary for Paramount to pay half of every dollar expended on a co-op campaign which went beyond the theatres' normal budget. Under the

Rivoli Offers Bonds For Christmas Jingles

Chicago 'Trapped' Campaign Scores

Credit for much of the success of the Chicago opening of "Trapped" at the Roosevelt Theatre is given by Manager Jack Garber and B & K officials to the comprehensive promotion and exploitation campaign conceived and executed by B & K Ad-Publicity Chief William K. Hollander and EL Exploiteer Milton Overman.

Keynote of the campaign was centered on the "Don't Be 'Trapped'—Know Your Money" theme, which was carried through all types of cooperative tieups, displays, street ballyhoos, etc. This selling angle was touched off by a huge citywide tieup with Canadian Ace Beer, which gave the film 14x22 window cards in more than 5,000 bars and other retail outlets. Canadian Ace also was tied up for a monster citywide parade with several large bands, almost 100 lavishly bannered trucks and lots of hoop-la and excitement. Spotted throughout the parade were tieup displays for "Trapped" in addition to a large, brilliantly illuminated, animated sound truck which sold the picture for the entire duration of the parade.

Pabst Beer was tied up for exclusive use of the ""running message" space on its tremendous illuminated electric clock at the corner of Michigan Boulevard and Madison, one of the busiest corners in the world, where the sign is visible for over a mile distance. From sundown until daybreak every day the "running message" carried full credits for the picture, theatre and playdate, as well as a strong selling pitch. This is the first time in the history of Chicago that any motion picture has ever been able to tie up with this spectacular sign.

Radio tieups also plugged the "Don't Be 'Trapped'" angle, with full credits used. Actual time promoted gratis on local stations represented a total value of more than $2,000, with the plugs concentrated during most popular listening hours of the evening and weekends.

Tieup set with the Boy Scouts of America and the Girl Scouts of America resulted in the placing of 2,500 large display cards in most prominent public places. These cards were angled on the cooperation offered the Government in fighting counterfeiters by the Youth of America.

Street ballyhoos saw a bevy of lovely girls touring the most populated areas of Chicago, handing out cards reading: "Don't Be a Sucker" and carrying small cellophane-wrapped lollipops.

'Laughing' Performance To Aid Runyon Fund

A special world premiere performance of Milton Berle's new Warner Bros. picture, "Always Leave Them Laughing" will be held at the Strand Theatre, New York, on Nov. 22 for the benefit of the Damon Runyon Memorial Fund for Cancer Research. Berle will appear in person at the performance, scheduled to start at 10 P.M. The film will start its regular run on Nov. 25, the day after Thanksgiving.

Video Auditions

With a talent quest stage show set, Ben Geary and John Palfi of the Kent and Ravenna, Ohio, theatres, saved a spot for a television audition, informing citizens and rural residents of that fact. They then promoted gift certificates for prizes from three local merchants, plus theatre passes for the winners.

Extra

Newsboy Day became a big event for the paper carrying lads in a movie-wise manner in the San Francisco Bay area. In San Francisco, a preview of "Christopher Columbus" was held at the Orpheum while in Oakland's T & D Theatre the Warner Bros. film "Task Force" was shown. All theatres of the California Theatres Association carried special trailers.

U-I Continues Special Promotion on 4 Films

Decision to continue Universal-International's large-scale local and regional promotions inaugurated last March was reached last week at studio conferences in which Nate Blumberg, W. A. Scully, Leo Spitz, William Goetz, Edward Muhl, Maurice Bergman, Rufus LeMaire and David A. Lipton participated.

Top-budget advertising and promotional campaigns were set on four special features set for release during the next few months. These include "Bagdad," in Technicolor, "South Sea Sinner," "Woman in Hiding" and "Francis."

"Bagdad," set for Thanksgiving release, will be the first of the four to get concentrated attention under the plan.

U-I's National Advertising and Publicity Director Lipton said the plan was conceived "so that the full potential of these . . . pictures can be realized at the box-office. Their cost and quality, we feel, are such that nothing should be overlooked in making the public aware of them.'

Kislingbury Divides 'Sword' Campaign

When "Sword in the Desert" played at North Coast Theatres' Orpheum in San Francisco, Publicist Graham Kislingbury divided his selling campaign between two phases of the picture.

Setting up special previews for rabbis and editors of Jewish newspapers, the "message" side of the film was exploited, while newspapers and radio stressed the action element.—SF.

Ann Blyth Gets a Warm Welcome

When Ann Blyth, who co-stars with Robert Cummings in Universal-International's "Free for All," arrived in Milwaukee one day last week to make personal appearances in connection with the world premiere of the comedy at the Warner Theatre on Friday (4), a round of activities began that kept her on the go right through premiere date.

A welcoming crowd of more than 1,000 persons was at the station to meet her and, according to reports, the crowd "literally chased away the season's first frost with their warming reception." This included a speech by Acting Mayor Milton J. McGuire and a musical salute of Irish Eyes Are Smiling by the 75-piece Marquette University Band. Banners proclaimed Ann as "Marquette's Own 1949 Homecoming Queen," and a group of cheer leaders from the University of Wisconsin performed special tumbling antics (not to mention a few other guys who got their first in-person glimpse of lovely Ann). Members of the press also took time out from their chores to meet the star.

Banner-Carrying Students

A parade of cars headed by motorcycle escort and including the band and banner-carrying students made its way through downtown Milwaukee to the Schroeder Hotel and then on to a special civic luncheon at the Schlitz Brewery where Ann met press representatives, radio dignitaries, and members of the governing body of the city. Also present at the luncheon was William L. Ainsworth, president of National Allied. There were speeches.

Following these activities, Ann made a series of radio interviews on all local stations. And then next day she addressed the Wisconsin Teachers Association and headed the Marquette University Homecoming Parade that night.

Refreshed after a good night's rest, Ann was back in full swing again on premiere day making three appearances on the Warner stage and sandwiching-in several autograph parties in the lobby.

Her Milwaukee visit was only the beginning. She was scheduled for a series of tours through surrounding towns climaxed by press interviews in Chicago prior to the opening of her movie at the RKO Grand on Nov. 10.

SORKIN'S 'TASK FORCE' LOBBY DISPLAY. For the showing of Warner Bros.' "Task Force" at RKO Keith's Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., I.M.P.S. Member Sol Sorkin, city manager, arranged for this U. S. Naval Reserve lobby display that included models of 20-MM guns, 40-MM guns, walkie-talkies, sonovision cabinet projectors, bullets, uniforms and other naval equipment.

Shemberg Display Startles Patrons

There have been many unusual campaigns at the Kum-C Theatre in Toronto, Ontario, according to Manager Joseph Shemberg, but none which stood out as prominently as a stunt utilized on RKO Radio's "The Boy With Green Hair."

It was a display "which startled the patrons but also amused them and attracted their attention." Illustrated here, the display was centered around a large papier-mache head of the boy. The hair was made from green spun glass which was illuminated from "inside the head" by several light bulbs. The head and lettering were placed on a three-sheet board over a background of black and yellow crepe paper.

Idea for the display occurred to P. Coyle who was manager of the house before being transferred. Shemberg carried it to completion, with Fred Nihda, a theatre staff member doing the actual construction work. The cost: just five dollars.

Beauty Contest Is Steinhurst Stunt

It's a little late to report this summertime stunt, but you'll forget the chilly weather reading about it, and, what's more, you still may be able to use it in your locality or adapt it later to a picture similar in theme to "The Girl from Jones Beach."

It was a Bathing Beauty Contest. Doesn't that make you feel warmer? And it was staged in Savannah, Ga., by Manager Spencer Steinhurst of the Weis Theatre. Of course you know by now the picture with which it was tied-in.

Weis made the contest the hub of his campaign. He promoted prizes from several merchants. Then he announced the contest through a special trailer and added lines in his newspaper ads.

But that's only part of it. He persuaded radio station WDAR's disc jockey, Julian Silver, to be emcee for the contest, and this resulted in much radio coverage in advance. He distributed 400 window cards and contest entry blanks throughout a 50-mile radius. This distribution was made by a soft-drink bottling company which had displays in its dealers' windows and also banners on its trucks.

"Greetings from 'The Girl from Jones Beach'" penny postcards were mailed to 500 people.

Contest details appeared in the newspaper, and the ad budget was increased. Special three-column art and story broke in the Evening Press on the day of the contest, and the announcement of winners appeared next day.

Steinhurst doesn't say, but we bet he had a houseful on the night of the contest.

Paramount Co-op Plan Based on Rent and Run

new plan, the house budget is thrown out of the window and the exhibitor and the exploiteer sit down and work out together the costs of a campaign they think is needed to sell the picture. Then Paramount contributes to the costs an amount equal to the percentage it receives as rental. On a 40 per cent picture, Paramount would contribute 40 per cent of the campaign's cost from the first dollar spent. The house would contribute 60 per cent.

Mesibov reportedly worked out the plan with Paramount's distribution staff after consulting with exhibitors.

Heavy Campaign for 'Kiss' in Norfolk

Milton Kaufman, managing director of Loew's State, Norfolk, Va., went to town with a heavy all-around campaign on "That Midnight Kiss," recently. Five thousand heralds and 250 window cards were printed up specially and distributed prior to opening. All Norfolk buses carried a 11x28 three-color display card. There were three co-op ads, a stepped-up newspaper campaign, four window displays, a radio contest, extra and regular trailers, and special lobby front. Manager Kaufman reported a better than average week for his extra efforts.

Odell on Leave; Freedgood to Paramount

C. N. Odell, a member of Paramount's publicity staff since 1931, has been granted an indefinite leave of absence because of ill health, the company announced last week. At the same time it was revealed that Mort Freedgood, formerly associated with United Artists, 20th-Fox and the J. Arthur Rank Organization, has joined the home office publicity staff as head of the newly-created writing department.

COHEN'S TIEIN. Taking advantage of the current public interest in the "Kigmy," Lil Abner cartoon strip character, Manager Lou Cohen of Loew's Poli, Hartford, Conn., placed one in front of the theatre as a tiein with the showing of MGM's "The Doctor and the Girl." Idea is that those missing the picture kick the "Kigmy."

Premiere Series On 'Battleground'

Reading and other nearby towns at the Variety Club headquarters in the Willard Hotel. This was followed by a buffet supper.

Invitational premiere of the picture was held Thursday evening at the Astor Theatre in New York—the same theatre which 25 years ago converted from legitimate shows to picture presentations with a similar premiere of "The Big Parade."

Notables on Hand

Notables from the Army, entertainment world and newspaper and publishing fields were on hand for the event. Preceding the debut, two infantry bands played in front of the theatre surrounded by 75 Wacs from Ft. Jay, Governor's Island, and a color guard. The ceremonies were televised by NBC which also made a tape recording, while WMGM covered the live radio broadcast. MGM's News of the Day also covered the opening.

George Murphy was master of ceremonies for the activities on the Astor stage. He introduced Hodiak and Mlle. Darcel, as well as Robert Pirosh, who wrote the story of "Battleground" and acted as associate producer with Schary.

On Armistice Day "Battleground" was scheduled to begin its engagement at the Astor, with four cities in the Belgian area menaced by the Germans in their Bastogne drive also slated to open with it. The cities are Liege, Antwerp and Brussels, Belgium; and Luxembourg, Luxembourg.

Methodist Clergy Supports 'Boundaries'

Wholehearted support was given "Lost Boundaries" by the Methodist clergymen in Salisbury, Md., after Manager Manny Winston of the Wicomico Theatre there had contacted the Rev. J. B. Dickinson, who is head of the Methodist church for the whole Maryland "lower shore" with 60 churches under his jurisdiction. He had read the book and was enthusiastic about it, knew a picture had been made from it, and gave Winston the names and addresses of the 60 ministers in his district, promised his personal endorsement of the picture and gave permission for the use of his name in writing to the 60 clergymen.

The fact that the endorsement of the film appearing in the press book by a Methodist clergyman, Everett W. Palmer, was a personal friend and classmate of the Rev. Mr. Dickinson was a clinching argument in winning the latter's endorsement of the film, this despite the fact that the Negro problem is a very delicate subject in Maryland's "lower shore."

Ravenna Rounds Up Roy Rogers Rooters

Chuck Henley and Paul Henry have started a Roy Rogers club for the Ravenna in Ravenna, Ohio. Before every movie with the cowboy star there will be a stage meeting with entertainment. Kids who join have already promoted 1,000 photos of their favorite from local merchants, gone 50/50 with the theatre on a 40 x 60 and are looking forward to electing officers and receiving a quarterly journal. The local newspaper was interested enough to publish, at its own expense, a three-column picture of the club.

Segregation

Separation of popcorn and non-popcorn eaters in theatres was suggested in an editorial recently in the Des Moines Tribune. The newspaper said that "the thinking manager should divide his theatre (main floor only) with a partition of glass—soundproof, of course. Pro-popcorn would occupy one side of the theatre while anti-popcorners could enjoy the movie fully and the pro-popcorners could "drive no one crazy but themselves," the editorial said. The paper added that the balcony should be left for the young ones in love whether popcorn eaters or not.

Anson Bond announced the signing of Robert Florey to direct "The Vicious Years," new Emerald production for Film Classics. With Tommy Cook, Sybil Merritt and Paul Livermore already set for the leading roles, the picture starts this month.

Warner Baxter, who starred for Columbia earlier this year in the title role of "Prison Warden," returns to the studio for a second prison story, "Leavenworth," in which he will be seen as a convict, instead of an honest man.

* * *

"A Moment of Fear," an original story by Oscar Boetticher, was purchased by Monogram Producer Lindsley Parsons as a starring vehicle for Lucille Bremer. The picture will be filmed in La Paz, Mexico, early in 1950, with Edward Norris, Jan Clayton, Charles Lang and Helen Parrish in top roles. Boetticher is also set to direct.

* * *

"The Richest Girl in Jail," an original comedy by Michael Fessier, was purchased by RKO as a starring vehicle for Jane Greer. Robert Sparks is to produce, with filming slated to start soon after the first of the year.

* * *

Felix Feist has been signed to direct "Murder, Inc.," which Milton Sperling's United States Production company will produce for Warner Bros. Feist checks into the studio the latter part of this month to begin preparatory work on the film. No cast has been selected.

* * *

Jonathan Latimer, Paramount writer, was assigned to do the screenplay for "Jack of Diamonds," the Ray Milland starrer. Richard Haydn is due to direct, with Joseph Sistrom as producer.

Joan Leslie gets the leading feminine role in "The Skipper Surprised His Wife," the first for her at MGM. With Robert Walker set for the starring role, the pictures goes before the cameras late this month, with Elliott Nugent directing. Production is the third this year for William H. Wright.

Eddie Bracken, well-known comedian, was signed by Howard Hughes to an exclusive long-term starring contract at RKO. He reports to the studio after the first of the year.

Doris Day will co-star with Ginger Rogers in Warner Bros.' "Storm Center." Miss Day has been assigned a straight dramatic role in the film, under Stuart Heisler's direction, with Jerry Wald producing.

* * *

Producer-Director Clarence Brown has launched pre-production activity on "To Please a Lady," which will be his next for MGM. Brown just returned from Sacramento where he arranged for several professional race drivers to appear in the picture, which will star Clark Gable.

Showmanship Cure for Box-Office Ills—Wyler

William Wyler

Showmanship is the solution for our box-office ills, declares Producer-Director William Wyler, holder of two Academy Awards and presently under contract to Paramount. Wyler has a consistent record of turning out product that makes money, and reports show that his latest picture, the critically acclaimed "The Heiress," upholds that record. Naturally, then, his opinions and ideas carry considerable weight.

"When an exhibitor uses showmanship to sell a good picture," he mused, "his patrons learn to depend on him. He is building his theatre into an institution in the town. He can, over a period of time, develop the movie habit in people who do not ordinarily attend, and so is able to count on their support for the better films. If the full potential from good product isn't realized by securing the longest possible run and the greatest possible attendance, the showman is losing money, because the opportunity to get this extra income doesn't come every day. The great picture is the exception, rather than the rule."

Analyzing the returns on a film, Wyler said: "I am not interested in how many seats were filled but in how many were empty. I want to know this: did they get everybody in town to the theatre? People don't buy cars they never heard of, neither do they go to movies they never heard of. Tell them about it. They'll thank you."

What about the charge that many Hollywood films are poor?

"I don't believe that's true. Many movies are poor but there are endless gradations in the quality of films, same as there are in any art form. I would say that in any art there are bound to be lapses, and the great examples are far outnumbered by the commonplace. However, I think that what I have said contains the solution to the problem of poor pictures. If the exhibitor, by proper exploitation, would make the outstanding productions the main source of his income, and let the poor ones slip by there would be more good pictures made."

"The Heiress" is doing remarkable business in the metropolitan areas, and the producer-director expects the same in smaller communities. It's about simple people, their conflicts, their hopes and their defeats. These things are timeless and universal. It is the perfect example of a picture that should be sold.

Council Honors Wyler For 'The Heiress'

The Southern California Motion Picture Council at its monthly meeting last week cited Producer-Director William Wyler for his production of "The Heiress," which the Council declared "a picture of unusual and outstanding merit." In accepting the scroll, Wyler paid tribute to the Council and urged its members to continue their constructive work. He briefly discussed the industry's responsibility to the public, pointing out his belief that adult pictures should be made as well as those suitable for children.

The Council, headed by Mrs. William A. Burk, is made up of representatives from 48 women's and other organizations. Their recommendations are sent to these groups, libraries, schools, colleges and other organizations throughout the country.

New Lasky Film Project For Paramount Release

"Valley of the Mists," a Technicolor adventure film to be made by Jesse L. Lasky in Central America, will be distributed by Paramount, it was learned last week. Lasky has assembled a production unit with his son, William, as associate producer. His other son, Jesse, Jr., will write the screenplay from an original story by Willis O'Brien and Charles Palmer.

Goldwyn Signs Keith For 'Edge of Doom'

Samuel Goldwyn has signed Robert Keith, until recently the doctor in "Mr. Roberts" on Broadway, for the role of Detective Mandel in "Edge of Doom." Keith also appeared in Goldwyn's "My Foolish Heart," returned to Broadway, then came back to Hollywood for a role in "The Redhead and the Reformer" at MGM.

'Jet Pilot' First for Von Sternberg at RKO

First assignment for Josef Von Sternberg at RKO Radio will be "Jet Pilot," which will be produced in Technicolor by Jules Furthman with John Wayne and Janet Leigh co-starring. Von Sternberg was signed to a term contract last week by Howard Hughes.

'Rear Guard' Bought As Gary Cooper Vehicle

"Rear Guard," a new novel by James Warner Bellah, has been purchased by Warner Bros. as a possible starring vehicle for Gary Cooper. Anthony Veiller will produce. Story is laid against the background of the Indian wars in the southwest.

North Signed

Edmund H. North has been signed to write the screenplay of "Bureau of Missing Persons," which Louis F. Edelman will produce for Warner Bros.

Studio Roundup

The troupes of Paramount's "September," and Universal-International's "Deported" completed filming outdoor scenes and background in Italy and arrived home last week. Interior shots got underway immediately on the Hollywood sound stages, where the two pictures could be given the advantage of superior technical treatment.

At Columbia, Director Gordon Douglas started principals Louis Hayward and Patricia Medina to work in "Fortunes of Captain Blood," from the Rafael Sabatini novel. Hayward, already an experienced swordsman, is taking a brush-up course in fencing to perfect the Spanish method used during the period of the story.

Now It's 'Mule Train'

"Beyond the Purple Hills" rolled at Autry Productions. Director John English, again puts Gene Autry and Pat Buttram through their paces. Oops! There goes that title. Autry and his producer, Armand Schaefer, purchased the current song hit, Mule Train, and so now "Mule Train" is the film's new title.

The Lippert production, "Crooked River," starring James Ellison, completes the list of new pictures started last week, which, strangely enough, adds to only three; the smallest number in a long time. Thomas Carr has the direction assignment on the Lippert picture.

Thirty-two paraplegic veterans from Birmingham Veterans Hospital were signed for speaking roles in "The Men," Stanley Kramer's filming of the story of the permanently paralyzed veterans of the last war. The first group of 19 were being given pre-production instructions by Director Fred Zinnemann at Motion Picture Center.

Fifteen professional acrobats and top stunt men have been signed for work in the hazardous action sequences in Warner Bros.' "The Hawk and the Arrow." However, star Burt Lancaster will perform all his own stunts.

Bulova to Manufacture 'Academy Award' Watch

Board of Governors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has approved a contract licensing Bulova Watch Company to manufacture a watch to be known as "Academy Award," it has been announced by Charles Brackett, Academy president.

According to Brackett, the Academy will receive a minimum of $125,000 over a four-year period from Bulova in return for the use of the phrase, "Academy Award," and the exclusive right to reproduce the Academy's Award of Merit ("Oscar") statuette in all advertising pertaining to this particular series of watches. The Board has voted to loan the money to the Academy Building Corp. to reduce the indebtedness on the Academy Award theatre building.

Williams, King's Men To Stay On at U-I

Universal-International has signed Tex Williams and his Western Caravan for a third series of eight three-reel musical westerns to be made next year.

At the same time the studio signed The King's Men, popular vocal group, to appear in the 1950-51 series of "Sing and Be Happy" shorts.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

French, BFPA Director, Lays Film Employe Salary Cuts and Picture-Making Drop to High Production Costs and Wages

By JOCK MacGREGOR

For the first time since his appointment over three years ago, Sir Henry French, director general of the British Film Producers Association, revealed a defeatist attitude at his November press conference. The subject under discussion was the salary cuts inflicted on British film employes, and he frankly admitted that production was decreasing annually as the pictures were not realizing the money to put into new features.

Jock MacGregor

The blame is placed on high production costs and salaries. Personally, in view of the position held at the end of the war, I am regretfully bound to add mismanagement and put the responsibility on those few individuals who neglect the public and box-office alike.

These offenders have been content to sit in their offices, read reports and blast the theatremen when a film has not come up to expectations instead of going out and getting first-hand knowledge of conditions. In the lust to create the perfect machine they have scorned the human factor and personal showmanship.

The misuse of stars and technicians and poor selection of subjects have combined with the Quota Act, independent exhibitor resistance and the strange choice of American releases to accelerate the British crisis. The scorching summer was but the final blow.

It is no secret that the Korda British Lion group would have been unable to continue its program without Film Finance Corporation aid and there is speculation as to what will happen when the loans are exhausted.

Rank's program becomes less ambitious with each announcement and it is rumored that at the year's end only Pinewood will be operating. Meanwhile, ACT are referring their dispute over the proposed salary cuts to the Board of Trade. The boys do not believe this measure will save the day so long as certain individuals remain in command.

Among the economies recommended to London Films by the government-sponsored FFC is the closing down of the central publicity department, and this has been put into immediate effect. Future photographs of J. H. Lawrie visiting the studios will in consequence be sent by unit publicity representatives direct to the trade press.

Ingram Fraser, the publicity chief, has gone to Films of France, a new company which has been formed to look after the interests of the leading French producers in this country, and has leased the Rialto Cinema.

The Italians are also looking with eager eyes at the British market, and passing through London on his way to New York recently was Dr. Renato Gualino, of Lux Films and president of their Film Producers Association. He spoke optimistically of dubbing their offerings into both English and American and hopes to get good returns for his efforts.

I am afraid I provided a wet blanket to the proceedings, for I cannot see "dubbed" films succeeding in this market. There is a surfeit of properly recorded pictures with artists whom the public knows, and I believe the style and tempo of the Italian films endears them more to the discriminating patron, who prefers a sub-title anyway, than to the general run. Maybe if the dollar shortage continues we shall just have to get used to them.

Paramount's Plaza Theatre is now planning to introduce stage acts to bring the crowds back to the West End where business continues to be far from brisk. Odd phenomenon is the success of "Third Man" which is still playing to near capacity at the Carlton after some 100 bookings in the suburbs. This certainly proves that the current short premiere run and general suburban release is inadequate for a good film.

Incidentally, I took a second look at this winner the other night and reckon that its zither musical accompaniment has created one of the finest word-of-mouth publicity campaigns in years. This tricky, tantalizing little tune which is hard to hum yet fascinates all who hear it is the film's strongest selling angle.

Phil Gersdorf, who came over to handle the American publicity for Walt Disney's "Treasure Island," has found many friends in this country and has made a gesture which will long be remembered with pleasure. Before leaving on the Mauretania, he was host at a small lunch for those national, American and trade pressmen who had given him particular assistance, and it was a really delightful function. Here's hoping that Phil and Beulah, his charming wife, will return before long.

Mexican Locales Set For 'Death on Side St.'

With James Mason and Marta Toren in the top roles, Universal-International's "Death on a Side Street" will start shooting in Cuernavaca, Mexico, on Dec. 1. From there shooting will be transferred to Mexico City. Locations were chosen last week by Producer Leonard Goldstein and Director Hugo Fregonese.

Broidy Names Schwalb Monogram Cost Supervisor

Ben Schwalb, veteran motion picture executive, has been named cost supervisor of all Monogram and Allied Artists forthcoming product by President Steve Broidy. Schwalb will work directly under the supervision of Broidy and will serve as liaison between the producers and the president.

MGM to Make 'Ivanhoe'

"Ivanhoe," Sir Walter Scott's immortal classic of romance and adventure, will be produced in 1950 by MGM in England, as one of the studio's most spectacular Technicolor films. Production has been assigned to Pandro S. Berman.

DECEMBER, 1949

1. Are any important keys missing as a result of employe turnover? If so, do you take the precaution of having locks changed from time to time just to make sure you are safe?
2. At this time of the year, when most patrons are wearing heavy Winter clothing, projectionists should run sound about one point higher because of the increased absorption.
3. Are you getting full value from the lighting current you pay for or is part of it wasted because of dusty bulbs or tubes, or accumulated dirt on reflecting surfaces?
4. If you have penny scales in restrooms or elsewhere in your theatre do you have their accuracy checked periodically? False readings annoy patrons and earn you ill will.
5. Time now to overhaul your reserve stock of candy and other refreshments and place orders with suppliers for types that are in special demand during Christmas season.
6. Have you been careful to avoid inflammables in your planned Christmas decorations, or if not to have them flame-proofed? Take no chances on fire or panic.
7. If any flaws in your heating arrangements have turned up to date, have you arranged for the necessary repairs or adjustments to keep patrons comfortable? Colder weather is coming.
8. If you are having a television antenna installed above your theatre, be certain that the installation is effectively protected against lightning—demand guarantee on this.
9. Does theatre air feel stale when you enter after having spent some time in the open? You don't want to waste heat by excessive ventilation, but you don't want it to smell musty, either.
10. Have you chosen a satisfactorily cool place to store reserves of candy, etc., where furnace or steam pipes will not spoil its palatability, appearance or salability?
11. Have you revised your candy, refreshment and beverage displays for winter season appeal? Are your counters and machines now stocked with winter merchandise?
12. Any untidiness of staff uniforms is sure to give patrons an unfavorable impression of your theatre. Do you insist on neatness at all times and hold staff inspections periodically?
13. Is your sound volume under observation at all times—is the projection room signalled promptly to raise or lower volume whenever size of audience changes materially?
14. Take time out now for a thorough last-minute re-check of all your planned arrangements for handling crowds safely throughout the coming holiday week.
15. Check the theatre's reserve supplies of lamp bulbs, and tubes, fuses, tickets, confections, sanitary requirements, etc., to make sure all are ample for holiday week.
16. Are your Christmas tree and/or other holiday lighting and wiring arrangements perfectly safe and fool-proof electrically? Are wires located where patrons cannot trip on them?
17. Have you had the plugs of all electrical extension cords inspected for broken casings, poor connection, loose prongs, frayed insulation and other electrical fire hazards?
18. Have you made absolutely certain that no seasonal decorations are located where they can hide any exit sign from any angle, or even slightly impede use of any exit?
19. Have you supplied your box office with holiday price signs, and have cashiers, doormen and ushers been thoroughly instructed on details of holiday price schedules?
20. Have you gone over your 1949 records and report forms thoroughly to try to find ways of improving operation, maintenance and general efficiency during 1950?
21. Do you plan to introduce any new (or revised) bookkeeping, record or report forms for use during 1950? If so, have you ordered the new forms printed? Little time is left.
22. Have you re-checked on your 1950 insurance policies and arrangements to make certain coverage will be complete, and in ample amount, to protect you in ALL contingencies?
23. Have you gone back thoroughly through 1949 telephone bills and long distance charges to see if there is any opportunity there to reduce unnecessary expenses?
24. Do not take the continued effectiveness of your heating system for granted; visit every part of the theatre occasionally, both when it is nearly empty and when it is crowded.
25. Check up on your fuel consumption to date, compare it with anticipated consumption and supply on hand. Change your fuel delivery schedule if necessary to make sure of ample supply.
26. Have you installed a positive and foolproof routine to make certain adequate amounts of ashes or sand will be spread whenever exit alleys or sidewalks are covered with ice?
27. Has experience this winter proved that your check room facilities are adequate for caring for patrons' coats, umbrellas, overshoes—or do they need some improvement?
28. Is the staff keeping the theatre, including rest rooms, tidy and attractive at all times, and particularly just after breaks, in spite of heavy holiday patronage?
29. Have holiday crowds depleted your supply of popcorn, candy or other refreshments? Take no chance of running short and losing sales, order additional supplies now.
30. If a heavy storm should suddenly cut off all power would you be in danger of panic in your theatre for lack of emergency lighting arrangements? If so, put them in at once.
31. Do you check with your local fire and safety authorities now and then and ask their recommendations? If you follow their advice faithfully you can never be called negligent.

Maintenance Memos for Projectionists

DECEMBER, 1949

1. Have you a regular program for listening to or otherwise checking each individual loudspeaker unit for its individual volume, quality, and freedom from noisy operation?
2. Time for another check on steadiness of power line voltage. Read it every two hours during show time, report any variations greater than plus or minus 3 per cent.
3. Are you keeping yourself in close touch with the latest developments of theatre television and its equipment? No one knows how soon you may be called on to operate it.
4. How long since you checked your motor-generator for increase in vibration or noise? If either is growing worse have needed repairs made without expensive delay.
5. Is it ever necessary for you to take carbon tetrachloride from a fire extinguisher for cleaning purposes? Order an extra supply; don't risk depleting the extinguisher.
6. If your arc lamp reflectors are becoming badly enough pitted to need replacement soon, order new ones well in advance of actual need for them, so quality of show won't suffer.
7. Have you checked recently on the performance of new projection and sound apparatus? If your own is old and no longer in good shape, have you recommended timely replacements?
8. Is vibration of either projector increasing? If so, go over whole mechanism carefully to find the cause, and ask for the indicated repairs or replacements without delay.
9. When changes are made in projection room wiring do you always recommend oversize wires or conduit and extra pairs, to minimize the cost of the next change?
10. Do you have on hand sufficient supplies of every type of lubricating oil and grease you need? Don't let good equipment suffer through your failure to place orders in time.
11. If you are not allowed advance time for proper inspection and repair of all prints before running them, ask for it and explain why it is vital to safety.
12. Does someone periodically check the buzzer and phone to the floor and to the manager's office to keep them in perfect working order? If not, why don't you?
13. Is maintenance of the theatre's public address system a part of your responsibility? If so, have you set up a regular, periodic schedule for doing this work?
14. How long since lamphouse exhaust flues were last cleaned out? Partially clogged exhausts will increase the concentration of dangerous fumes in the projection room air.
15. How long since projection room ventilating ducts were cleaned out? Make sure they are not partially clogged—protect your one and only pair of lungs.
16. Court plaster can be used to tag wires when making repairs. Cut it into small squares and stick one on each wire. Write information on the back of each square.
17. Have you checked over your 1949 records and report forms looking for ways to improve operation, maintenance and efficiency in 1950? If not, why not?
18. Do you feel that you want to introduce any new record or report forms for use during 1950? If so, have them sent to the printer now so they will be ready in time.
19. Do you feel that you want to suggest to your manager or company any new, improved operating practices to be followed in 1950? Do it now, when other plans are also being made.
20. Time for year-end inventory of projection room equipment, supplies, spare parts, printed forms, tools. Order whatever is found needed to start new year fair and square.
21. Spare parts, supplies, service may not be too easy to get during coming holiday week-ends. Have you everything you need for insurance against possible breakdown?
22. Have projection ventilating arrangements proved adequate during cold weather thus far? If not, ask for improvements; colder weather will be coming.
23. Is maintenance of hearing aid amplifiers and headphones part of your responsibility? If so, do you test and inspect them regularly without waiting for faults and complaints?
24. Time for year-end inventory of projection room maintenance data and diagrams, switch and fuse panel data, and wiring diagrams, so both you and relief men will have full information.
25. Is a complete list of your theatre's fire and other emergency rules and procedures permanently posted in your projection room for guidance of relief projectionists?
26. Will a relief projectionist know where to find, without delay, all tools, supplies and spare parts he may need? If not, why not post list or mark all drawers and cabinets.
27. If you use reel-end alarms are they still in good condition and not damaging to film? Check and see; make adjustments or repairs or order replacements as necessary.
28. Do heating arrangements cause any item of apparatus to operate at more than its allowable temperature rise? Move it to cooler place or give it more ventilation.
29. Have you adjusted your customary volume control settings to allow for the increased sound absorption of heavier clothing worn by patrons at this time of year?
30. If your equipment is such that lamphouse and projector optical centers can get out of alignment, have you set up a regular schedule for checking them in this respect?
31. Have you set up a regular schedule for periodic check-up of change-over mechanisms, hand and motor-driven rewinders, splicers, and other auxiliary items?

Successful Chain Selects Heywood-Wakefield Comfort For New DEKALB

YES, THERE'S plenty of successful experience back of this newest (and twelfth) unit of the expanding Anderson Theatre Corporation. And a nation-wide record of experience proves that Heywood-Wakefield seating is a dependable aid to profitable operation. First, because comfort is designed into every line and detail. Second, because time-tested construction methods, and the use of special quality steels for coil springs, standards, seat and back-pans assure the kind of durability that keeps maintenance costs consistently low.

See for yourself how the handsome appearance and downright comfort of Heywood-Wakefield seating can make patrons want to come back—and learn at first hand the many money-saving advantages of Heywood-Wakefield construction features. Call your nearest Heywood-Wakefield distributor or one of our sales offices in Baltimore, Boston, Chicago or New York.

"Heywood-Wakefield chairs," says A. J. Claesson, of Anderson Theatre Corporation, "make life easier for an interior decorator in two important ways. Their good looks harmonize with decorating plans—and their proved comfort helps assure continuing patronage."

Unique Design Sells Theatre Tickets

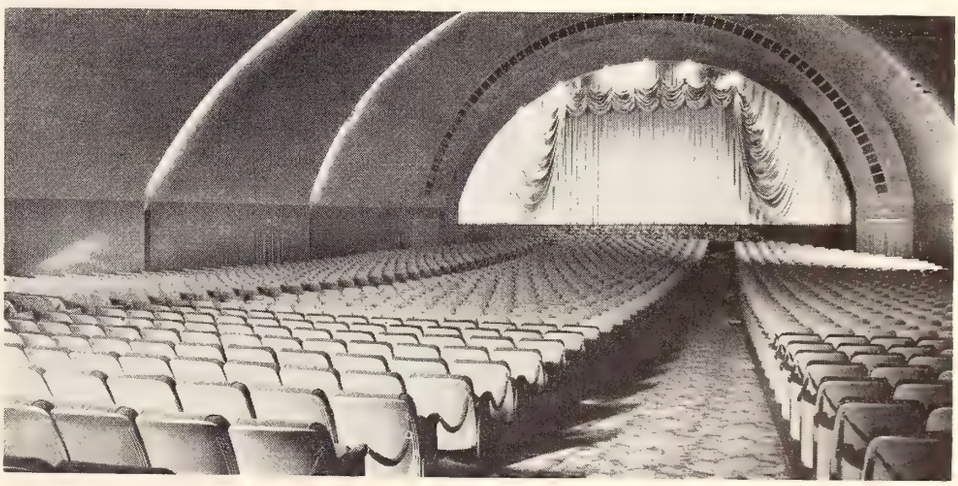
Two months after the opening of the new Baldwin Theatre on South LaBrea Avenue in Los Angeles people are still coming from as far away as Alaska to look at it, Manager Burt Jones reveals, while word-of-mouth advertising of its exceptionally clear sound, comfort and beauty builds repeat business.

Elderly patrons, especially, exclaim to Manager Jones about the clarity of the acoustics, and state that they have never before been able to hear a picture completely. Architects, builders and exhibitors have constituted a temporary substantial patronage, often paying their way in see if the Baldwin Theatre is as exceptional inside as out. The 1,000-car parking lot (for a theatre seating 1,800) also draws patronage, Manager Jones believes. For his own part, he stresses service to patrons to keep the business the theatre attracts, and thus to convert it into a steady clien-

The unusual oval-arch, laminated-wood construction of the Baldwin, and its novel design features, provide an important cost advantage in addition to their eye appeal, their contribution to sound quality and—as will be noted later—better ventilation.

Cost Only $150.00 Per Seat

They have reduced the theatre's first cost by a significant percentage. Current theatre construction in the Los Angeles area runs from $200 to $250 per seat, according to figures cited by "Southwest Builder and Contractor" magazine on July 22. The Baldwin, opened September 9th, was erected at a cost of only $150 per seat. Furnishings and equipment came to an additional $42 per seat for a total cost of $192 in all exclusive of real estate.



Architect Lewis E. Wilson of Los Angeles attributes this low cost primarily to the arch type construction which minimizes the quantity of material needed to wall and roof the theatre area; and secondly to the peculiar and varying shape of the nine arches. His method of procedure was first to lay down the ideal seating plan; and then plan an oval or elliptical arch to cover only as much cubic capacity as needed at that particular part of the theatre. Thus the arches are higher and narrower—more nearly circular—in the vicinity of the screen, and wider and flatter toward the rear of the theatre.

Arches Replace Facade

There is no facade at all in the conventional sense. To provide an eye-catching entrance way, and a structure to support the name sign, attraction boards and marquee, two broad, low arches of laminated wood timbers were built across the whole front of the theatre and linked to it with wooden side and roof lattice-work. In the outdoor lobby thus created a garden atmosphere is maintained by living plants, including palms growing through the overhead openings. This note is repeated by potted, live trees and shrubs inside the carpeted foyer, which is separated from the lobby-garden only by walls and doors of clear glass. Completely opaque plastic doors separate the foyer from the auditorium. Men's and women's rooms open off one end of the foyer, on the same level.

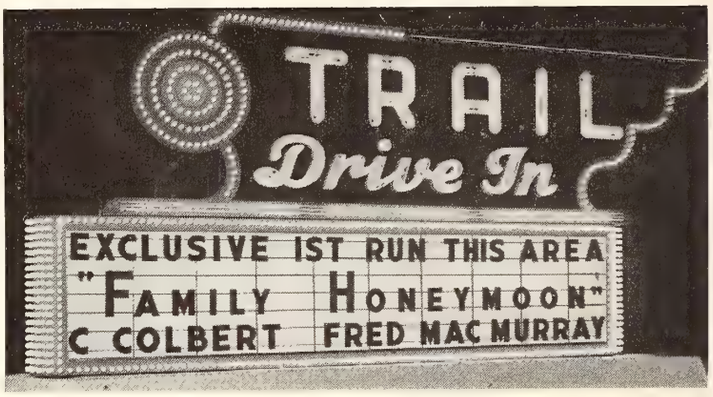
Theatre (top of page) is built of arches of varying size and curvature. Other arches linked to theatre proper by lattice-work form the "facade." Foyer is separated from outdoor lobby by glass only. Auditorium has exceptional acoustics and ventilation, unusually broad aisles, chairs 36" wide.

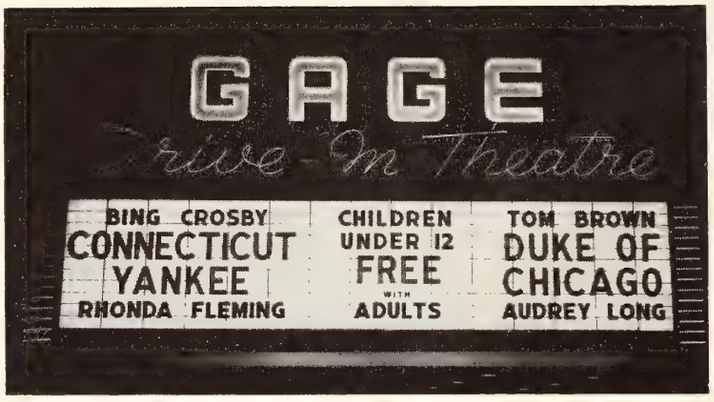
Drive-In Signs Planned for Fast Reading

Need for Greater Visual Range Increases Demand for Towering Displays and Changeable Letters

He who rides must read (and hasn't much time to do it) when the drive-in theatre advertises to passing motorists. Here pictured are three late 1949 examples of drive-in exploitation designed to catch the eye, and complete delivery of the message, all in a very few seconds.



It will be noted that the name signs are not only large, but also designed to be grasped at a glance and remembered afterward.



Changeable letters advertising the current program are, in the first place, large. Two of the three attraction boards here pictured present letters up to 17 inches in height, the largest made today. Additionally, color is used lavishly in these letters to break up the message in such way as to convey every part of it separately and without confusion while the eye passes once across the attraction board. Red, blue, black and green plastic and opaque letters are used in these signs.

Make the Billing Big

So far as the driver of the passing car is concerned, the only time he has to receive the theatre's message is when he takes his eyes off the road, and how long he is willing to do that will depend on traffic; so far as other occupants of the car are concerned it is all a matter of where they are seated with reference to the car's windows and the location of the theatre signs. In every case both name sign and program advertising must be planned for extremely rapid reading and the easiest possible remembrance.
